Africa is a menagerie 11,500,000 miles in area, with the greatest combination of lakes, rivers, mountains and veld imaginable, a veritable paradise for wild animals. Notwithstanding the destruction of big game, there are still thousands of herds of everything Africa possesses for the hunter, roaming over the veld only a few days' travel afoot from the coast. There are hundreds of rivers that have rarely been visited by the white man. On the banks of these streams hippopotami, rhinoceroses, elephants, leopards, lions, gorillas and dozens of varieties of antelope, the names of which have never been heard by the majority of Europeans or Americans, gambol and fatten in gluttonous plenitude undisturbed by the crack of the 600 caliber express. It is only in reachable districts that the game is killed to any great extent. The cost and danger of hunting in most of the country have protected it and will protect it for many years to come.

Frightful Diseases of the Jungle.

Where game is most abundant the frightful diseases that nature seems to have placed as a barrier against the white man's invasion are also abundant. In Africa's wild, beautiful, mysterious forests, more to be feared than all the lions and rhinos, lurk the germs of the deadly blackwater fever, malaria, science-defying sleeping sickness and the unknown reason for the veld sores that drain one's life out in a few months. These, with the miasmal swamps, the noxious insects, the slimy, poisonous spears of the natives, make hunting in Africa no game for the chicken-hearted.

Of course, hunting as a business is one thing and hunting for pleasure is another. It is possible to kill African game to a limited extent without the slightest hardship. One can go on safari accompanied by natives who do all the work, even to carrying the sportsman in a hammock up to the game, selecting the correct rifle, loading with the proper ammunition, pointing out the place to shoot at and handing the hunter the weapon. The hunter merely pulls the trigger, after seeing that there are a number of shikarees (native hunters) in readiness to protect him should he miss his mark and the game charge. As often as not he misses, a shikaree shoots the game, and his employer gets the credit. It is the dangerous side only of African hunting that has any attractions for the man with any sporting instincts in him, and it is only that side of the hunt that is of interest to the laity.

According to present intentions, Mr. Cunninghame will take the Roosevelt party over the route I have covered twice, the last time very recently. What I have passed through Roosevelt must face. He will be lucky if he comes out alive.

Like most Boers, I have been hunting, on and off, and associating with hunters since I was ten years old. Danger and hairbreadth escapes have happened so frequently to me that most of my hunting experiences appear almost too commonplace to record. Yet some of them stand out vividly from the rest, especially those of recent occurrence. It would be impossible to hunt any length of time in Africa without having some adventures worth relating; adventures in which a steady eye, nerves of steel, and a brain as quick as lightning are life-saving essentials to a big game hunter.

Most game drops at the first shot from the rifle of an experienced hunter. "The game that makes the story is the game that's missed," as the Swahili (east coast natives) say, and there is nothing truer than that saying, as far as my experiences go, for a bad shot nearly ended my trek a little while ago in the Lake country. I was treking between Lake Albert Edward N'Yanza and Lake Kivu, the greatest stretch of hunting ground in the world, with a caravan of a hundred men. We had marched steadily through the early part of the day and, now that the merciless white-hot sun was directly overhead, I called a halt. Each member of the caravan threw himself down in the shade excepting my shikaree Nick, a "boy" from the other side of the continent, a native of Senegal. He never rested, and as he got a percentage of the ivory we secured, he never let the soles of his feet grow soft for want of exercise. About an hour passed before Nick came swinging into camp with his white teeth gleaming like new swords. I knew by his smile that there was something afoot. He walked straight to my elephant guns and beckoned me. I knew he had struck a fresh spoor (trail). Seizing my arms, I signaled my gun bearer and struck out, Nick leading.

If there are any elephants about at midday, the hunter is pretty sure to make a good bag, for at that time they rest out of the direct rays of the sun, dozing the hot hours away, and are easily approached.

A Terrible Battle with Elephants.

After half an hour's walk through grass that was at least 20 feet high, we came across a herd of about twenty elephants, among which there were some fine bull tuskers. As I expected, they were all resting out of the sun. They were difficult to get at on account of the thickness of the undergrowth. It meant a long, patient crawl to a good shooting position, for to shoot at anything but close quarters in such country meant that the bullet would be deflected by the bush. I put a solid nickel ball in the right barrel of my 600 caliber express for a head shot, and a soft nose split in the left barrel for a body shot. With the shikaree at my side and the gun bearer at my back, we crept silently, inch by inch, foot by foot, through the huge tufts of grass till a good view of the game presented itself.

I took off my coat and hat, hung them on a low limb and crawled a few yards farther on. As I could not get a vital shot at any of the elephants in their lying position, I gave a sharp whistle. In an instant they were upon their feet thrusting their trunks up in the air to get a scent of their enemies and holding out their enormous ears to catch the slightest sound. At last an old bull worked into the right position. I aimed at his weakest point, between the eye and ear, and gave him the solid shot. My aim was bad; a piece of his tusk flew into the air. With a roar he charged down on me like an avalanche.

I leveled my express for a second shot and the natives stood ready. Down he came, the grass waving before him in billows. I waited 50, 40, 30, 20 yards, another second's suspense and—bang! I gave him the soft bullet full in the chest. It failed to stop him. A screeching roar of pain burst from the charging monster and blood gushed from his trunk. I snatched my Mauser and jumped aside as he passed. My hat and coat, which were a few yards behind, attracted his attention. With a snort of satisfaction he crushed them down. I gave him all my Mauser shots in the rear. With extraordinary suddenness he turned. He sighted me and charged, his tusks level with his body. My magazine was empty. I threw my rifle down and ran, the elephant gaining on me at each step. I saw Nick ahead of me with leveled rifle.

To keep running meant that I would soon be overtaken. Instinctively I threw myself on the ground and Nick fired. With a thud that made the earth tremble the elephant dropped. The huge trunk twisted like a wounded snake for a moment, and then the gigantic body relaxed in death. It all took about two minutes to happen and was a pretty close shave, but it was worth the trouble, for the tusks we got were big, weighing close to a hundred pounds.

The Killing of Nick, Hunter Boy.

A few months after this occurrence, on the same trip, I lost Nick, my Senegal "boy," under terrible circumstances. This brave man who had hunted everything in Africa from the Cape to Cairo, and from Zanzibar to Banana, boasted many a time that he would never be killed by anything but old age. But he was too sure. Long association with danger had made him careless, and this cost him his life.

We were treking south toward Lake Tanganyika along a native path running parallel with the Rusisi river. It was frightfully hot, so hot that the gun barrels burned our hands. The porters staggered under their heavy loads in a long string, mumbling songs, each in his native tongue, to keep up his fagged spirits, and the sun rays danced in misty vibrations from the parched earth. Suddenly the jungle ceased and we broke into the open veld. Four hundred yards away, coming in the opposite direction, was a herd of at least twenty elephants. They had evidently made a long journey and were suffering from the intense heat. Some of them were occupied in thrusting their trunks into their mouths and drawing water from their stomachs. With this water they were sprinkling their sunburned backs. This is a habit that elephants always practice when they are overheated and cannot find the shade of a friendly forest.

To me the sight of the approaching herd was welcome. I saw ivory which meant thousands of dollars to us if we could get in a few good shots. I ordered my caravan back into the undergrowth, and, bringing up the shikarees, prepared for the slaughter. I loaded my nine millimeter Mauser with solid bullets for long shots. At 300 yards I opened fire and the leader, a fine bull, dropped in his tracks. The crack of my rifle threw the herd into consternation. They were not sure where the noise came from, and they as yet had not caught sight of us. After a little indecision they kept on the old route and marched toward us.

A hundred yards nearer and I gave the nearest, another bull, my second shot. It went wild. He shrieked and threw his trembling head back and forth frantic with pain. I had evidently given him a bad face wound. I fired again and must have missed. He saw me, and, trumpeting loudly, charged down on us, followed by the whole herd. I emptied my magazine into them with no effect. Nearer they came, their ivory gleaming in the sun and the dust curling up in clouds behind them. The ground vibrated like a beaten drum top under their thunderous charge.

I saw a tusk-crested wave of mammoths sweeping down to destroy us. It was no time for inaction. The gun bearer handed me the 600 caliber express. At a hundred yards I gave the leader one barrel after the other. He fell, and those behind tumbled over him in a heap. For a moment the mad charge was broken. I thought we were out of danger, but another leader forged ahead and bore down on us. "Run!" I shrieked, and every man made for safety, excepting Nick, the coolest in the face of danger and always the last to run. I threw myself behind a tree, just escaping being crushed to death. A screech rose above the thunder of the hoofs and the next instant I saw Nick hoisted into the air with a blood-stained tusk through his body. The infuriated mass swept past, leaving a red marked trail. I immediately set out on the spoor of the herd in hope of getting the body of the shikaree. Although I searched till sundown I was unsuccessful.

That night I heard the lions roaring down toward the river. The next morning, with a few natives, I continued the search, in the direction that the lions' roars came from during the night. We soon sighted a flock of vultures, a sure sign of dead game, and, coming up with them, we found the chewed carcass of an elephant and the scattered bones of a human being, among which I found Nick's hunting knife and belt. The wounded elephant had carried him on his tusk till it fell exhausted through loss of blood, and died. It was one of the best ivory hauls I ever made at one shooting and it was the saddest. Nick was a great shikaree. He possessed every attribute of manhood. He died like many a hunter has died.

Nick was the twentieth native that I have lost on my various expeditions. It was in the same country that on a previous expedition a rhinoceros invaded our camp and killed two native porters, wounding three and giving me a close call.

The Lure of Beauty

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Value of the Book of Judith.—The value of the Book of Judith is not lessened by the fact that it is supposed to be of a fictitious character. In fact that very fact increases its value as exhibiting an ideal type of heroism, which was outwardly embodied in the wars of independence. It cannot be wrong to refer its origin to the Maccabean period, which it reflects not only in its general spirit, but even in smaller traits. But while it seems certain that the date, to be referred to the second century B. C. (175-105 B. C.), the attempts which have been made to fix its date within narrower limits, either to the time of the war of Alexander Jannaeus (105-4 B. C.), or of Demetrius II. (129 B. C.), rest on very inaccurate data. It might seem more natural (as a mere conjecture), to refer it to an earlier time (170 B. C.), when Antiochus Epiphanes made his first assault upon the temple. In accordance with the views which have been given of the character and date of the book, it is probable that the several parts may have a distinct symbolic meaning.

SERMONETTE.

This Assyrian general, Holofernes, is not the first man who has forgotten manhood and duty in the presence of a pretty face and plunged to his ruin.

It was the lust of the man's heart which made him fall an easy prey to the trap which Judith had set for him.

He who allows base passion to fill the heart has begun the downward course which is certain to end in ruin if persisted in.

God has made the world beautiful; he hath molded the face and form divine and it was his purpose that such beauty should inspire lofty thought and ambition. Its contemplation should bring out the best in man. It should turn a man's thoughts toward the pure and good. But such cannot be where man permits the lower nature to transcend and rule the higher.

True chastity is not a mere outward conformity of life to the moral law. Jesus went deeper and said that a man must keep his heart pure. That the lust of the heart was as bad as the overt act. As this test marks the real state of a man, so it also sets the boundary line between the sin conceived and the sin committed.

It is the evil thought harbored which becomes the evil deed committed. James says: "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth the sin; and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Base thought cannot be harbored and not change and transform the life. A veneer of outward rectitude may fool the world, but the covered sins of the heart cannot be hid from God. Neither can they be kept from honeycombing the inner self until at last like a festering sore they break forth into full view.

"Unto the pure all things are pure."

The breaking down of the home life and the nation's life begins when unclean, impure thought finds lodgment in the heart and there takes root and grows to the full fruitage of an unclean life.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

THE STORY.

THE night was dark, and the way to the valley lay beside the sentries and the tents of the coarse, rough soldiers, but Judith feared not for had not the great general, Holofernes, given the strictest commands that her way should be safe whithersoever she went in and around the camp. And best of all was not there the comforting assurance in her own heart that the God of Israel was with her in the desperate undertaking upon which she had entered?

Two days before she had come into the camp of the Assyrians after departing from the city of Bethulia, and each night since then she had passed out of the camp in the dead of night to engage in prayer, as she told the great general.

All the camp had been stirred by her beauty when she had come thither, and, as she had come into the presence of Holofernes he had hastened to assure her of his favor, saying:

"Woman, be of good comfort, fear not in thine heart: For I never hurt any that was willing to serve Nabuchodonoser, the king of all the earth."

And he had kept his word thus far, thinking that she would fall inevitably into his power. And for two nights now she had passed safely out from the camp into the valley.

Judith lifted her eyes to heaven as she and her maid reached a secluded nook far down the valley, and her lips moved in prayer, as she besought God to direct her way to the deliverance of her people.

"We cannot, we must not, fail!" she exclaimed, turning to her maid. "Little did Holofernes think when I talked with him that I was pleading for my people and not for him. Yea, I did tell him the truth when I said that our nation shall not be punished, neither can sword prevail against them, except they sin against their God. And even now our city is sitting in sackcloth and ashes and praying unto God for deliverance which with his help I will bring to pass."

"It is even so as thou dost say," responded the maid, fervidly. "But if thou couldest see the devouring eye with which Holofernes beholdeth thee thou wouldst know that he purposeth no good for thee."

"Yea, that which thou speakest is no doubt true, and it is therein that we must hope that God will send deliverance. For the baseness of the man proves his very weakness and gives me the cause I seek against him."

"And may the Lord keep thee in the midst of such peril," responded the maid. "Come," she added, "it is well that we return."

In the fourth day Holofernes made a feast to his own servants only and called none of the officers to the banquet, saying to Bagoas, the eunuch, who had charge over all that he had:

"Go now, and persuade this Hebrew woman which is here with us in the camp that she come unto us, and eat and drink with us. For if we win her not to ourselves, she will laugh us to scorn."

Then Bagoas went from the presence of Holofernes and came to Judith and said:

"Let not this fair damsel fear to come to my Lord, and to be honored in his presence and drink wine, and be merry with us at the feast."

Judith sat silent for a moment, but thought within her heart: "Is this not the fourth day, and was not the deliverance which I was to work to come ere the fifth had gone. Yet, the Lord is with me to deliver, and this now is the opportunity I seek." Thus Judith mused, and then lifting her face, upon which a beautiful light glowed the very reflection of the hope which burned within her breast, she said to the eunuch:

"Who am I now, that I should gainsay my Lord? Surely whatsoever pleaseth him I will do speedily, and it shall be my joy unto the day of my death."

So she arose, and decked herself with her apparel, and all her rare jewels, and her maid went and laid soft skins on the ground for her over against Holofernes sat at the festive board. Now when Judith came in and sat down the heart of Holofernes was ravished with her.

"Drink now," he besought her, "and be merry with us at this feast in thy honor."

"I will drink now, my lord, because my life is magnified in me this day more than all the days since I was born," responded Judith, with a gracious bow, as she sank upon the soft skins at her feet.

Then she took and ate and drank before him what her maid had prepared, and Holofernes' heart was merry and he drank much more wine than he had drunk at any time in one day since he was born. So it continued until evening was come, and his servants made haste to depart, and Bagoas shut his tent without, and dismissed the waiters from the presence of his lord. And they went to their tent, for they were all weary because the feast had been long. And Judith was left alone in the tent, but Holofernes was sunken upon his couch in a drunken sleep.

Now Judith had commanded her maid to stand without her bedchamber and to wait for her coming forth, as she had done every night since coming into the camp of the Assyrians, and with which nightly excursion without the camp the sentinels of the army had become familiar. And to Bagoas also she spake concerning the matter, telling him that this night as upon other occasions she would want to go out and seek her God in prayer. And Bagoas marveled, but said nothing.

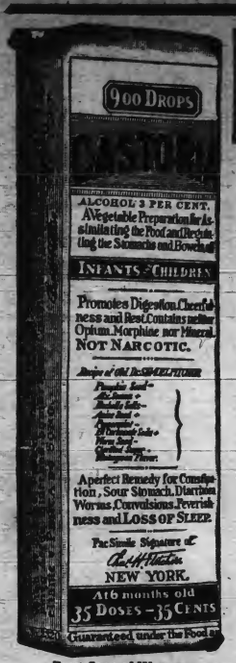
So it was before the appointed time for her setting forth, and all was still in the tent of Holofernes. And Judith came softly and stood by the place where Holofernes lay in his drunken sleep, and lifting her eyes to heaven she breathed this prayer:

"O Lord God of all power, look at this present upon the work of mine hands for the exaltation of Jerusalem; for now is the time to help thine inheritance, and to execute mine enterprises to the destruction of the enemies which are risen against us."

Then reaching up she took from the wall of the tent the great sword of Holofernes, and then again lifting her heart in prayer she cried:

"Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, this day."

And with the words she smote mightily, being strengthened by God, and she took away the head of Holofernes, and going forth she gave it to her maid, who was in waiting, and she put it in a bag. Thus they set forth through the camp as had been their wont on other nights, and no thought was given concerning the matter by the guards.



So they passed on their journey and encompassed the valley and went on up the mountain to the gates of Bethulia.

Sees Final Victory Over Tuberculosis.

Dr. William Osler says: "Whether tuberculosis will be finally eradicated is an open question. It is a foe that is very deeply intrenched in the human race. Very hard it will be to eradicate completely, but when we think of what has been done in one generation, how the mortality in many places has been reduced more than 50 per cent.—indeed, in some places 100 per cent.—it is a battle of hope, and so long as we are fighting with hope, the victory is in sight."

Oil Lamps Brighter Than Electric Light.

Probably one of the most wonderful as well as useful of modern inventions is that of a New York scientist who has just secured from the Government protection on a lamp burner, which by converting the oil into hydro-carbon gas, burning on a mantle, gives an eighty candle power light with less oil consumption and without carbonizing the mantle or overheating the lamp. It can be fitted to any lamp and the wick lasts a lifetime. There is absolutely no danger, no odor and no smoke. The Union Light Co., of New York City, have acquired the selling rights of this burner, which is called the "Herzog," after the inventor, and, we understand, are making a special discount to introduce it into each township with a view of securing a local representative.

In a speech made in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas in December last, Hon. William Jennings Bryan said—

"The trip through your fertile valley has been a succession of surprises to me and the only fault I can find is that I was not told the whole truth. The development surpasses the reports which I had heard. I am pleased with the soil and the climate, and besides having natural advantages you have the advantage of irrigation.

"You are creating wealth and what you make you are entitled to. You are earning legitimate fortunes."

Yes and liberal fortunes too, for money is made quickly and easily in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas. Profits of from $300 to $1000 an acre are the rule, not the exception.

Why don't you do the same—you don't need much capital. You can buy the few acres you need on easy terms and the first crop, if properly cared for, should more than pay for the land.

O. Riggs, Mercedes, Texas, bought ten acres last fall. Including clearing, plowing, etc., it cost $2040. He has shipped enough beans from the land to pay for it in less than six months and can raise another crop before the year is out.

Very low excursion fares via Rock Island-Frisco Lines twice a month. It will pay you to see for yourself.

Write today for full information about big profits growers are making in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas, and a set of colored post cards of Texas Gulf Coast Scenes.

DENTISTRY—I have opened a dental office in the Equitable Bank building at Walton, and will be there Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, prepared to do all kinds of dental work in a satisfactory manner. I will be at Verona on Monday, and at Crittenden on Tuesday.

HARRY HAMILTON, D. D.

Rev. James W. Rogers spent last Sunday at the Mt. Lystra Christian church, Grant county, where a Sunday School Convention was held and was largely attended. Bro. Rogers made a fine address to the large assemblage of people, and he states it was a most enjoyable gathering. A fine basket dinner was enjoyed and much good was accomplished in the Sunday School work by the excellent teachings and the good fellowship of mingling together.

The good people of Walton enjoyed the delightful pleasure of hearing Col. Geo. W. Bain in his lecture, "The Searchlight of the Tweentieth Century," at the school chapel last Thursday evening, and everybody enjoyed the beautiful word-painting and reasoning from the time Col. Bain began to speak until the close of the lecture, lasting about one and a half hours. Col. Bain is entitled to the reputation of being the silver tongued orator of Kentucky, and on this occasion sustained the expectation of the select audience that heard him, and gave the meed of praise to which he was justly entitled. While here Col. Bain was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Vest.

The general impression is that the matter of erecting lightning rods on buildings for their protection has become obsolete as the rods have no efficacy as a protective agent, but there is one man who believes lightning rods are a good thing, and that gentleman is Jos. C. Hughes, of Richwood, who, last week, arranged with S. L. Edwards, of Walton, to put lightning rods on his buildings at Richwood, as there have been so many serious results from the lightning striking buildings that Mr. Hughes intends to avail himself of whatever efficiency the lightning rod possesses. Mr. Edwards is an old time lightning rod agent and sold enough lightning rods in his time to rod half the State of Kentucky, and he asserts that they are splendid protection.

The town council of Walton had a meeting Wednesday night to again discuss the question of the improvement of the streets of Walton, and the levying of an additional tax for the purpose of bearing the expense of said improvement; and after a full discussion the previous action to make the levy was reconsidered by the town council and it was decided not to make the levy because of the additional tax involved, considering that an additional levy had to be made for school taxes, and the public feeling that any additional tax at this time would be difficu't to bear. The improvement of the streets would have been of a great advantage and would have added much to the appearance and comfort of the town and was warmly supported by a large number of the heaviest tax payers, but the council felt it should be deferred, the vote standing three to two.

Tuesday, June 8, the Rt. Rev. Camillas P. Maes, Bishop of the Catholic Church of the Covington diocese, administered the sacrament of confirmation to a class of 28 at Verona Catholic church, the children being as follows: Joseph McCormick, Rose Maylor, Mary Maylor, John Ryan, Lawrence Ryan, Charles Farrell, Thomas Allen, Joseph Stapleton, Joseph Allen, Thomas Ryan, Martin Code, Patrick Ryan, George Madden, Jeremiah Dempsey, Agnes Hayley, Agnes Ryan, Mary Murphy, Anna Murphy, Joseph Stapleton, Eleanor Dempsey, Ida Baily, Russell Ryan, Martin Allen, Alice McCabe, Hazel Grant, Mary Grant, Catharine Maylor, George Grant. The administration of the great sacrament of confirmation was witnessed by Rev. James L. Gorey, secretary to Bishop Maes; Rev. Bernard Greifeekamp, the beloved pastor of the new St. Bernard church at Dayton, Ky.; Rev. Joseph Broerman, of the churches of Warsaw and Verona; all of the members of St. Patrick's congregation, together with their nmmerous non-Catholic friends. The Roman Catholics will in the near future adorn their already beautiful cemeteries, and by this action proving that though, perhaps, in the past seed of discord may have been sown, yet now it is rooted up and the aroma of harmony prevails.

XXX

The delivery of the pooled wool of Kenton county to be made here June 8th and 9th was attended by some annoying details that caused the postponement of the final delivery until June 17th. The wool was bought by the Huntington Produce and Feed Co., of Huntington, West Va., at 34½ cents per pound. On the day appointed for the delivery the purchasers offered to deposit a check for $5,000 on the bank of Crestboro, Ky., and a draft for $8,000 on the First National Bank of Burnside, Ky., with our banks here and wanted to check on this account at once. This the local banks declined to let the parties do as it was not in the line with their business methods, and suggested to have the foreign banks wire a deposit to cover the amounts to some Cincinnati bank, which the purchasers objected to doing. Considerable wool had been sorted and put together and for this amount the purchasers issued checks on the Deposit Bank at Worthville, Ky., the checks aggregating $1,609.14. These checks Joseph Kaub took to Worthville, Wednesday night, and presented them for credit early Thursday morning, getting a duplicate deposit ticket, and then coming back deposited the amount by check in the Equitable Bank and Trust Co., to check out to the respective parties. The banks regretted the annoyance to the wool growers but as the interests of the depositors and stockholders must be safeguarded they would not take the risk of paying money out on a check on an obscure country bank, when the customary way is to give the bank paying money out in this manner a Cincinnati or New York draft for the amount desired.

IDLEWILD.

June 18.—Grief hallows hearts even while it ages heads.

We improve our own condition and increase our happiness by helping others.

The business men of Pushburg will meet in the future and organize a business men's club.

John and Sam Barnes have the nicest and largest tobacco of any in in this neck of the woods.

About 400 clambs were taken from this neighborhood the first of the week by Kreitzer and Vess Gaines.

Geo. Bachelor and wife, of Lawrenceburg, were guests, Tuesday and Wednesday, of brother-in-law Cecil Burns and wife.

Miss Pearl McGuire, of Grandview, is visiting her brothers, Robert and Orel, of Ashby and Idlewild, since Tuesday.

As Miss Oma Hankins returned from Sunday's dining at J. T. Gaines' she stopped and spent the night with Miss Carrie Graves.

Mrs. W. R. Kirtley and daughter Ruth, of Lawrenceburg, were Saturday night and Sunday guests of Clay Duncan and wife, of Pushburg.

A star mail route has been established from Constance to Taylorsport. Loniaker brought out the mail yesterday a few days since.

If you have no hogs to feed your potato parings to, don't waste them. Dry them in the sun for fire kindling. They are splendid for that.

Miss Bernice Duncan, Librarian of Union University, Jackson, Penn., is visiting home folks, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Duncan, and other relatives.

Mrs. Ed Loniaker, of Bullittsville, visited home folks in Indiana Saturday and Sunday and on her return brought one of her sisters with her.

The owner of the case and glasses we advertised has been found. An ad inserted in Idlewild items brings quick results, because everybody reads Idlewild.

Mrs. McIntosh, who has been sick for two or three weeks, has been much worse the last few days. The doctor has made her two visits a day for the last two or three days.

The news of the death of Oscar Gaines, Sunday morning, was a surprise and shock to this community. We extend to the family and that of Geo. Kreylelch our sympathy in their great bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. Selkman, of Taylorsport, were down to their daughter's, Mrs. Luther Scothorn, of Idlewild, visiting and trading. They always stop for a few minutes' chat—clever, s clable people are they.

Three of Rev. Jones' children are visiting their grandparents Willis, since Saturday. Rev. Jones had business in Cincinnati and brought the children with him. Mr. Willis met them there, having been previously notified.

Geo. Pfalzgraf, of Idlewild, has something the matter with one of his ankles. Some spavin or ring bone perhaps. He has not been able to shoe horses for three weeks or more, which has caused considerable shoeing to go to Bullittsville.

C. T. Davis and wife, J. C. Hankins and wife, Miss Carrie Graves, Miss Oma Hankins, Joel C. Clore, Mrs. Belle Clore and Miss Ida Berkshire, were guests of J. T. Gaines and wife, of Idlewild, last Sunday. Mr. Hankins reported a pleasant time. Mr. and Mrs. Gaines are pleasant entertainers.

Mrs. A. J. Ogden and Etta Day, of Sand Run, sisters of James Day, were visiting his wife Wednesday, Mr. Day being away from home. As they passed through they made themselves known—knew me by knowing that I kept gate here. This is the first time we ever met yet we are not strangers, know of eachother through others. Very pleasant ladies.

We suggested to a prominent member of the Bullittsville church that he circulate a subscription paper for donations to purchase a good bell for the church. "You are the man to do it. Draw up a paper and circulate it and put me down for one dollar," said he. Now, good people think the matter over and be ready to donate liberally. There is no reason why country churches should not have bells.

A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheny, Wash. was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough, its supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, Ky.

A fine band of music has been engaged and a large platform will be erected for dancing. Games for old and young and attractions of all kinds will be had. The inner man will be well provided for. The ladies of the church extend to all a hearty welcome.

HATHAWAY.

June 21.—Fine growing weather.

More work than farmers can do now.

The alfalfa crop was harvested last week between showers.

The spring school closed Friday with a spelling bee that night.

Ernest McNeely and Miss Mabel McNeely, of Gallatin county, came up Friday to visit his parents.

Mr. Editor, fried chicken, one of the delicacies of the season graced our tables some two weeks ago.

Will Turley and wife, of Gallatin county, were the guests of J. D. McNeely and family Saturday and Saturday night.

The potato crop in this neck o'woods is almost a total failure except some few small patches which are very lush.

Charles Briggs and a colored man, both employed by R L. Huey, fell out while milking one evening last week, and Briggs smashed the colored man in the face with a rock, and he came very nearly bleeding to death before a doctor could reach him and stop the blood.

G. L. Smith and wife and Mrs. Cynthia Mason entertained the following guests at their home near here last Friday: Rev. William McMillan and wife and three sons; John H. Mason and wife, Mrs. Kate Huey and three daughters, Mrs. James Mary Stephens, Mrs. Connie Rouse, Mrs. Cynthia White and two daughters, and Mr. J. P. Johnson, of Landing. All spent a very pleasant day.

ERLANGER.

Little Sylvester Clements is ill.

Rev. Elmer Lucas was married Tuesday.

Mrs. W. Rouse is out after a few days' illness.

Mrs. Sam Hensly and granddaughter, Miss Iva Lou Nichols, left last Wednesday for Louisville, to attend the bedside of another granddaughter who was to undergo a serious operation that day.

Esquire Solon Early and sister, Miss Corda, returned home from near South Bend, Indiana, last week. Mr. Early went to South Bend, hoping to regain his health, but we are sorry to report his health still very poor.

The Epworth League will give a festival in the school house yard on Saturday afternoon and evening, July 3. Icecream, cake, sherbet and other refreshments will be served, and all kinds of amusements will be given. Save up the pennies, the nickels and the dimes, and be sure to come to Petersburg July 3.

The Farmers Bank of Petersburg held its annual election, Saturday, June 12th, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: E. T. Krutz, president; J. H. Stevens, vice-president; J. M. Grant, secretary; Hubert Walton, cashier; Wm. Stephens, E. A. Grant, John Smith, N. S. Walton, F. D. Smith, H. E. Arnold, Bernard Rogers and Charlie Stephens, directors.

Some of the High School pupils gave a picnic, last Wednesday, at Split Rock. The Pauline was chartered and a considerable crowd went down, and enjoyed boating, fishing and other amusements. A splendid dinner was enjoyed. While the people were out of sight of their baskets several table-cloths and other articles were stolen. Nevertheless all reported a good time upon the return home.

A most successful school year closed here last Friday, June 11th. The commencement exercises began on Saturday evening, June 12th, when Rev. Milo Atkinson, pastor of the First Cristian Church, Covington, delivered a very interesting bacalaureate address to the graduates at the Church. The exercises were continued Monday evening at Krutz's Hall. The music by the Aurora Orchestra consisted of nine splendid pieces, each of which was most beautifully rendered. Rev. R. H. Carter lead in prayer, and Mr. W. T. Stott gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on education. He laid speical stress on the need of cooperation of teachers and parents and of better equipment, and strongly urged parents to willingly meet this demand. Special mention is deserving of the well prepared essays which contained so much thought for fruitful consideration. The following theses were given: "Gathering Shells by the Sea Shore," by Miss Nora McWethy; "Aid Me to Climb those Rugged Heights," by Miss Henrietta Geisler; "Let Us Pass Over the River and Rest Neath the Shade of the Trees," by Miss Lelia Thompson and "I Wonder When Silent and Dim is the Night," by Miss Nelle McWethy. Miss Nelle's oration powers are excellent, and at the close of her oration she paid a splendid tribute to her teacher, Prof. Willis Tandy, for his untiring efforts in aiding the members of the class in their work during their last year in the school. The class address was by Rev. Atkinson and was truly splendid and instructive. After the presentation of the diplomas, Prof. Tandy gave a short address, and earnestly thanked the parents and board of trustees for their hearty cooperation during his stay here. Miss Margaret Whitehead, the assistant teacher, recited the beautiful poem, "The Blue and the Gray," with a chorus and a flag exercise by four girls, the Misses Maud and Lula Mullen and Beulah and Mellicent Berkshire. The ushers, Misses Amy Gordon, Beulah Ruth, Leola Hensly and Maretta Stephens, sang quite a pretty little song, "Day Dreams." The graduates sang beautifully, "I Wonder When Silent and Dim is the Night." The class colors were black and white, and the hall was profusely decorated with streamers of paper, ferns and flowers. Going upon the stage the graduates passed through a gate formed of honeysuckle, and bearing the class motto, "Ne Dum Quis" at the top among the flowers. The graduates were enthusiastically greeted, and received the best wishes of all their friends and a great many beautiful presents, after which Rev. Bradley pronounced the benediction.

LEGAL STATUS OF THE SCREAM.

In obtaining a legal determination of the value of a scream, Miss Grace Reals of Chicago has performed a distinguished service for her sex. Miss Reals, who is an actress, sued a druggist for injury to her vocal chords, alleged to have been caused through a mistake in filling a prescription, and has been awarded $5,000, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. The jury was told that in emotional roles, when the villain became perniciously active, Miss Reals had to engage another woman to do the screaming for her. The jury agreed that a screamless actress is sadly handicapped in her art, but its verdict should afford protection to women other than those who follow the profession of the stage. No woman can go safely and happily through life without a scream. From mice to burglars, there is a broad variety of emergencies, each requiring its owns scream of peculiar intensity. There are married men of long experience who claim to be able to tell from the tone of a scream whether there is a mouse in the refrigerator or little Johnny has tumbled into the well. The occupants of a Kansas City flat building were saved from a horrible death by the scream of a woman, which summoned the fire department. Therefore, an impairment of her vocal chords which interferes with her natural screaming powers is easily worth $5,000. In fact, the Chicago druggist who is to pay that sum to Miss Reals may congratulate himself on getting off so lightly.

The speed test of the new scout-cruisers Chester, Salem and Birmingham resulted in conspicuous victory for the first-named, which in a 24-hour trip made an average of 25.50 knots per hour, her competitor, the Salem, reporting an average of 24.54. The officers of the Chester assert she could have done still better but for a slight fault in one of her turbines, which can be readily remedied, says the Troy Times. The Birmingham dropped out when the contest was half over, some impairment to the machinery rendering this necessary. But with thorough "tuning up" there seems to be no doubt that the three vessels will be valuable additions to ships of their class, the function of which will be to scour the sea and do it with alacrity.

The letting of the contract for constructing the railroad to run from Arica, Chile, to La Paz, Bolivia, is another striking indication of the progress made in uniting the three Americas. The new line, to cost $15,000,000, will cross the Andes mountains at a height of 12,000 feet above the level of the sea and is to be parf of the longitudinal system which is to traverse practically the entire length of Chile, 3,000 miles or more. And it will be an important link in that enormously greater system which in time will make it possible to travel by rail from the United States to the extreme of South America. The late Hinton Rowan Helper should have taken heart of grace, seeing how rapidly his idea was materializing.

The American army mule is a valuable and useful beast, as has often been demonstrated, and he is holding his own, with no kick coming. The government stands by him. Orders have just been issued that army officers going to and from San Francisco and the military reservation near that city must ride in conveyances drawn by army mules and not automobiles. The officers formed the automobile habit at the time of the earthquake and as a matter of emergency and necessity. But the government regards the good old reliable mule as quite adequate to ordinary conditions, and so the animal comes back to his former dignity.

Residents of New York city are asking why, in the face of the casualty records of last year, and the growing movement for a safe and sane Fourth of July, the fire commissioner of that city has issued fifteen hundred permits for the sale of fireworks. This is inconsistency worthy of note; although even in cases where cities have rigid ordinances against the use of fireworks within their limits, dealers may be permitted to sell fireworks to outsiders who are not wise enough to heed the lessons of experience. The way to prevent the abuse of the privileges is to limit the permit in these instances to wholesaling.

The Young Turks want the moral support of the United States. Turkey is certainly progressing when the country, or any part of it, comes to recognize the value of moral support and the inadequacy of periodical massacre and summary executions to bring about peace and harmony with popular support of the government.

The Japanese government, it is reported, has dropped the sugar scandal for fear of getting into a sweet mess.

HEAR GOULD VALET

MAN WHO WAS HER PRIVATE SERVANT TELLS OF DRINKING.

CALLS CHAUFFEUR "DEARIE"

Mistakes Auto Driver for Dustin Farnum and Then Apologizes—Witnesses Say the Actor Was Often with the Millionaire's Wife.

New York. — That Mrs. Howard Gould was often with Dustin

New York, June 19.—That Mrs. Howard Gould was often with Dustin Farnum, an actor, despite her testimony to the contrary, was shown by witnesses for the defense in the suit for separation and $200,000 allmony of the millionaire's wife.

There was also iteration by servants and personal attendants that Mrs. Gould was repeatedly seen under the influence of liquor by them, and that when she had been drinking, as they alleged on the stand, she changed from a charming, affable woman to a woman of whims and caprices, illtempered, not nice in her choice of language, overbearing and quarrelsome.

Her "Valet" on Stand.

Mrs. Gould's one-time personal "valet," Harry J. Veitch of Des Moines, Ia., swore that at one time he served his mistress with two quarts of Manhattan cocktails in as many days, besides the wines and liquors which he said she drank at table. On cross-examining these witnesses, Clarence J. Shearn for Mrs. Gould, strove always to prove either that they had a personal grudge against her or that they were under obligation to Mr. Gould. Endearing epithets twice marked the testimony.

John H. Kimball, an oil and paint dealer, who said he had known Mr. Gould for 18 years, testified that he went to a performance of "The Virginian" in August, 1906, with Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Sells and the Goulds, at the Academy of Music in this city, and that Dustin Farnum, the star in the play, joined the party outside the playhouse after the performance and spoke to Mrs. Gould. She smiled, the witness testified, and said to the witness: "This is my new beau."

John Flynn, who said he was employed by Mrs. Gould as a chauffeur, and that he often drove her to meet Farnum after the play, testified that once when Mrs. Gould was waiting in the automobile for Farnum at the Hotel Somerset, two men turned to the actor as he came out at the hotel door and asked him whose automobile was waiting.

"Oh," said Farnum, laughing, Flynn testified, "that is my new one."

Called Chauffeur "Dearie."

Another time, Flynn swore, when he rapped on Mrs. Gould's chamber door at the St. Regis, she called out: "All right, dearie," and then, when she saw who it was, excused herself with: "I thought it was Mr. Farnum."

Mary Elizabeth Harrison, a fresh cheeked, good looking girl, who said she was a floor clerk in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia, prefaced her testimony with the explanation that it was her first appearance in court. She had been impelled by her conscience, she said, to tell what she saw at the hotel. Finally she wrote a letter to Mr. Gould.

"I said in the letter," she testified, "'In obedience to the Golden Rule, I write to you to help you if you are in trouble,' or something like that."

Mrs. Gould occupied apartments on the floor where she was stationed in September, 1906, the witness went on, and one morning about 7:30 o'clock she said, she saw a man come out of Mrs. Gould's rooms and take the elevator. She noticed that he was the only passenger in the car, and that the dial registered fourteenth floor when the car stopped. She described the man as tall, with dark, bushy hair and wearing a soft hat and a long coat.

Big Turnfest at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati.—Some 5,000 Turners from all parts of the country went into camp here Saturday for the annual turnfest of their national organization, which will last ten days. The Turners must live and sleep in tents while here and the people of Cincinnati have erected a large tent city that accords with the rules and regulations of the United States army. It includes 50 shower baths and ample kitchen accommodations.

Taft Favors Trust Tax.

Washington.—If the recommendations embodied in a message sent to congress Wednesday by President Taft are carried out a tax of two per cent. on the undistributed net earnings of trusts and other corporations will be provided for in an amendment to the tariff bill and the income tax question will be left to the states for settlement. It is believed the senate will adopt the president's plan.

KILLS ILLINOIS PRIMARY LAW

SUPREME COURT DECLARES THE ACT IS INVALID.

Springfield, Ill. — The new primary election law of Illinois is unconstitutional according to an opinion of the supreme court. The decision is made in the case of the People on the relation of Phillips against Sheriff Strassheim of Cook county, in which Phillips was indicted on the charge of making false affidavits at a primary election and obtains a writ of habeas corpus in the state's highest tribunal.

The Supreme court holds that the primary law is unconstitutional because it requires in section 44 that no person except persons registered at the last previous election can vote at a primary election, yet makes no provision for the registration of voters, and because section 11 provides that the senatorial committees may by resolution decide how many candidates each party may nominate for the legislature and that only that number of candidates may be voted for thus depriving the voters of their constitutional right under the election law to vote for as many candidates as there are offices to be filled and to cumulate their votes. For these reasons the entire act is declared unconstitutional.

In the case of Peabody against Treasurer Thompson of Cook county, in which case the lower court sustained the demurrer to the petition of Peabody for a mandamus to restrain Thompson from paying the officers of the primary election, the Supreme court reverses the judgment of the Circuit court of Cook county and remands the case.

STRANGE CULT IN KANSAS.

Hitchinson, Kan.—Practicing rites, more weird than those of the most fanatical Moslem sects, and cruelty more revolting than the most savage of the religious tests of the early Indians, a cult has sprung up near Hutchinson that is being closely watched by the authorities.

The law is powerless to interfere until some member of the sect dies a victim to its barbaric practices. It has been found out that just as the ancient Indians plunged their arms into buckets of boiling pitch to ascertain whether they were immune to pain so it is claimed that Snake Worshipers subject themselves to the bites of poisonous reptiles as a supreme test of grace.

MEAT PROBE IS BEGUN.

Government Board Sifts Former Inspector's Charges Against East St. Louis Packing Houses.

East St. Louis.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson's board of inquiry appointed to investigate the charges of J. F. Harms, a former inspector, that the government's inspection system in the packing houses here is faulty, held a closed session Thursday. Harms, after being denied an open investigation, withdrew from the room.

Illinois Convict on Way Back.

San Francisco.—Joseph Wright, who escaped almost a year ago from the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Chester, where he was serving a 14-year sentence for murder, was sent east in the custody of a deputy warden of that institution.

Mount Vernon, Ill.—As a result of a fight, William Armstrong died after being shot by John Imboden, who escaped. The shooting occurred at Rend City, a coal mining village.

GIRL SLAIN BY CHINESE.

Granddaughter of Gen. Franz Sigel Probable Victim in New York Murder Mystery.

New York.—Elizabeth Sigel, daughter of Paul Sigel of this city and granddaughter of the illustrious Franz Sigel, the German warrior, who enlisted his services with the union army during the civil war, is, according to all indication the victim of one of the most sordid murders in the history of New York.

If she is not the victim, the police are confronted with a remarkable series of coincidental facts. Taken from a trunk in a room of a Chinaman above a chop suey restaurant in the Tenderloin, the body, in a state of decomposition, which makes identification difficult, lies in the morgue while detectives are collecting the threads of a tangled story involving the girl and her associations with Chinese. An envelope addressed to the girl found in the room where the body lay, a locket bearing her initials, her disappearance on June 10 and a note found in the room, signed "Elsie" all seem to indicate that Franz Sigel's granddaughter was murdered. The body was partially stripped of its clothing, tied with ropes, wrapped in a faded blue blanket and crammed into a dilapidated old trunk.

HOG TUBERCULOSIS GROWS.

Two Per Cent. of Those Slaughtered Have the Disease Say Government Reports.

Washington. — Tuberculosis among hogs is on the increase and is causing heavier loss to raisers and packers than any other disease, say reports gathered from the various meat packing centers of the country by the department of agriculture.

A year ago there were more than 58,004,000 hogs in this country, valued at more than $339,000,000. Federal inspection of the abattoirs show two per cent. of the hogs slaughtered to be affected with tuberculosis, while reports from Europe show a far more widespread infection, running as high as 5.5 to 7.5 per cent.

It has been found that hogs contract the disease principally through feeding. Samples of raw skimmed milk fed to hogs from creameries in one of the leading dairy states were injected into guinea pigs and in one instance virulent bacilli were recovered. Hogs from Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas are remarkably free from tuberculosis, due to the fact that they are fed from birth to maturity on alfalfa, oats, corn, rape and peanuts.

INSTITUTE OF HOMEOPATHY

Detroit, Mich.—The sixty-fifth annual meeting of the American Institute of Homeopathy opened here Monday evening with a great general session that was full of interest. The big Y. M. C. A. auditorium was thronged with medical men from every state in the union when Dr. D. A. MacLachlan, chairman of the local committee of arrangements, rapped for order. Music and prayer were followed by addresses of welcome by Gov. Fred M. Warner, Mayor P. H. Breitmeyer and Dr. MacLachlan, to which response was made by Second Vice-President Joseph Hensley, M. D. Dr. William Davis Foster of Kansas City, the president, then delivered his annual address.

In the afternoon much preliminary work was disposed of and memorial exercises for deceased members were held.

Indian Lad Killed Four Relatives.

Salt Lake City.—Dan Tzo Ac, a 17-year-old Navajo Indian, pleaded guilty in the United States district court to the charge of murdering four of his relatives several months ago at Aneath, in a remote part of the state. He was sentenced by Judge Marshall to serve a term of ten years in the federal asylum prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and pay a fine of $100. The boy killed his aunt, uncle, sister and a cousin in resentment of a threat of the uncle to punish him for refusal to work.

WHY HE LIKED TIGHT SHOES

"We always wondered a little how Amos Dore and his wife got along—really," "Aunt Em" Macomber said, frankly. "Some in the neighborhood said they'd never overheard a single loud or cross word on either side, but Lije Daniels always stuck to it that Amos was as mis'able at home as a man could be.

"He never spoke right out till Amos died, and Mis' Dore went back upcountry to her folks. Then he let out."

"What?" queried Aunt Em's visitor.

"Well, Amos worked logging alongside of Lije every winter, and summers they haved together most always, and it seems," said Aunt Em, impressively, "that Amos complained of his shoes hurting him about all the time. Finally Lije asked why he wore tight shoes.

"'Well, I'll tell you,' Amos says. 'When I wear tight shoes I forget all my other troubles.'"—Youth's Companion.

SORE EYES CURED.

Eye-Balls and Lids Became Terribly Inflamed—Was Unable to Go About —All Other Treatments Failed, But

"About two years ago my eyes got in such a condition that I was unable to go about. They were terribly inflamed, both the balls and lids. I tried home remedies without relief. Then I decided to go to our family physician, but he didn't help them. Then I tried two more of our most prominent physicians, but my eyes grew continually worse. At this time a friend of mine advised me to try Cuticura Ointment, and after using it about one week my eyes were considerably improved, and in two weeks they were almost well. They have never given me any trouble since and I am now sixty-five years old. I shall always praise Cuticura. G. B. Halsey, Mouth of Wilson, Va., Apr. 4, 1908."

"What makes that peasant so proud to-day?"

"Oh, he has the biggest rooster in town—and his wife the biggest hat."—Fliegende Blaetter.

The Novel Type.

In a late magazine story a perfectly lovely girl is described as follows: "She was very small and dark, and very active, with hair like the color of night o'clock—daylight and darkness and lamplight all snared up together, and lips like all crude scarlet, and eyes as absurdly big and round as a child's good-by kiss."

How do you like it? Would a girl who answered that description be worth shucks in everyday experiences?—Atchison Globe.

Great Improvement.

"My dear sir," he said, "you must gradually give up whisky and soda."

Some months later he met the patient and inquired whether the advice had been followed.

"To the letter," replied the patient, beaming. "Why, I've already given up soda completely!"

WON'T MIX

Bad Food and Good Health Won't Mix.

"A year ago I became much alarmed about my health for I began to suffer after each meal no matter how little I ate," says a Denver woman.

"I lost my appetite and the very thought of food grew distasteful, with the result that I was not nourished and got weak and thin.

"My home cares were very heavy, for besides a large family of my own I have also to look out for my aged mother. There was no one to shoulder my household burdens, and come what might, I must bear them, and this thought nearly drove me frantic when I realized that my health was breaking down.

"I read an article in the paper about some one with trouble just like mine being cured on Grape-Nuts food and acting on this suggestion I gave Grape-Nuts a trial. The first dish of this delicious food proved that I had struck the right thing.

"My uncomfortable feelings in stomach and brain disappeared as if by magic and in an incredibly short space of time I was myself again. Since then I have gained 12 pounds in weight through a summer of hard work and realize I am a very different woman, all due to the splendid food, Grape-Nuts."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

WERE BOTH OF MIXED BLOOD

Points of Resemblance Between Englishman and Cowboy, as the Latter Understood It.

"The countess de Pourtales was a New York Lorillard," said a New York tobacconist. "So on both sides, of course, she has blue blood. Yet she is without false pride.

"At a recent tobacco men's convention a director told me of a remark the countess made in Biarritz to an arrogant Englishman.

"This fellow boasted of his ancestry. The countess said that sort of talk wouldn't be understood in the wild west. She said an Englishman said to a Texas cowboy once:

"'I have Tudor blood in my veins on the maternal side and through my father's family I am a Plantaganet.'

"'Is that so?' said the cowboy, brightening with keen interest. 'My blood's a leetle mixed, too. My grandfather was a Jersey tenderfoot and my grandmother a Digger Indian squaw. We're both half-breeds, stranger. Come and liquor up!'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tuberculosis Afflicts Japanese.

Consumption among Japanese laborers is increasing to such a degree that the figures are becoming a source of anxiety to Japanese merchants and officials. A large percentage of laborers who are sent back to Japan by the Japanese charity associations are consumptives. It is claimed by the Japanese newspapers comenting on this matter that through the lack of hospital accommodations in the Japanese labor camps tuberculosis increases at an alarming rate. They suggest that a new system be employed in dealing with the sick in these camps, as the Japanese are quite ignorant of even the most simple health safeguards.

Louisville, Ky.—A strange woman, heavily veiled and dressed in black, who baffled the detectives and agents of the postoffice department, under Inspector S. A. Susong, has at last been captured and a mystery has been unraveled here. For two or three months the most offensive character of filth and liquids had been poured into local mail boxes, necessitating in many cases the return of the mail. Joe Erb, one of the carriers, discovered the woman and gave a complete description to Inspector Susong, who placed her under arrest. She gave her name as Miss Frances Konz, of 908 West Jefferson street, 47 years old. She said that she had been instructed by the spirit of the late Fire Chief Edward Hughes to deface the United States mails. Although doubtless mentally unbalanced, Miss Konz succeeded in eluding for weeks a big army of sleuths.

PISTOL DUEL

Results in Death of Both Participants, Who Fell at First Fire.

Louisville, Ky.—A pistol duel at three paces, fought in the saloon of A. B. James, resulted in the death of both duelists. Frank Stigger, 50, chief detective for the Kentucky and Indiana Bridge Co., and William T. Charles, a former employe of the same concern, were the victims in the double tragedy. Both men fell at the first fire, six shots being exchanged, and before medical attention could be given both had paid with their lives the penalty of their act. No more tragic occurrence has taken place in years. So close together that they might have shaken hands, the men met inside the saloon, Stigger following Charles into the place over the remonstrance of James, according to the latter. Both drew their revolvers at almost the same time, Stigger firing first. Instantly a fusillade of shots rang out and both men fell. Stigger bore two wounds, Charles three. As Charles reeled and fell he fired a third shot, which lodged in a wall high above his fallen adversary's head.

BOARD OF TRADE

Will Discuss Advisability of Tennessee Liquor Interests Locating in Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky.—State-wide prohibition in Kentucky will be discussed at an open meeting of the Board of Trade to be held Thursday morning, June 24. The advisability of inviting distillers, brewers and liquor merchants of Tennessee affected by the recent prohibition legislation in that state to locate in Kentucky will also be considered.

Owensboro, Ky.—Tobias Goins and George Lear, residents of Spencer county, Indiana, have filed petitions in the Deputy United States court clerk's office here asking for $30,000 damages from 17 citizens of Muhlenberg county, Kentucky, on the grounds that they were forced to leave their home in this state by night rider outrages.

Louisville, Ky.—Representatives of 30 specialty manufacturers of Kentucky met here and formed the Kentucky Association of Manufacturers' Representatives. The body will affiliate with the American Specialty Manufacturers, organized for the purpose of eliminating trade abuses.

Louisville, Ky.—W. H. Wright, a colored attorney, who announced his candidacy for representative from the Fiftieth Legislative district of this city, but who was given no place on the republican ticket, announced that he will enter the race as an independent candidate.

Governor Pardons Indian Refining Co.

Asserting that the $10,000 fine assessed against the Indian Refining Co., of Georgetown, for the pollution of Elkhorn creek with the refuse oil from its plant is sufficient to cause the company to take every step possible to remedy the evil, Gov. Willson pardoned the pending indictments in the Franklin circuit court against the company. He refused, however, to remit the state's part of the fine, which would amount to nearly $3,900.

Ministers Asked to Preach.

Every minister in Kentucky, regardless of denomination, has been called upon by Superintendent of Public Instruction Crabbe to preach a sermon on June 28 on the subject of education. He estimates that if this request is carried out there will be a million and a half people hear the subject of education.

Rewards for Fugitives Revoked.

Gov. Willson issued a proclamation revoking all rewards for fugitives issued prior to January 1, 1906. The governor pardoned James Malloy, 70, convicted of perjury, and Otis Blick and Charles Bennett, who aided in the suppression of night riders.

Many Diplomas.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Crabbe signed 2,400 diplomas for graduates from the common schools of the state, which is twice the number issued last year.

Republican Election Commissioner.

Gov. Willson, upon recommendation of the state central committee of the republican party, reappointed John T. Shelby, a lawyer of Lexington, the representative of that party upon the state election commission for the ensuing year.

WRECKAGE OF ELECTRIC CARS

South Bend, Ind., June 21.—Ten persons were killed and 40 injured in the wreck on the Chicago, Lake Shore & South Bend railroad in Porter county, Indiana, Saturday night, when two of the big electric cars collided head-on. According to General Manager H. U. Wallace, of Michigan City, the wreck occurred because of a disregarding of orders by Motorman Reed, of the east-bound car, who received instructions at Gary to wait at Wilson, a short distance west of Baileytown, the point at which the disaster occurred, for the west-bound car to pass.

The east-bound car, running as Train No. 59, was running at a speed of 50 miles an hour to make up lost time, and when the crash occurred the east-bound car was telescoped and almost entirely wrecked.

In this train were all of the killed and most of the injured, the passengers on Train No. 58, west-bound, escaping with but slight bruises and scratches.

The two cars were welded together into a mass of wreckage, in which lay the ten dead and dying and the two-score of injured. The cries and appeals for help which came from the debris was horrible, and caused a scene of utter confusion.

The home of E. R. Borg, near by, was turned into a temporary hospital and morgue by parties rescuing the dead and injured from the cars. The darkness greatly interfered with the progress of the work, and the nearest telephone was three-quarters of a mile from the scene of the wreck, making it impossible to secure speedy aid from Michigan City.

All but one of the killed were in the smoking compartment of the car, in the front end. This space, originally used as a haggage and freight room, was fitted up for the use of the smokers and was crowded.

Two men, Titus E. Kinzle, a well-known real estate dealer, and Cordus Kline, both of South Bend, left the compartment less than a minute before the crash came, and they escaped with their lives, although the latter suffered severe injuries.

The inquest over the victims of the Chicago, Lake Shore & South Bend Interurban railway will be held Monday in the town hall of Chesterton, six miles from the scene of the disaster.

DEFECT IN MECHANISM

Anderson, S. C., June 21.—Owing to a defect in the mechanism of an automobile containing four persons the machine came to a halt on the tracks of the Anderson Interurban Co. Sunday just as a car was howling along at a rapid rate.

The injured are Rev. D. D. Richardson, Belton, S. C., fatally; Rev. E. A. McDowell, Ninety-Six, S. C., broken shoulder and arm, and Mrs. D. D. Richardson, bruised about the body.

The automobile was demolished and the occupants thrown from 20 to 50 feet.

At the coroner's inquest Sunday afternoon the verdict was that the accident was unavoidable.

Booty Was Dropped.

Baltimore, Md., June 21.—Mrs. Minnie Berkenfeld, of Canton avenue, was awakened early Sunday morning to find a masked burglar standing over her with a drawn pistol. Her screams attracted her husband, who rushed to her assistance, but not until the intruder had dealt her a stunning blow on the head. The booty of the robbers, consisting of money and jewelry valued at $300, was found on the first floor, where they dropped it in their flight.

Two Brakemen Slain By Negro.

Des Moines, Ia., June 21.—A negro early Sunday shot and killed Brakemen Lee C. Warner and Alva C. Bechtel, both of Boone, during an altercation on a train at Vail. Conductor McCartney found the two men on an oil car in the rear of the train. Brakeman Bechtel died Sunday evening. He described the negro who committed the assault as wearing a blue sweater. Sunday evening a negro wearing such a sweater and answering Bechtel's description waa arrested at Dennison.

Attempt To Blow Up Church.

New York, June 21.—Two crudely fashioned bombs were used early Sunday morning in an attempt to blow up the Italian Roman Catholic church and school of the parish of St. Rocci, in Bedford street, Newark, N. J. Each consisted of a tomato can in which dynamite had been placed with a fuse attached, but they failed to do hrm.

LEGAL STATUS OF THE SCREAM.

In obtaining a legal determination of the value of a scream, Miss Grace Reals of Chicago has performed a distinguished service for her sex. Miss Reals, who is an actress, sued a druggist for injury to her vocal chords, alleged to have been caused through a mistake in filling a prescription, and has been awarded $5,000, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. The jury was told that in emotional roles, when the villain became perniciously active, Miss Reals had to engage another woman to do the screaming for her. The jury agreed that a screamless actress is sadly handicapped in her art, but its verdict should afford protection to women other than those who follow the profession of the stage. No woman can go safely and happily through life without a scream. From mice to burglars, there is a broad variety of emergencies, each requiring its owns scream of peculiar intensity. There are married men of long experience who claim to be able to tell from the tone of a scream whether there is a mouse in the refrigerator or little Johnny has tumbled into the well. The occupants of a Kansas City flat building were saved from a horrible death by the scream of a woman, which summoned the fire department. Therefore, an impairment of her vocal chords which interferes with her natural screaming powers is easily worth $5,000. In fact, the Chicago druggist who is to pay that sum to Miss Reals may congratulate himself on getting off so lightly.

The speed test of the new scout-cruisers Chester, Salem and Birmingham resulted in conspicuous victory for the first-named, which in a 24-hour trip made an average of 25.50 knots per hour, her competitor, the Salem, reporting an average of 24.54. The officers of the Chester assert she could have done still better but for a slight fault in one of her turbines, which can be readily remedied, says the Troy Times. The Birmingham dropped out when the contest was half over, some impairment to the machinery rendering this necessary. But with thorough "tuning up" there seems to be no doubt that the three vessels will be valuable additions to ships of their class, the function of which will be to scour the sea and do it with alacrity.

The letting of the contract for constructing the railroad to run from Arica, Chile, to La Paz, Bolivia, is another striking indication of the progress made in uniting the three Americas. The new line, to cost $15,000,000, will cross the Andes mountains at a height of 12,000 feet above the level of the sea and is to be part of the longitudinal system which is to traverse practically the entire length of Chile, 3,000 miles or more. And it will be an important link in that enormously greater system which in time will make it possible to travel by rail from the United States to the extreme of South America. The late Hinton Rowan Helper should have taken heart of grace, seeing how rapidly his idea was materializing.

The American army mule is a valuable and useful beast, as has often been demonstrated, and he is holding his own, with no kick coming. The government stands by him. Orders have just been issued that army officers going to and from San Francisco and the military reservation near that city must ride in conveyances drawn by army mules and not automobiles. The officers formed the automobile habit at the time of the earthquake and as a matter of emergency and necessity. But the government regards the good old reliable mule as quite adequate to ordinary conditions, and so the animal comes back to his former dignity.

Residents of New York city are asking why, in the face of the casualty records of last year, and the growing movement for a safe and sane Fourth of July, the fire commissioner of that city has issued fifteen hundred permits for the sale of fireworks. This is inconsistency worthy of note; although even in cases where cities have rigid ordinances against the use of fireworks within their limits, dealers may be permitted to sell fireworks to outsiders who are not wise enough to heed the lessons of experience. The way to prevent the abuse of the privileges is to limit the permit in these instances to wholesaling.

The Young Turks want the moral support of the United States. Turkey is certainly progressing when the country, or any part of it, comes to recognize the value of moral support and the inadequacy of periodical massacre and summary executions to bring about peace and harmony with popular support of the government.

The Japanese government, it is reported, has dropped the sugar scandal for fear of getting into a sweet mess.

HEAR GOULD VALET

MAN WHO WAS HER PRIVATE SERVANT TELLS OF DRINKING.

CALLS CHAUFFEUR "DEARIE"

New York. — That Mrs. Howard Gould was often with Dustin New York, June 19.—That Mrs. Howard Gould was often with Dustin Farnum, an actor, despite her testimony to the contrary, was shown by witnesses for the defense in the suit for separation and $250,000 alimony of the millionaire's wife.

There was also iteration by servants and personal attendants that Mrs. Gould was repeatedly seen under the influence of liquor by them, and that when she had been drinking, as they alleged on the stand, she changed from a charming, affable woman to a woman of whims and caprices, illtempered, not nice in her choice of language, overbearing and quarrelsome.

Her "Valet" on Stand.

Mrs. Gould's one-time personal "valet," Harry J. Veitch of Des Moines, Ia., swore that at one time he served his mistress with two quarts of Manhattan cocktails in as many days, besides the wines and liquors which he said she drank at table. On cross-examining these witnesses, Clarence J. Shearn for Mrs. Gould, strove always to prove either that they had a personal grudge against her or that they were under obligation to Mr. Gould. Endearing epithets twice marked the testimony.

John H. Kimball, an oil and paint dealer, who said he had known Mr. Gould for 18 years, testified that he went to a performance of "The Virginian" in August, 1906, with Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Sells and the Goulds, at the Academy of Music in this city, and that Dustin Farnum, the star in the play, joined the party outside the playhouse after the performance and spoke to Mrs. Gould. She smiled, the witness testified, and said to the witness: "This is my new beau."

John Flynn, who said he was employed by Mrs. Gould as a chauffeur, and that he often drove her to meet Farnum after the play, testified that once when Mrs. Gould was waiting in the automobile for Farnum at the Hotel Somerset, two men turned to the actor as he came out at the hotel door and asked him whose automobile was waiting.

Called Chauffeur "Dearie."

Another time, Flynn swore, when he rapped on Mrs. Gould's chamber door at the St. Regis, she called out: "All right, dearie," and then, when she saw who it was, excused herself with: "I thought it was Mr. Farnum."

Mary Elizabeth Harrison, a fresh cheeked, good looking girl, who said she was a floor clerk in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia, prefaced her testimony with the explanation that it was her first appearance in court. She had been impelled by her conscience, she said, to tell what she saw at the hotel. Finally she wrote a letter to Mr. Gould.

"I said in the letter," she testified, "'In obedience to the Golden Rule, I write to you to help you if you are in trouble,' or something like that."

Mrs. Gould occupied apartments on the floor where she was stationed in September, 1906, the witness went on, and one morning about 7:30 o'clock she said, she saw a man come out of Mrs. Gould's rooms and take the elevator. She noticed that he was the only passenger in the car, and that the dial registered fourteenth floor when the car stopped. She described the man as tall, with dark, bushy hair and wearing a soft hat and a long coat.

Big Turnfest at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati.—Some 5,000 Turners from all parts of the country went into camp here Saturday for the annual turnfest of their national organization, which will last ten days. The Turners must live and sleep in tents while here and the people of Cincinnati have erected a large tent city that accords with the rules and regulations of the United States army. It includes 50 shower baths and ample kitchen accommodations.

Fait Favors Trust Tax.

Washington.—If the recommendations embodied in a message sent to congress Wednesday by President Taft are carried out a tax of two per cent. on the undistributed net earnings of trusts and other corporations will be provided for in an amendment to the tariff bill and the income tax question will be left to the states for settlement. It is believed the senate will adopt the president's plan.

KILLS ILLINOIS PRIMARY LAW

SUPREME COURT DECLARES THE ACT IS INVALID.

Springfield, Ill. — The new primary election law of Illinois is unconstitutional according to an opinion of the supreme court. The decision is made in the case of the People on the relation of Phillips against Sheriff Strassheim of Cook county, in which Phillips was indicted on the charge of making false affidavits at a primary election and obtains a writ of habeas corpus in the state's highest tribunal.

The Supreme court holds that the primary law is unconstitutional because it requires in section 44 that no person except persons registered at the last previous election can vote at a primary election, yet makes no provision for the registration of voters, and because section 11 provides that the senatorial committees may by resolution decide how many candidates each party may nominate for the legislature and that only that number of candidates may be voted for thus depriving the voters of their constitutional right under the election law to vote for as many candidates as there are offices to be filled and to cumulate their votes. For these reasons the entire act is declared unconstitutional.

In the case of Peabody against Treasurer Thompson of Cook county, in which case the lower court sustained the demurrer to the petition of Peabody for a mandamus to restrain Thompson from paying the officers of the primary election, the Supreme court reverses the judgment of the Circuit court of Cook county and remands the case.

STRANGE CULT IN KANSAS.

Hitchinson, Kan.—Practicing rites, more weird than those of the most fanatical Moslem sects, and cruelty more revolting than the most savage of the religious tests of the early Indians, a cult has sprung up near Hutchinson that is being closely watched by the authorities.

The law is powerless to interfere until some member of the sect dies a victim to its barbaric practices. It has been found out that just as the ancient Indians plunged their arms into buckets of boiling pitch to ascertain whether they were immune to pain so it is claimed that Snake Worshipers subject themselves to the bites of poisonous reptiles as a supreme test of grace.

MEAT PROBE IS BEGUN.

Government Board Sifts Former Inspector's Charges Against East St. Louis Packing Houses.

East St. Louis.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson's board of inquiry appointed to investigate the charges of J. F. Harms, a former inspector, that the government's inspection system in the packing houses here is faulty, held a closed session Thursday. Harms, after being denied an open investigation, withdrew from the room.

Illinois Convict on Way Back.

San Francisco.—Joseph Wright, who escaped almost a year ago from the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Chester, where he was serving a 14-year sentence for murder, was sent east in the custody of a deputy warden of that institution.

Fight Ends in Killing.

GIRL SLAIN BY CHINESE.

Granddaughter of Gen. Franz Sigel Probable Victim in New York Murder Mystery.

New York.—Elizabeth Sigel, daughter of Paul Sigel of this city and granddaughter of the illustrious Franz Sigel, the German warrior, who enlisted his services with the union army during the civil war, is, according to all indication the victim of one of the most sordid murders in the history of New York.

If she is not the victim, the police are confronted with a remarkable series of coincidental facts. Taken from a trunk in a room of a Chinaman above a chop suey restaurant in the Tenderloin, the body, in a state of decomposition, which makes identification difficult, lies in the morgue while detectives are collecting the threads of a tangled story involving the girl and her associations with Chinese. An envelope addressed to the girl found in the room where the body lay, a locket bearing her initials, her disappearance on June 10 and a note found in the room, signed "Elsie" all seem to indicate that Franz Sigel's granddaughter was murdered. The body was partially stripped of its clothing, tied with ropes, wrapped in a faded blue blanket and crammed into a dilapidated old trunk.

HOG TUBERCULOSIS GROWS.

Two Per Cent. of Those Slaughtered Have the Disease Say Government Reports.

Washington. — Tuberculosis among hogs is on the increase and is causing heavier loss to raisers and packers than any other disease, say reports gathered from the various meat packing centers of the country by the department of agriculture.

A year ago there were more than 56,000,000 hogs in this country, valued at more than $339,000,000. Federal inspection of the abattoirs show two per cent. of the hogs slaughtered to be affected with tuberculosis, while reports from Europe show a far more widespread infection, running as high as 5.5 to 7.5 per cent.

It has been found that hogs contract the disease principally through feeding. Samples of raw skimmed milk fed to hogs from creameries in one of the leading dairy states were injected into guinea pigs and in one instance virulent bacilli were recovered. Hogs from Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas are remarkably free from tuberculosis, due to the fact that they are fed from birth to maturity on alfalfa, oats, corn, rape and peanuts.

Detroit, Mich.—The sixty-fifth annual meeting of the American Institute of Homeopathy opened here Monday evening with a great general session that was full of interest. The big Y. M. C. A. auditorium was thronged with medical men from every state in the union when Dr. D. A. MacLachlan, chairman of the local committee of arrangements, rapped for order. Music and prayer were followed by addresses of welcome by Gov. Fred M. Warner, Mayor P. H. Breitmeyer and Dr. MacLachlan, to which response was made by Second Vice-President Joseph Hensley, M. D. Dr. William Davis Foster of Kansas City, the president, then delivered his annual address.

In the afternoon much preliminary work was disposed of and memorial exercises for deceased members were held.

Indian Lad Killed Four Relatives.

Salt Lake City.—Dan Tzo Ac, a 17-year-old Navajo Indian, pleaded guilty in the United States district court to the charge of murdering four of his relatives several months ago at Aneath, in a remote part of the state. He was sentenced by Judge Marshall to serve a term of tep years in the federal asylum prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and pay a fine of $100. The boy killed his aunt, uncle, sister and a cousin in resentment of a threat of the uncle to punish him for refusal to work.

"We always wondered a little how Amos Dore and his wife got along—really," "Aunt Em" Macomber said, frankly. "Some in the neighborhood said they'd never overheard a single loud or cross word on either side, but Lije Daniels always stuck to it that Amos was as mis'able at home as a man could be.

"He never spoke right out till Amos died and Mis' Dore went back upcountry to her folks. Then he let out."

"What?" queried Aunt Em's visitor.

"Well, Amos worked logging alongside of Lije every winter, and summers they hayed together most always, and it seems," said Aunt Em, impressively, "that Amos complained of his shoes hurting him about all the time. Finally Lije asked why he wore tight shoes.

"'Well, I'll tell you,' Amos says. 'When I wear tight shoes I forget all my other troubles.'"—Youth's Companion.

SORE EYES CURED.

Eye-Balls and Lids Became Terribly Inflamed—Was Unable to Go About —All Other Treatments Failed, But

"About two years ago my eyes got in such a condition that I was unable to go about. They were terribly inflamed, both the balls and lids. I tried home remedies without relief. Then I decided to go to our family physician, but he didn't help them. Then I tried two more of our most prominent physicians, but my eyes grew continually worse. At this time a friend of mine advised me to try Cuticura Ointment, and after using it about one week my eyes were considerably improved, and in two weeks they were almost well. They have never given me any trouble since and I am now sixty-five years old. I shall always praise Cuticura. G. B. Halsey, Month of Wilson, Va., Apr. 4, 1908."

"What makes that peasant so proud to-day?"

"Oh, he has the biggest rooster in town—and his wife the biggest hat."—Fliegende Blaetter.

The Novel Type.

In a late magazine story a perfectly lovely girl is described as follows: "She was very small and dark, and very active, with hair like the color of eight o'clock—daylight and darkness and lamplight all snared up together, and lips like all crude scarlet, and eyes as absurdly big and round as a child's good-by kiss."

How do you like it? Would a girl who answered that description be worth shucks in everyday experiences?—Atchison Globe.

Great Improvement.

"My dear sir," he said, "you must gradually give up whisky and soda."

Some months later he met the patient and inquired whether the advice had been followed.

"To the letter," replied the patient, beaming. "Why, I've already given up soda completely!"

WON'T MIX

Bad Food and Good Health Won't Mix.

"A year ago I became much alarmed about my health for I began to suffer after each meal no matter how little I ate," says a Denver woman.

"I lost my appetite and the very thought of food grew distasteful, with the result that I was not nourished and got weak and thin.

"My home cares were very heavy, for besides a large family of my own I have also to look out for my aged mother. There was no one to shoulder my household burdens, and come what might, I must bear them, and this thought nearly drove me frantic when I realized that my health was breaking down.

"I read an article in the paper about some one with trouble just like mine being cured on Grape-Nuts food and acting on this suggestion I gave Grape-Nuts a trial. The first dish of this delicious food proved that I had struck the right thing.

"My uncomfortable feelings in stomach and brain disappeared as if by magic and in an incredibly short space of time I was myself again. Since then I have gained 12 pounds in weight through a summer of hard work and realize I am a very different woman, all due to the splendid food, Grape-Nuts."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

WERE BOTH OF MIXED BLOOD

"The countess de Pourtales was a New York Lorillard," said a New York tobacconist. "So on both sides, of course, she has blue blood. Yet she is without false pride.

"At a recent tobacco men's convention a director told me of a remark the countess made in Biarritz to an arrogant Englishman.

"This fellow boasted of his ancestry. The countess said that sort of talk wouldn't be understood in the wild west. She said an Englishman said to a Texas cowboy once:

"'I have Tudor blood in my veins on the maternal side and through my father's family I am a Plantaganet.'

"'Is that so?' said the cowboy, brightening with keen interest. 'My blood's a leetle mixed, too. My grandfather was a Jersey tenderfoot and my grandmother a Digger Indian squaw. We're both half-breeds, stranger. Come and liquor up!'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tuberculosis Afflicts Japanese.

Consumption among Japanese laborers is increasing to such a degree that the figures are becoming a source of anxiety to Japanese merchants and officials. A large percentage of laborers who are sent back to Japan by the Japanese charity associations are consumptives. It is claimed by the Japanese newspapers comenting on this matter that through the lack of hospital accommodations in the Japanese labor camps tuberculosis increases at an alarming rate. They suggest that a new system be employed in dealing with the sick in these camps, as the Japanese are quite ignorant of even the most simple health safeguards.

Louisville, Ky.—A strange woman, heavily veiled and dressed in black, who baffled the detectives and agents of the postoffice department, under inspector S. A. Susong, has at last been captured and a mystery has been unraveled here. For two or three months the most offensive character of filth and liquids had been poured into local mail boxes, necessitating in many cases the return of the mail. Joe Erb, one of the carriers, discovered the woman and gave a complete description to Inspector Susong, who placed her under arrest. She gave her name as Miss Frances Konz, of 908 West Jefferson street, 47 years old. She said that she had been instructed by the spirit of the late Fire Chief Edward Hughes to deface the United States mails. Although doubtless mentally unbalanced, Miss Konz succeeded in eluding for weeks a big army of sleuths.

PISTOL DUEL

Louisville, Ky.—A pistol duel at three paces, fought in the saloon of A. B. James, resulted in the death of both duelists. Frank Stigger, 50, chief detective for the Kentucky and Indiana Bridge Co., and William T. Charles, a former employe of the same concern, were the victims in the double tragedy. Both men fell at the first fire, six shots being exchanged, and before medical attention could be given both had paid with their lives the penalty of their act. No more tragic occurrence has taken place in years. So close together that they might have shaken hands, the men met inside the saloon, Stigger following Charles into the place over the remonstrance of James, according to the latter. Both drew their revolvers at almost the same time, Stigger firing first. Instantly a fusillade of shots rang out and both men fell. Stigger bore two wounds, Charles three. As Charles reeled and fell he fired a third shot, which lodged in a wall high above his fallen adversary's head.

Will Discuss Advisability of Tennessee Liquor Interests Locating in Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky.—State-wide prohibition in Kentucky will be discussed at an open meeting of the Board of Trade to be held Thursday morning, June 24. WRECKAGE OF ELECTRIC CARS

South Bend, Ind., June 21.—Ten persons were killed and 40 injured in the wreck on the Chicago, Lake Shore & South Bend railroad in Porter county, Indiana, Saturday night, when two of the big electric cars collided head-on. According to General Manager H. U. Wallace, of Michigan City, the wreck occurred because of a disregarding of orders by Motorman Reed, of the east-bound car, who received instructions at Gary to wait at Wilson, a short distance west of Baileytown, the point at which the disaster occurred, for the west-bound car to pass.

The east-bound car, running as Train No. 59, was running at a speed of 50 miles an hour to make up lost time, and when the crash occurred the east-bound car was telescoped and almost entirely wrecked.

In this train were all of the killed and most of the injured, the passengers on Train No. 58, west-bound, escaping with but slight bruises and scratches.

The two cars were welded together into a mass of wreckage, in which lay the ten dead and dying and the two-score of injured. The cries and appeals for help which came from the debris was horrible, and caused a scene of utter confusion.

The home of E. R. Borg, near by, was turned into a temporary hospital and morgue by parties rescuing the dead and injured from the cars. The darkness greatly interfered with the progress of the work, and the nearest telephone was three-quarters of a mile from the scene of the wreck, making it impossible to secure speedy aid from Michigan City.

All but one of the killed were in the smoking compartment of the car, in the front end. This space, originally used as a baggage and freight room, was fitted up for the use of the smokers and was crowded.

Two men, Titus E. Klnzle, a well-known real estate dealer, and Cordus Kline, both of South Bend, left the compartment less than a minute before the crash came, and they escaped with their lives, although the latter suffered severe injuries.

The inquest over the victims of the Chicago, Lake Shore & South Bend Interurban railway will be held Monday in the town hall of Chesterton, six miles from the scene of the disaster.

DEFECT IN MECHANISM

Anderson, S. C., June 21.—Owing to a defect in the mechanism of an automobile containing four persons the machine came to a halt on the tracks of the Anderson Interurban Co. Sunday just as a car was bowling along at a rapid rate.

The injured are Rev. D. D. Richardson, Belton, S. C., fatally; Rev. E. A. McDowell, Ninety-Six, S. C., broken shoulder and arm, and Mrs. D. D. Richardson, bruised about the body.

The automobile was demolished and the occupants thrown from 20 to 50 feet.

At the coroner's inquest Sunday afternoon the verdict was that the accident was unavoidable.

Booty Was Dropped.

Baltimore, Md., June 21.—Mrs. Minnie Berkenfeld, of Canton avenue, was awakened early Sunday morning to find a masked burglar standing over her with a drawn pistol. Her screams attracted her husband, who rushed to her assistance, but not until the intruder had dealt her a stunning blow on the head. The booty of the robbers, consisting of money and jewelry valued at $300, was found on the first floor, where they dropped it in their flight.

Two Brakemen Slain By Negro.

Des Moines, Ia., June 21.—A negro early Sunday shot and killed Brakemen Lee C. Warner and Alva C. Bechtel, both of Boone, during an altercation on a train at Vail. Conductor McCartney found the two men on an oil car in the rear of the train. Brakeman Bechtel died Sunday evening. He described the negro who committed the assault as wearing a blue sweater. Sunday evening a negro wearing such a sweater and answering Bechtel's description was arrested at Dennison.

Attempt To Blow Up Church.

New York, June 21.—Two crudely fashioned bombs were used early Sunday morning in an attempt to blow up the Italian Roman Catholic church and school of the parish of St. Rocci, in Bedford street, Newark, N. J. Each consisted of a tomato can in which dynamite had been placed with a fuse attached, but they failed to do hrm.

Ended Suffering With Prussic Acid.

St. Louis, Mo., June 21.—Dr. Justin Steer, prominent physician and member of the faculty of Washington university, committed suicide here because of ill-health. He used prussic acid, alleviating the pain by drinking chloroform.

Floods on Isthmus.

Panama, June 21.—Rains throughout the past week have caused great floods all over the isthmus, and in many places the crops are ruined. The Chagres river has overflowed its banks, but without damage to the canal.

PETERSBURG HIGH SCHOOL.

First Commencement a Brilliant Success—Four Graduates.

The commencement exercises of the Petersburg Graded High School, on the evening of the 14th inst., were well attended, the program being rendered with great credit to both the teachers and the class. Four of our most charming and popular young ladies were presented with diplomas, testifying to the world that they have successfully passed the several grades taught in this school.

With Mr. Willis Tandy as principal and Miss Margaret Whitehead as assistant, our school has closed a highly successful year. The efficient manner in which these teachers have conducted our school, during the five months they have been in our midst, has rendered them very popular with patrons, pupils and other citizens. It is the wish of both patrons and citizens that their services may be secured for the next term of our school.

The exercises began with music by the Interurban Orchestra, which is composed of the best musical talent of the twin cities across the Ohio. Mr. Frank Hubbart, its director, is an accomplished violinist, and his execution is so artistic that those who hear him can not fail to note its beauty and precision. The several members of the orchestra handled their instruments with such skill and technique that the music seemed to steal quietly into the hearts of their hearers and held them spellbound.

The supplication by Rev. Robt. Carter was an ardent and eloquent appeal in behalf of the future of the four young graduates.

Uncle Billy Stott surprised his wife, daughter and all his friends with his able and eloquent appeal in behalf of education. His appeal to the patrons to stand by their teachers was grand.

The thesis of Miss Nora McWethy, "Gathering Shells by the Sea Shore;" that of Miss Henrietta Geisler, "Aid Me to Climb those Rugged Heights;" that of Miss Leile Thompson, "Let us Pass Over the River and Rest 'Neath the Shade of the Trees," and that of Miss Nellie McWethy, "I Wonder when Silent and Dim is the Night," was each beautifully written, and gracefully and appropriately rendered. I will not undertake to compliment the young ladies individually for fear that I may praise one more than the other, when each is entitled to the same compliments, but I will say of them collectively that they went through with their part of the exercises in a manner that reflected credit upon themselves as well as their instructor. Nature favored them with a beautiful person; the dressmaker, with exquisitely fitting white dresses trimmed with countless yards of dainty white laces, and culture rendered their voices clear and distinct and their deportment charming.

Miss Margaret Whitehead, with a chorus of four young ladies, bearing the union and confederate flags, recited that beautiful and pathetic ode representing the reconciliation between the Blue and the Gray. Miss Whitehead's artistic interpretation of the author met with the most appreciative recognition by the very select assemblage. Miss Whitehead both as a lady and an elocutionist, has become very popular in Petersburg. She is a lovely young lady with winning manners and gentle ways that leave her unspoiled by her attainments.

The class address, a masterful effort, full of hints suitable to the day and occasion, was delivered by Rev. Milo Atkinson in that grand and eloquent style of his. After the address Mr. Tandy presented each of the young ladies with a diploma. His remarks to the class were touching, eloquent and beautiful.

The rostrum was beautifully decorated with flowers. A fence of honeysuckles and daisies, with an arched entrance in the center admitted those upon the stage from the dressing room.

The young ladies, who so successfully passed the several grades in the educational system of our State, should not flatter themselves that they have completed their education. They have simply completed the foundation of the mental structure that it should be the ambition of every human mind to build.

The educational system of our State does not provide for the complete and thorough education of the mind. It furnishes a fund that will enable each boy and girl in the State opportunity to attain the rudiments and lay the foundation for a higher culture of the mind. This fund is a sacred fund. It was erected by the demand of liberty and progress, guaranteed by the constitution, protected by the law, paid by the taxpayer and held by the officers of the Commonwealth for the sole purpose of educating the boys and girls of the State. It is dedicated to Kentucky's future welfare; to make for her a better class of citizens; better class of laws; better officers and a better State. It vouchsafes to us happiness and peace at home and honor and prestige abroad. With a per capita larger than anyother southern State, and exceeded by only three States in the union, it is a startling fact that the illiterate white children in our State outnumber those of any other State in the union. To remedy this it is time to enforce every school law and see that every child in the State is in school.

Personal Mention.

Harry Roberts and wife spent last Sunday in the country.

Lucien Clore and family visited in Waterloo neighborhood, last Sunday.

L. J. Hume and wife, of Verona, were Sunday guests at Joseph Case's.

Master Edwin Duncan is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Kennedy, at Walton.

Mrs. R. S. Crisler's friends were glad to see her up in town again one day last week.

Deputy Sheriff W. D. Cropper was in Home City, Sunday, the guest of Dr. Walton and wife.

Mrs. Mary Castleman, of Latonia, is the guest of her son, Atty. D. E. Castleman and family.

Ben Houston and Herbert Snyder, of Covington, visited in Burlington and vicinity, last Sunday.

Mrs. Hays Miller, of Walton, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. B. B. Hume, a few days last week.

Mrs. Thomas H. Baker and daughter, of Louisville, are guests of W. W. Grimsley and wife at Hamilton.

Henry Terrill returned the latter part of last week from a visit to his friends and relatives at Petersburg.

O. O. Dixon, who nursed Francis Kreyleich, of Ludlow, during his last illness, is now at his home near Richwood.

Elmer Conley and family ate fried chicken, Sunday, with father-in-law J. F. Lambert and family near Commissary.

Mrs. Jefferson Turley and two little sons, of Owensboro, are guests of her brother, Atty. D. E. Castleman and family.

Misses Sallie and Lizzie Roberts, of Walton, were guests of their sister, Mrs. C. C. Roberts, last Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Charlotte Hall and Mr. Chester A. Allen, of Newport, spent last Sunday with Miss Hall's parents, F. A. Hall and wife.

Mrs. Susan Clutterbuck returned the latter part of last week from a visit with friends and relatives in Walton and Covington.

D. M. Snyder and wife, near town, and Wm. Carpenter and wife, of Locust Grove neighborhood, were Sunday guests at N. W. Carpenter's.

Richard White and wife, who reside two miles out on the Belleview pike spent Friday in Burlington, the guests of Mr. White's sister, Mrs. Goodridge.

Miss Emma Adams will be at her post of duty at the telephone exchange in a day or two. She says her brief period of rest has been very beneficial to her.

Mr. John Stephens and daughter, Miss Lizzie, have returned from a visit of several months in Missouri and Kansas, and are comfortably located in Erlanger again.

Mrs. Wm. Gaines, of Bullittsville, has taken a room at Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Kelly's that she may be near her physician, Dr. E. W. Duncan, from whom she is taking treatment.

Benjamin Vallandingham and Mrs. Mary Collins, of Crittenden, and Mrs. Joseph Jolly and daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth, of Indianapolis, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Case.

Col. Cliff Nadaud remembered the RECORDER with a souvenir postal card mailed at London, England on the 6th inst. The Colonel is evidently seeing a considerable portion of this world.

Mrs. Ada Conner arrived at home one evening last week after a protracted visit with her daughters, Mrs. J. E. Rouse, of Paynes Depot, Scott county, and Mrs. Nannie McAtee, of Ludlow.

W. C. Johnson called at this office as he was on his way, Monday morning, from Midway to his saw mill at Idlewild. He reported the weeds as about to get the best of the farmers in his neighborhood.

Johnnie Cloud, manager of Hebron base ball team witnessed the Big Bone-Burlington game last Saturday, hoping to get a line on the performance of the Burlington aggregation by which his team may profit in next Saturday's contest.

Henry Taylor, who lives in Indiana, near Aurora, made this office a call, one day last week as he was returning from Richwood, where he had been to attend the funeral of his brother Samuel's wife, a very estimable lady.

William Green, one of Risin Sun's hustling dry goods merchants, struck the town yesterday about noon, hot and hungry. He had driven through by the way of Rabbit Hash, strewing the country along the route with printed announcements of the record breaking bargains to be found at his store.

G. Ross Lodwick and wife, of Spokane, Washington, were guests of M. L. Riddell and wife, last Friday and Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Lodwick moved from Cincinnati to Spokane about three years ago, and the change proved very beneficial to her health. Mr. Lodwick is doing well as a funeral director at his new home.

A. B. Renaker and wife visited the Ludlow Lagoon, last Sunday, and journeyed heavenward in the balloon that is sent up from the Lagoon at regular intervals. The balloon in which they rode is the one that created so much excitement one Sunday afternoon not long since by its flight across the north end of this county.

In a letter renewing his subscription Prof. William P. Dickey writes as follows from Richmond, Va.: "I have just finished a good year here in Richmond College, to which I will return in September. June 26th I will sail from New York for Naples, and will spend the whole summer in Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, France and England. Please send next week's paper to me at the Hoffman House, New York.

LEASE EXTENDED

On The Fair Grounds for Another Five Years by The Stockholders.

At the called meeting of the stockholders of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association, held on its grounds at Florence, last Saturday, it was decided to extend the lease on grounds for a period of five years from the date of the expiration of the present lease in the fall of 1910, at the price of $150 per year. It was also decided to contribute $200 to the traction road which the Florence people are very sanguine will be in operation from Covington to their town in the next twelve months. This money is not payable, however, until the traction road is in operation to the fair grounds. The meeting was practically unanimous on all propositions that were considered by it. Notwithstanding that all the stockholders had been notified, a majority of the stock was not represented in the meeting.

THE POOLED WOOL

Was Delivered Last Saturday. It was in Fine Condition, with But a Single Rejection.

The pooled wool was delivered here, last Saturday, a representative of the firm in Philadelphia to which it was shipped, being present to inspect and receive it. Everything went off in the most satisfactory manner, only one of the 1,200 fleeces being rejected. There were 6,000 pounds of the wool which made the average weight 5 pounds to the fleece, which was pronounced an excellent yield. The quality of the wool was very satisfactory to the gentleman who inspected it as was the price, 34 cents, to the sellers. Some wool that was not in the pool and had been sold at 30 cents a pound, was also delivered to the same firm. Albert Conner and Charles Westbay hauled the wool delivered here last Saturday to Erlanger, Monday.

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or Kidney trouble show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

GAMES NEXT SATURDAY.

Burlington at Hebron.
Big Bone at Belleview.

LAST SATURDAY'S GAMES.

Big Bone came up last Saturday and was again defeated by Burlington. It was a beautiful game for four or five innings before the home team could break down the visitors defence, after which it had things pretty much its own way. Conner was at his best and was given excellent support, there being but one error behind him. He had speed equal to a catapult, and Slayback was always there to receive. Woods did some nice work, but with seven errors behind him and his opponents lambasting him freely it was no use. Nearly all the work of the home team was confined to the infield.

Struck out by Conner 7, by Woods, 8; base hits—Slayback, Souther 2, Smith, Conner 2, Clore, Tolin, Walton, Lostetter 1, Shearer 2. Two base hits—Smith, Conner; three base hit—Tolin. Errors—Burlington 1; Big Bone 7. Sacrifice hits, Smith, Westbay.

Slayback was elected captain of the team.

Hebron	0	0	0	1	1	0	0	4	0—	7

A large crowd attended the Sunday School Convention at Gunpowder Baptist church, last Sunday. The people were entertained in a most profitable manner with numerous interesting addresses during the day. The good cooks of the neighborhood had prepared a sumptuous dinner for the occasion, and it received a most respectful attention at the noon hour.

The Williamstown Courier says there is nothing in the accusation that some of Williamstown's citizens assisted "Toronto Jimmie," the bank robber, to escape from the jail there, and the jailer says that he did not lock the negro prisoner in "Toronto Jimmie's" cell that night.

The RECORDER's esteemed friend, George Kreyleich, has followed the pall of sorrow, this month. On the 9th inst. his father-in-law, Mr. Joseph A. Gaines, died; on the 12th inst. his brother-in-law, O. W. Gaines, passed away, and on the 18th inst. his father, Francis Kreyleich, departed this life.

Last year the drought was on at this time, but the farmers did not realize that they were in for such a long period of dry weather. The dry weather in 1908 dated from in May, which date has been passed by at least a month, consequently crops can not suffer from dry weather so long this year.

Farmers Chas. White, from out on the East Bend road, and Wm. Clore, of Locust Grove neighborhood, came to town, one day last week, and placed a portion of their surplus where they will enjoy it and at the same time it will benefit others. They purchased of B. B. Hume the following vehicles: Mr. White a rubber tire, automobile seat buggy; Mr. Clore, a nice carriage.

A BIG TIME AT UNION.

The Doctors will give a Fish Fry at Union, at which there will be Fish, Oratory and Music Galore.

Four of the members of the Boone County Medical Society, viz: Drs. Hookins, of Rabbit Hash; Senior, of Union; Hafer, of Florence, and Peddicord, of Burlington, met at the office of the latter in Burlington, last Wednesday. After discussing many topics of interest to the medical fraternity, it was decided to give a big fish fry at Union on Wednesday, July 21st, at which addresses will be delivered by lawyers, doctors, preachers and laymen. Several eminent physicians will be present from Cincinnati and Covington. One of the enlivening features of the occasion will be an excellent band which will make music at frequent intervals during the day. The doctors expect to make their fish fry the most enjoyable outing of the year in this county.

A Skeleton Found.

While plowing, a few days since, Walter Whitaker, who lives just above Lawrenceburg on the Indiana side of the river, unearthed the skeleton of a large dog. At first the skeleton was supposed to be that of a child and the find was causing much speculation among people as to when and why the child was burried at such an obscure place. The excitement soon disappeared when the skeleton was pronounced that of a dog.

Planning For Piscatorial Pleasure.

Some of the local disciples of Isaac Walton are planning to raid the fish in Woolper creek. They surmise that when the back water receded a few weeks since it left some very fine specimens of the finny tribe in the lakes of lower Woolper, and that they are getting hungry enough about now to make angling great sport, and with a feast of fun in view they have invested in a stock of extra strong lines and hooks.

The Eclipse.

The eclipse of the sun appeared on time last Thursday. Had the performance been postponed a short time it would not have been visible here. Luna was getting back at Sol for giving her a black face only a few nights since, but the effects of her shadow casting could be seen only through a smoked glass, but, at the same time, it could be observed by the naked eye that the sun was in distress.

To Correspondents.

For the last three weeks communications from Hamilton, Hume and two or three other postoffices have reached this office on Tuesday evening, which late arrival made it impossible to handle them. About all the neighborhood news is put in type on Tuesday, and the communications coming in the mail that evening are too late. This is by way of explanation.

Hay and Oats Crops Fine.

It is seldom that there are as fine prospects for a large crop of oats as at present in this county, while the indications are that a splendid crop of hay will be cut, but, of course, the value of these two crops depend on the weather conditions at harvest time, as unfavorable weather at that time can injure them materially in a few days.

A Narrow Escape.

James D. Cloud, who lives three miles west of Burlington, went into his meat house, a few days ago, to get a ham. To secure the piece of meat he desired it was necessary for him to mount a step ladder which broke beneath him, and in the fall his face was lacerated considerably, and one of his wrists badly sprained.

Sure Enough Snake.

Burlington is a dry town but occasionally a citizen sees snakes, the most recent case of this kind being that of the general merchant, M. L. Riddell, who encountered a very ugly reptile on the sidewalk as he was going to dinner, one day last week. The snake was aiming to get under Mrs. Goodridge's residence.

Card of Thanks.

I desire to thank my many friends for their kindness shown me during my husband's serious illness and death, also Dr. Hopkins and the undertaker, Frank Steele, for their attention, and thanks for the floral offerings and the kindness from the brothers of his lodge.

MRS. O. Y. KELLY.

Brought Back for Burial.

H. G. Blanton, the Erlanger undertaker, passed through Burlington early last Thursday morning enroute to Petersburg, with the body of Jefferson Riley, who was killed by lightning in Colorado several days before. Interment in the Petersburg cemetery.

Francis Kreyleich Dead.

Francis Kreyleich, 85, an old citizen of Kenton county, who was well and favorably known in this county, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James L. Riley, in Ludlow at 3 o'clock a. m., last Friday. He had been in feeble health for some time, and was the object of the tender cares of a loving and dutiful daughter, who, with her brother, George Kreyleich, of this county, are the only survivors of the family. Francis Kreyleich was one of the substantial men of this part of the State, plain and unassuming, honorable and upright in all the walks of life. Being of a jovial disposition he looked upon the bright side of life and made friends of all, and a large circle of friends mourn his death. The funeral services were conducted at the residence at 10 a. m., last Monday, after which the remains were interred in the family lot in Highland cemetery.

OPEN LETTER

To All Ministers In Kentucky—Second Whirlwind Campaign.

The Second Whirlwind Campaign for public education in Kentucky will be conducted from Monday, June 28 to and including Saturday, July 3. The entire State will be covered by speakers of exceptional ability. You know something of the great awakening last year; the results have been very gratifying.

I am asking you to have a vital part in the campaign, for the schools' need is great. To this end I designate Sunday, June 27, to be "PUBLIC SCHOOL SUNDAY," and I ask that every clergyman in the Commonwealth—minister, pastor, rector, preacher or whatever his title may be—will deliver, on this day, in his own church, at least one address on "PUBLIC EDUCATION IN KENTUCKY."

I hope that your churches will be especially decorated, that special music will be rendered, that all the children will be invited to be present, and especially that you will invite the parents and the business and professional men of the community. It seems to me that you could do no better service to your church, to your community, and to society, than to participate enthusiastically thus in this educational campaign.

The regular speakers will begin their active work Monday, June 28. Each county will have a special "Rally Day," an all-day, open-air meeting, with an additional special speaker for the occasion. The campaign is booming, the fight is on, the reports are more than encouraging. Remember our slogan: "For the Boys and Girls and the Commonwealth!"

For an advance educational movement in Kentucky, NOW, I am,

Very truly yours,

J. G. CRABBE,
Superintendent.

The New Pledge.

It is claimed that the pledge for the 1909 crop perfected by the District Board of the Burley Tobacco Society is the best and strongest business proposition that has ever been made to the growers in any of the tobacco organizations. It is believed that a fight won on this pledge will solve the problem for years to come, because it places the growers of tobacco in a strong financial position that will cause the opponents of the farmers' organization to "sit up and take notice."

The new pledge contemplates a uniform system and uniform charges in all counties, which provision, it is said, will eliminate waste and friction and secure the most economical management.

The pledge provides that the society shall carry its own insurance, and that in this one item $400,000 will be saved to the growers. It is estimated that from the time tobacco of the 1906 crop began to be delivered to the purchasers of all the tobacco in the 1906 and 1907 crops about $500,000 was paid out in insurance, the average rate with the old insurance companies over the district being $2 50 per annum on the $100. The actual losses by fire have been less than $75,000. Since the new plan proposes to insure the tobacco for actual cost the saving to the growers will be over $400,000.

Other features of the pledge, such as the financing, prizing and storing, are said to be equally attractive. Those who have given the new pledge the most earnest study believe that organized on the basis provided by this pledge the society will in the future be invincible. The pledge will be finally revised this week and then made public and the campaign begun.

Uncle Sam is waging war on rats. He has been investigating the pest and finds that they do damage to the amount of several millions a year in various ways. He has issued a bulletin of 54 pages, telling of the many mean and destructive things they do, and how to destroy them, or rid the premises of them.

ANSWERED THE LAST ROLL-CALL.

David Beall, an Old Confederate Soldier and ex-Sheriff, has passed Over and is Camping on the Other Side of the River with Old Comrades.

David Beall, an old Confederate soldier and ex-sheriff, of this county, died at his home at Constance at 4 p. m., last Thursday, after several days' illness, having suffered a stroke of paralysis three weeks before, and from which he never rallied.

He was a son of the late John Beall and was born October 28th, 1842. His wife was Miss Alice Hankins, of Hebron. To them were born three children, ex-sheriff Elmer Beall, Mrs. Ezra Aylor and Mrs. Lou Crutcher, all of whom and their mother survive.

During the war he was a member of Captain William Vaughn's company of cavalry in the Sixth Confederate Batallion commanded by Gen. George B. Hodge, of Newport. He joined the Confederate army in 1862 and served in Virginia and Tennessee. He was in the raid upon Maysville and Cynthiana, assisting in the capture of Gen. Hobson and his forces at the latter place, and it was to that same Gen. Hobson he surrendered at Mt. Sterling, this State, May 1st, 1865, after the Confederacy had gone to pieces. He was very popular with his comrades in arms, and those of them who survive will deplore his answering to the last roll call.

He was elected sheriff of this county in 1888 and entered upon the discharge of the duties of his office on the first Monday in September. He was reelected for a second term which did not expire until January 1, 1903. Since then he had led a private life, surrounded by friends who honored and respected him.

David Beall was a prominent member of the Hebron Masonic Lodge, the members of which had charge of the funeral and conducted the services according to the custom of that order.

A Fight at Church.

The annual basket meeting of the First Colored Baptist Church of Burlington, last Sunday, was attended by a large crowd. Everything went along nicely until afternoon, when Ed Scales, who had on board more bad whisky than religion, began to hunt trouble. Wm. Strader, one of the deacons, went out of the church to quiet Scales, and was knocked down promptly by the disturber. Strader was on his feet again in a jiffy and sent Scales to grass, and pounced upon him and was giving him a good drubbing when he was pulled off. No time was lost in having Judge Cason issue warrants for the arrest of Ed Scales and his brother, Noah. The former got out of town before the warrant could be served, but the latter was lodged in jail. Monday Judge Cason gave Noah Scales a ten days' jail sentence, but suspended it, and Scales hiked it out of town.

M. W. A. NEWS

Mr. Geo. Crane, of Covington, has spent several days here the past few weeks in the interest of Modern Woodmen of America. He has worked hard to organize a local camp, and his efforts will be crowned with success unless there is a very unexpected slip in the work. He made himself agreeable to the boys and soon became one of them, and he has succeeded in landing members that most other workers for an order could not have approached. The camp will have about 15 members as a starter.

Applicants for Certificates.

The following were applicants for teachers' certificates to teach in this county, at the regular examination of teachers last Friday and Saturday: Matty May, Verona; Robert McNeely, Burlington, r. r. 2; Dora Hoard, Hume; Nannie Chambers, Walton; Estelle Huey, Burlington, r. r. 1; Rosa Lee Rich, Beaver Bick; Elmo Davis, Hebron.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

HUNTING BIG GAME IN EAST AFRICA

The Ugly Rhinoceros and Smaller Game

By Capt. Fritz Duquesne

IF the Genius of Hell used up all his mental energy making a devil for the animal kingdom he could not have created a more uncertain, malicious and ugly brute than the rhinoceros. This animal has buried more hunters than all other big game combined. It seems to be the hired assassin of the jungle. Its success as a homicide is not due to the fact that it seeks its victim, but because its victim falls over it. If the rhino knows that there is an enemy about, it will try to get away without being seen. If, on the other hand, it thinks that by keeping still it will be passed unnoticed, it stays as silent and motionless as Gibraltar, its little hog eyes watching the direction of the noise and its nose sniffing the air. Should an enemy show up suddenly in the jungle the rhino charges like a flash, nose down and horns leveled like swords for the thrust, its huge bulk crushing through the brush like an express train. It is always a fight to the death, for a rhinoceros once in a fight wins or dies, and it mostly wins, if it is not confronted with an express rifle in the hands of a cool, good shot. It was the express in the hands of a cool shot that saved me in the encounter related here.

We had been out nearly a year and were returning to civilization, such as it is on the East African coast, with a good stock of ivory. My partner, Jappie de Villiers, a well-known Boer hunter, had fever and was expected to die at any moment. He had been carried 300 miles from the interior in a hammock. If de Villiers had not been ill I would not be alive to-day.

We were pitching camp at the Kagera river on one of these inexplicable barren patches that are scattered like freckles over the face of the tropical forests.

I hung our rifles on the limbs of the trees which supported my sick comrade's hammock. The porters were collecting drywood for the night fires as I watched a monster crocodile in the water making a futile effort to swallow a friend nearly as big as itself. A party of natives from a nearby village was skinning a beast we had shot for food. In another group my "boys" were opening the bundles of camping necessities. A loud grunt, followed by a Somali's cry, came from the jungle side of the camp, and the next instant the screeching Somali, followed by a huge rhinoceros, burst through the undergrowth. The Somali ran for a tree. He tripped over an ammunition box, the rhino passed him in its blind fury and charged down on the clump of porters, scattering them like chaff before the wind. One was crushed down. Another who had stumbled rose to run, the maddened beast charged and thrust its horn through his back, battered him against a tree, and then hurled him in the air.

Close Call for a Brave Hunter.

I was reaching for my rifle when the rhino caught sight of me. It was too late. I turned and ran toward the river. A dive would save me. I thought of the crocodiles. I felt the puff of the rhino's foul breath. My heart sank. I had one chance to jump aside and let the rhino pass. I jumped, and the roaring animal wiped its gore-stained cheek on me as I did. I doubled on my tracks, the demoniac brute frothing in fury after me. As I passed under the hammock where my comrade lay between life and death, there was a vivid flash, a deafening roar filled the world, and I fell. The rhinoceros rolled over, squirting a stream of hot blood on me from a wound in its neck. I looked up, dazed and breathless. I didn't know whether I was dead or alive. I felt the huge, throbbing carcass beside me. The yellow fever-stained, hollow-eyed face of De Villiers looked over the hammock and asked, "Are you hurt?"

"I think not," I answered. "What happened?"

I got no answer. De Villiers sank back with a groan. I sprang to the side of the hammock. I thought he was dead. His breast was covered with blood. I opened his shirt and saw his right collar bone broken and protruding through the flesh. I forced some brandy down his throat and he revived. "What happened?" I asked again.

"You had one chance for life, and that was the death of the rhino. I had one chance in a thousand of saving you and killing the rhino. I took it and gave the rhino both barrels of the express. Your face is singed a little from the flash. The recoil of the blunderbuss has hurt my shoulder."

He put his left hand over and felt the shattered collar bone. "I suppose it's all up with me," he said. "This, on top of the fever, is too much." He smiled and fell back unconscious.

The natives who had fled returned, and we examined the five porters who got the rhino's charge. Two were dead, three badly injured.

Through the night I sat beside my unconscious comrade in the flicker of the camp fires, listening to the dull, monotonous droning of the insects in the trees, and seeing faces in the embers, one face especially, a kind, thin face crowned with white hair weeping as I told her of Japple, her hunter son's death. The chill before dawn struck the earth. I turned to put some wood on the fire. Glaring in the grass a few yards away I saw two green phosphorescent eyes. I seized my Luger pistol and rose. Like a flash a lion sprang away before I could shoot. A little later the forest burst into thunderous roars. It seemed to be full of lions, which were attracted by the smell of the rhino's blood.

De Villiers did not die. He came through it all. He now organizes hunting expeditions into East Africa and in all probability he will be one of the Roosevelt party.

Treed by a Rhino Birthday Party.

The next day we continued our march. We had not gone far when a native brought in news of a fresh rhino spoor. I at once set out in search of the game. We were not ten minutes on the hunt when I smelled the peculiar odor of the rhino, which sometimes is very strong. I was down the wind—that is, the wind was blowing toward me from the rhino—so I was sure of getting a pretty good shot. A few minutes later I saw a long horn sticking through the high grass. It was motionless. The animal was waiting for us to pass. I took a chance aim and fired, hoping to hit a vital spot. My calculation was bad and the rhino scampered off at a gallop. I stood there cursing my luck when a grunt behind me nearly scared me out of my wits. I took no chances, but turned and ran. I hadn't gone 20 yards when I bumped on something in the grass and down I went. I grabbed my rifle and made for the nearest tree a few yards away. When I could get my breath I surveyed the scene from my point of vantage. I could see at least ten rhinos. The thing I fell over was a new-born baby rhino and it must have been its mother I shot at.

It is the habit of the pachydermata of Africa to collect around a female that is about to give birth to young. This is to protect the new-born weakling against the attacks of its enemies, and that is the sort of christening I ran into. I hated to interrupt the birthday party, but I couldn't let sentiment interfere with business, so I opened fire on the nearest rhino. He got it right through the heart and fell. I fired at a second and that also went down. While I was reloading my express the rest took fright and scampered off.

Narrow Escape from Crocodiles.

The summer before last I was hunting on the Kagera. We had eaten antelope for some time and the camp was anxious for a change, so I shot a hippo for food. It was an easy thing to do. I waited till it showed its head, and, bang! A spurt of blood and it was all over. As the water was deep, but not running, I knew that in the morning I ought to find my victim floating. At daybreak I was down at the river with a party of natives. As I expected, the hippo's body was floating, but, unluckily for us, on the opposite side of the river, which was teeming with crocodiles. I tried to persuaded some ofthe natives to go in with a rope and attach it so that we could draw the hippo over. No amount of persuasion would induce them to even put their feet in the river. At last, exasperated, I seized the end of the rope and jumped into the river, boots and all, and struck out for the hippo. I had gone about a hundred strokes when a cry from the bank caused me to look around. A cold toward me through the blue water, I shiver of horror ran through me, for 20 yards behind, gliding silently could distinguish the brown form of a crocodile.

"Shoot!" I cried. "Shoot!" as I put every bit of energy into my stroke. The crocodile must have been near me, for the bullets that were being fired from the bank commenced to burst into thunderous roars. It seemed to be full of lions, which were attracted by the smell of the rhino's blood.

At last I reached the dead hippo and managed to drag myself out of the water up on the slippery carcass. The exertion made my head swim. In a few minutes I was myself again. I apologized in silence to the black gentlemen on the river bank for doubting their courage. I had none left. I took my knife and cut a foothold on the carcass, and then rocked it so that it would drift to the shore. The natives told me that a well-directed bullet had hit the crocodile in the head.

The Enormous Cost of Hunting.

The cost of hunting big game in Africa is enormous. One must spend a fortune before firing the first shot. The various European colonies "protect" their game by charging 50 pounds sterling ($250) a year for a license which allows the hunter to kill two each of the pachydermata and from two to ten of the various species of antelopes. This does not protect the game, but it fills the local treasuries. Added to this is the price for porters, shikarees, headmen, etc., who have to accompany the hunter. The average expedition is made up of from 30 to 35 natives for each white man. The cost of equipping and maintaining an expedition is from $400 to $600 a month for each white hunter according to the district hunted in. One well-known concern with headquarters at Nairobi, that makes a business of hunting and expedition managing, equips and maintains an expedition on the field for $600 a month, supplying everything excepting arms and liquor.

No Tigers in Africa.

Of course when Mr. Roosevelt hunts, his expedition will hunt for everything his licenses will allow him to shoot. It will be amateur sport, not conducted from a financial point of view; there his equipment will probably be more costly than a professional one, but no better than the average sportsman uses in Africa. For instance, he will carry a taxidermist's outfit and cure and preserve his game immediately after it is shot.

As soon as a lion or leopard is killed the skin must be removed, cleaned, and treated with a taxidermic preparation of alum. Then to protect it from beetles, it must be soaked in turpentine and put in charge of a native runner, who takes it to the nearest post for preservation. Often when a skin arrives at its destination the numerous insects that infest the country have eaten it full of holes and it is absolutely worthless.

Speaking of carnivora and the other fauna of Africa, let me say for the benefit of the American writers, lecturers and artists who wish to pretend to a knowledge of African animal life that there are no yaks, alligators, kangaroors, turkeys, bears or tigers in Africa outside of a circus or a zoological garden. There are two species of rhinoceros, the hicornis or prehensile-lipped, and the simus or square-mouthed rhino. The latter, although almost as black as its relative, is called the white rhinoceros on account of a blue slaty tinge in its skin. To be exact, there is no such thing as a white rhinoceros. Both have two horns. The Asiatic rhinoceros has but one. Crocidiles and alligators differ greatly in appearance, and the latter do not live in Africa. The Asiatic elephant is also different in appearance from its African relative.

Now about tigers, which have been treated so freely as African game in recent American articles. It all depends on one's nationality whether or not there are tigers in Africa. The leopard is called a tiger (tiger) by the Boers, and so is the cheetah, just as a panther is called a tiger in some parts of the United States. The striped animal which is zoologically known as a tiger (tigris regalis) and which is the animal referred to in a number of recent stores, does not make its habitat in Africa, as the writers seem to think. So when a traveler speaks of lions, leopards and tigers seizing passengers from trains he is generally writing at long range with a misinformed imagination instead of facts. He makes a double mistake if he speaks of "tigers and leopards" in referring to African fauna, as in Africa they mean the same animal. I have never heard an Englishman or a Boer when speaking English call a leopard a tiger.

The most dangerous hunting occurs when one attempts to capture his animal alive. Many animals, harmless and timid under ordinary circumstances, become demons when captured. The mildest-looking antelope will put up a fierce fight when once over its first fright; the ostrich will kick a man to pieces, raining its blows with lightning-like rapidity. I do not know one African animal that can be called cowardly.

One has only to look at the formidable horns of all the African antelope to see that they are built to fight with, strong as iron and as sharp as a lance. I have seen an antelope attack a leopard, and even a lion, when its young is threatened. The gemsbok, or oryx, with its two sword-like horns, has dispatched many a lion. It is not uncommon to find a gemsbok and a lion dead beside each other, the mute evidence of a terrific encounter. The most dangerous animal of all to capture is the gorilla, as much on account of the country it inhabits as on account of its enormous strength, as the following incident will illustrate:

THE YELLOW FEVER-STAINED FACE OF DE VILLIERS LOOKED OVER THE HAMMOCK.

A Blood Curdling Gorilla Hunt.

I was commissioned by a German naturalist society to capture one of each species of African quadrumana. A German professor accompanied me on my expedition, which set forth in a direct line west from Dar es Salaam. We succeeded in getting some of each species, with the exception of the gorilla. For weeks we wandered about the country. It was in the rainy season, and the veld, which under ordinary circumstances afforded excellent traveling, became a swamp. With our long line of native porters we literally waded our way over the country for weeks, the black, oozy slush soaking into our bones and the clay under foot gripping like glue.

Such was the predicament we were in; the spirit of revolt and desertion had seized the caravan. I called the men together and told them we were going into the Congo forests where there was no doubt about capturing a gorilla. A smile of satisfaction swept over the natives' faces, and at sunrise we started for a three months' tramp to the west of the Tanganyika.

Arriving at a Belgian army post, a pigmy prisoner told us where we could find a gorilla, and an hour's travel from the post brought us to the place where the animal made its home. It was an ideal retreat, rank with rotting vegetation, the accumulations of centuries, reaching up to our knees. Snakes glided, hissing, out of the way, and lizards, green, blue and every color of the spectrum, bolted in fear to the tree tops and blinked at us with their little, glistening eyes from safe perches among the limbs. Monkeys looked in wonder and then scampered in thousands through the forest, screeching like wild fiends and swinging from tree to tree for such distances that they seemed to fly.

How a Jungle Looks.

Beautifully designed ferns grew under foot and crept caressingly up the great tree trunks. Flowers of fantastic beauty, weird shape, and almost maniacal expression grew up and hung down from the smooth, black, smoke-like vines exhaling from their hearts a hundred intoxicating odors which mixed with the sickening effluvia of decay.

Insects resembling flowers and leaves crawled over everything, twigs apparently walking up the trees and leaves apparently splitting and flying in all directions. Beetles with big, hypnotic eyes and bronze backs buzzed noisily around our heads, and beautiful birds vying with one another in brilliance of plumage sailed through the air, filling the dismal forest with their passion-laden songs. The constantly dripping sap spattered from leaf to leaf, soaking into the noxious earth. It was a scene, dread and fascinating, clamoring of life inviting one to death.

For four days we camped in this hotbed of disease. Beaters went out in all directions searching for the gorilla. At last some deep, wide scratches were found on a cluster of vines. On close examination the unmistakable hair of the gorilla was found on a broken twig. After some hours we found the tree where the gorilla lived. We could tell it by the greasy appearance of the bark, made so by the repeated rubbing of the gorilla's body. We could tell by the fresh marks, with sap still wet, that the animal had recently ascended the tree. The scratches were short and deep, showing that it had lifted itself up and not slid down, which would have made a long, shallow scratch.

We spread a strong net around the tree in a circle sloping upward on the outer side. Around the top of the net there were drawn ropes from four directions held by half a dozen natives hidden in the bush. These were to bring the top of the net together and thus bag our game.

After waiting some hours the leaves above rustled and then opened, as a six-foot male gorilla descended unsuspectingly and entered the trap. I signaled, the four ropes were pulled at once, and we had our animal—for a moment. He roared in fury, twisting, jumping, and biting the ropes into pieces. The natives were pulled about like dolls as he tried to reach first one and then another. The professor jumped about in excitement, trying to focus a camera on the infuriated animal.

At last the mighty arms of the gorilla broke a hole through the net and he tore the rest from him as though it were a rotten rag. Most of the natives fled in dismay. The professor dropped his camera and tried to escape; in a moment the gorilla grasped him in its terrible hands.

I seized my rifle and fired in the air to frighten the animal. In my position I could not shoot at him without hitting my friend. For a moment the gorilla stood still, holding the now unconscious man as though he were a baby, the brute's lips drawn back from his glistening teeth. I thrust another cartridge in my rifle. As I did so there was a buzz in the air, and an arrow, shot by a native, pierced the gorilla's side. A roar burst from his red throat and he dropped his victim. Like a flash, before I could shoot, a native sprang from the leaves and, half-throwing, half-thrusting, drove an assagai into the gorilla's heart. With a groan the brute fell dead.

Examining the professor, I found that his right arm was broken and that some of his ribs were crushed into his lungs. We gave up the effort to get a live gorilla and, placing the injured man in a hammock, carried him back toward the East coast. He died on the road. Out on the veld beside a native village a lonely little slab marked "Carl Bloch" sticks up above the grass. It is the professor's grave. Hunting is not all exciting adventure and laughing victory." It has its tears, like other things.

JOB WOULD KEEP HIM BUSY

Greenhorn Sailor Realized the Captain Had Given Him a Big Contract.

In the height of the recent wheat tumult Broker Patten, discussing the government's wheat estimates with a reporter, said calmly:

"But some of the men the government takes its figures from are greenhorns. Perfect greenhorns. As bad as the Dutch sailor, you know.

"The captain said to the sailor, when the ship came to port:

"'Take a boat, run ashore and buy two dollars' worth of vegetables.'

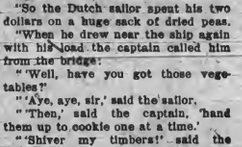
"The sailor didn't know what vegetables were, so as soon as he struck land he said to a 'longshoreman:

"'What is vegetables, mate?'

"'Oh, dried peas, for instance,' the 'longshoreman answered.

"So the Dutch sailor spent his two dollars on a huge sack of dried peas.

"When he drew near the ship again with his load the captain called him from the bridge:



"'Well, have you got those vegetables?'

"'Aye, aye, sir,' said the sailor.

"'Then,' said the captain, 'hand them up to cookie one at a time.'

"'Shiver my timbers!' said the sailor, 'I've got a job before me now, and no mistake!'"

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. Alvena Sperling, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

WOMEN SUFFER NEEDLESSLY

Many Mysterious Aches and Pains Are Easily Cured.

Backache, pain through the hips, dizzy spells, headaches, nervousness, bloating, etc., are troubles that commonly come from sick kidneys. Don't mistake the cause—Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women afflicted in this way—by curing the kidneys. Mrs. C. R. Foresman, 113 S. Eighth St., Canon City, Colo., says: "Three years I suffered with rheumatism, dropsy and kidney complaint, and became utterly helpless. I found relief after using two or three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and kept on until cured. Doan's Kidney Pills have been a blessing to me."

The Head on the Wall

Judith Giveth Token of Certain Victory.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Difficulties in Book of Judith.—There are two conflicting statements as to the original language of the book. Origen speaks of it, together with Tobit, as "not existing in Hebrew even among the Apocrypha," in the Hebrew collection, while Jerome, on the other hand, says that "Among the Hebrews the Book of Judith . . . being written in the Chaldean language is reckoned among the histories." There can be little doubt that the book was written in Palestine in the national dialect (Syro-Chaldaic). The text exists at present in two distinct recensions, the Greek (followed by the Syriac), and the Latin. The former evidently is the truer representative of the original, and it seems certain that the Latin was derived, in the main, from the Greek by a series of successive alterations. The Latin text contains many curious errors. At present it is impossible to determine the authentic text. The existence of these various recensions of the book is a proof of its popularity and wide circulation; but the external evidence of its use is very scanty. The first reference to its contents occurs in Clem. Rom., and it is quoted with marked respect by Origen, Hilary and Lucifer. Jerome speaks of it as "reckoned among the sacred Scriptures by the Synod of Nice." It has been wrongly inserted in the catalogue at the close of the Apostolic Canons.

SERMONETTE.

"And when he (Achior) came and saw the head of Holofernes, and perceived all that the God of Israel had done, he believed in God greatly and was joined unto the house of Israel."

Oh, but you say, it was Judith who had wrought so mightily. Why speak so explicitly of God and ascribe to him all the credit?

Did you never observe that he who really works the works of God is lost in the shadows of the Almighty's presence.

While we may be conscious of the human instrument which has become the willing channel through which God has poured his power and has wrought mightily among men, still there is the larger, more blessed thought that it is God who has wrought.

The head on the wall is not the symbol of the woman's power, but rather the strength of God as manifested in the weakness and frailty of a woman.

Achior, the captain of all the forces of the Ammonities, had been summoned before Holofernes, the captain of the Assyrian forces which had come and laid siege to Bethulia, and in answer to questions of the great general he had given a history of the Jewish people and how God had worked mightily in their behalf. This aroused the anger of Holofernes, and declaring that if the Hebrew God was such a great God, Achior should find refuge within the walls of Bethulia, but when his army swept away its walls and fell upon the people he (Achior) should be the first to suffer death. And Achior believed the power of Holofernes and waited in fear and trembling during those days while Judith carried out her plot. And "when he say the head of Holofernes he believed in the God of Israel."

The deliverance of the city was a great reward for Judith's devotion, but perhaps a greater reward was the winning of a soul from the darkness of heathenism to the knowledge of the true God, so that from that day forth Achior, the great captain of the Ammonites, chose the God Israel as his God and joined himself unto Israel.

THE STORY.

"CALL Achior!" The command of Ozias sounded sharp and clear on the early morning air, and the scurrying feet told of the eager effort to obey.

The little group stood within the space about the great massive gates of the city which but a short time before had swung on their hinges and admitted Judith and her maid who five days before had gone forth taking their lives in their hands that they might serve the city they loved. And that their efforts had not been in vain was evident from the ghastly trophy which one of the group held in his hand.

"Hang it upon the wall," Judith had said as she had passed on and after the first thrill of excitement had subsided and the ruler and princes of the city had regained somewhat of their composure, Ozias had bethought himself of Achior, the Ammonite chief whom Holofernes had consigned to the city to await death when the city should be taken by his soldiers, and had commanded that he be brought.

"At last the hour has come," muttered Achior, as he followed the messengers back through the streets in the direction of the city's gate. "But, I, Achior, the Ammonite chief, will ... them how a true soldier ...

The light was just beginning to break in the east, and in the half darkness which still lingered Achior could not distinguish the faces of the group standing near the gate nor discern the central object of interest until he was fairly in their midst, and could have reached out and touched the arm which held the something before the eyes of the assembled group.

"Ye gods of the Assyrians, it is the head of Holofernes," and trembling like an aspen he fell upon his face to the ground.

Here was the head of the man he had feared above all others, the mighty Assyrian general, whom he had expected had come to demand his life. A mighty revulsion of feeling swept over him.

"How can it be?" he exclaimed, at last.

And when Judith had been summoned and she had related in his ear all that God had wrought through her he fell at her feet and reverenced her, saying:

"Blessed art thou in all the tabernacle of Judah, and in all nations, which hearing thy name shall be astonished."

And as soon as the morning arose they hanged the head of Holofernes upon the wall, and every man took his weapons and they went forth by bands unto the passes of the mountain which lead into the valley below towards the camp of the Assyrians.

But when the Assyrians saw them they raised a great shout, and sent to their leaders, which in turn came to their captains and tribunes and to every one of their rulers. So they came to Holofernes' tent and cried to Bagoas, who had charge of all his things:

"Waken now our lord; for the dogs of the Hebrews have been bold to come down against us to battle. Let us at them that they may be utterly destroyed."

Then went Bagoas and knocked at the tent door of his master, but there came no response.

"He sleepeth, deeply," he said, and knocked harder, and yet harder, for he was loath to enter thinking that Judith was with him within the tent. But at last he made bold to enter and the ghastly sight which met his eyes caused him to utter a shriek which pierced to the limits of the officers' quarters and caused a great fear to come upon the hearts of the captains who waited without. Nay, the cry had scarce begun to die away when they rushed into the tent and saw their chief lying headless upon the floor.

Like mad Bagoas tore into the tent of Judith adjoining, followed by the terror-stricken captains. It was empty.

"These slaves of Hebrews have dealt treacherously," cried Bagoas, in fear and anger. "One woman of the Hebrews hath brought shame upon the house of King Nebuchadnezzar; for behold, Holofernes lieth upon the ground without a head."

And fear fell upon them all, so that there was no man that durst abide in the sight of his neighbor, but in panic stricken fear each soldier in the camp fled into the plain and scattered every one his own way. Then sent Ozias the ruler of Bethulia in great haste to all the cities and country round telling of all the things which had come to pass and the Hebrews in all the coasts of Israel came forth, and with one consent they slew their enemies until they were passed Damascus and the borders thereof.

And the residue that dwelt at Bethulia fell upon the camp of Assur and spoiled it of all its treasure. And the children of Israel that returned from the slaughter, had that which remained, for there was abundance for all, for the spoil was very great.

Then Joacim the high priest and the ancients of the children of Israel that dwelt in Jerusalem, came forth to Bethulia to behold the good things that God had showed to Israel and to see Judith, whose fame had spread through all the country. And when they had come to her they blessed her with one accord and said unto her:

"Thou art the exalted of Jerusalem, thou art the great glory of Israel, thou art the great rejoicing of our nation. Thou hast done all these things by thine hand. Thou hast done much good in Israel, and God is pleased with thee. Blessed be thou of the Almighty Lord for ever more."

And all the people shouted:

"So be it."

And the people spoiled the camp the space of 30 days; and they gave unto Judith Holofernes' tent, and all his plate, and beds and vessels and his stuff, and she took it and laid it on her mule, and made ready her carts and laid them thereon. Then all the women of Israel ran together to see her, and blessed her, and made a dance among them for her. And she took branches in her hand and gave also to the women that were with her. And they put a garland of olive upon her and her maid that was with her, and she went forth before all the people in the dance leading all the women. And Judith dedicated all the stuff of Holofernes which the people had given her and gave the canopy which she had taken out of his bed chamber, for a gift to the Lord. So the people continued feasting in Jerusalem before the sanctuary for the space of three months, and Judith remained with them.

And after this every one returned to his own inheritance and Judith went to Bethulia, and remained in her own possession, and was in her time honorable in all the country.

FORTUNE FROM TWO WATCHES

Lucky Deal He Didn't Want to Make Brought Wealth to Jeweler of Seattle.

Two watches, one worth $90 and the other $50, traded a little unwillingly for two tracts of land near Seattle, one ten and the other five acres, about thirty-eight years ago, has piled up a fortune for John B. Miller, who formerly had a jewelry store in Portland, a Seattle dispatch says.

Mr. Miller had a watch store on the West side when Seattle had a population of about 2,000. A friend came in and wanted to trade ten acres near Seattle for a watch. Miller was not anxious to trade, but finally consented and secured a deed to the land, for which he gave a $90 watch. Shortly afterward the man came into the store again and said his wife wanted a watch and offered to trade a five-acre tract adjoining the first ten. Miller finally consented and got a deed to the property.

The land was then some distance out from Seattle and was really of little value, but Miller clung to it. About twelve years ago he was offered $4,000, but he refused to sell, although his friends urged him to do so. He went over to Seattle several years ago and has sold from the five-acre tract $27,000 worth of lots and out of the ten acres $50,000 worth. He still holds 17 lots.

What a Man May Do.

I know of one conspicuous example of what may be done by men of inherited fortune. A young man of ample means who did not wish to engage in any business pursuit thoroughly educated himself here and abroad at the universities. He then made himself master of a technical pursuit by the study of forestry abroad. After a year or two of professional work he relinquished it to accept a responsible position in the government, where he is now rendering great and highly appreciated service in working out the best policy for conserving our forests and other natural resources.—From A. Barton Hepburns "The American Business Man," in the Century.

German Prince Now Merchant.

Prince Henry XXXII. of Reuss has just passed his examination at the Commercial academy at Cologne whereby he secures a diploma as a qualified merchant. The prince, who has been studying at the Cologne commercial college for two years, is the first prince in Germany who has trained himself for a commercial career. He will follow up his successful examination by entering the office of a great Hamburg merchant as a voluntary unpaid clerk, and in this capacity he will serve his apprenticeship. His choice of a business calling is regarded as a remarkable sign of the times.

His Dishonest Hair.

"That man," he was telling her, "is a scoundrel. He hasn't an honest hair in his head."

"From here," she commented, "it looks as if he hadn't any hair to speak of. It's a pity that what he has can't be just a little bit honest."

Necessity for Plainness.

"He's very plain in his speech. He calles a spade a spade." "Well, he would hardly get one in a hardware store if he called it a planola, would he?"

When Some People Use It.

A little boy was asked by his teacher to define the fluid known to chemists as H2O. Almost without hesitation, the bright little chap answered: "Water is a colorless liquid which becomes dark when you wash your hands in it."—Lippincott's.

Courtesy.

"Don't keep me out in this night air," wailed the fair hold-up victim, "I'll catch my death of cold." Whereupon the gentlemanly robber covered her with his gun.

What you can do on 10 acres

You have read of the big profits being made by growers in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas. Has it occurred to you to consider what you could do under similar circumstances? Isn't it reasonable to suppose that you can do as well?

If you should go to the Gulf Coast Country of Texas and buy a 10-acre tract this is what you might reasonably expect, if you do as well as the average—for these are not fanciful figures—but the actual average results, carefully figured from the yields of a large number of growers in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas:

WINTER CROPS		SUMMER CROPS—Same Land
3 a Bermuda Onions,	$939.00
1 a Cauliflower,	793.00	2 a Indian Corn,	$ 44.50
2 a Cabbage,	254.00
1 a Potatoes,	380.00	2 a Peanuts,	160.00
1 a Cucumbers,	246.00
1-2 a Celery,	456.00	5 a Cotton,	310.00
1-2 a Egg Plant,	400.00
1 a Peppers,	1000.00	1 a Sorghum,	75.00
10 acres Total	$4468.00	Total yield from 10 a,	$5057.50

The expense of raising these crops is not great, for you will not need much help on 10 acres. You can do what others are doing. Go, see for yourself. Very low excursion fares twice a month via Rock Island-Frisco Lines. The trip itself will be a pleasure. The climate is a marvel to all—winters mild and sunny—summers pleasantly cooled by Gulf breezes. Can you afford to miss such an opportunity?

Write to-night for full information about the big profits growers are making in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas, and set of colored post cards.

Miss Nina McKean, of Cincinnati, arrived here last week on a visit to her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. F. Chambers.

Fred Miller, who has been at Landing, assisting as a clerk in the store of his father, John C. Miller, returned home here last week.

Mrs. Harvey Nelson and little son, Attilla, spent part of last week at Williamstown, guests of her parents, Rev. J. B. Wills and wife.

JOE REED, Walton, Ky.

W. B. Norman, who is engaged in the general merchandise business at Harveysburg, Ohio, spent part of the week here with home folks.

C. Pressley Adams spent last Friday on the Cincinnati cattle market and bought sixteen head of feeding cattle for J. G. Tomlin for his farm at $4 per cwt.

The big, new saw mill of Geo. W. Maines, being erected near the L. & N. Railroad depot, is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready to run by July 10th.

S. C. Hicks sold to Bud Smith, of Cynthiana, last week, two fine five year old bay geldings by Bracken Chief for $650. The geldings were handled by Chas. T. Best.

Benj. B. Allphin returned home last week from East St. Louis where he bought a car load of cattle and colts for his trade, unloading them here for his farm on Thursday.

Mrs. Ruth Roberts and Miss Lizzie Roberts were at Owenton part of last week attending the funeral of Mrs. W. Hind Roberts, wife of their brother, who died at her home at Owenton, June 16th, aged 72 years.

Raymond Byland, the clever cashier of the Richwood Deposit Bank, has been quite ill the past week, confined to his home here, and his father Hon. John C. Byland is attending to his duties at the bank.

Dr. Robert H. Herndon and sister, Miss Sallie, were guests of their sister, Mrs. J. G. Tomlin, a part of last week, coming out in their automobile. Mrs. Tomlin is still sick, but we are pleased to note that she is improving.

The town was enlivened by a religious band Friday and Saturday that entertained with musical selections on an organ, cornet and bass drum, following which the members, a man and woman and three children, made a religious exhortation to the people assembled.

Rev. D. T. Buck attended the 17th annual convention of the Grant county Sunday schools at the new Christian church at Crittenden, last Thursday and Friday, and reports a delightful convention and a large attendance of excellent people. Rev. Buck preached at Berry Station Saturday and Sunday.

DENTISTRY—I have opened a dental office in the Equitable Bank building at Walton, and will be there Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, prepared to do all kinds of dental work in a satisfactory manner. I will be at Verona on Monday, and at Crittenden on Tuesday.

HARRY HAMILTON, D. D. S.

Samuel C. Hicks received a part of his purchase of wool, bought by himself and R. Lee Huey, of Landing, at Richwood, last Thursday, and at Verona on Friday, and shipped a large consignment to Philadelphia, where it goes direct into the hands of the manufacturers. Frank Mitchell was at both places to receive the wool for his firm, Coffin & Co., of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Mollie Roswell, of near Sparta, spent part of last week here the guest of Mrs. A. B. Tompkins and family, enroute home from Norwood, Ohio, where her son Charles Roswell is employed in an electrical works. He is a graduate of the Kentucky State College, and, by the way, there are quite a number of [illegible] young men employed in the [illegible] of Cincinnati large cities [illegible] our state Col-

The first team defeated the Erlanger Stumps 7 to 5. The second team defeated Florence 10 to 9.

Dr. Waller S. Herndon, of Lexington, and Miss Sallie Herndon, of Ludlow, were guests of Judge and Mrs. J. G. Tomlin, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Vest and their daughter, Miss Mary, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Coffman, of Cincinnati, were guests of Mrs. Alice Booth, Sunday.

Miss Georgia Carroll, who has been attending school at Louisville, arrived here Wednesday enroute to her home at Big Bone Springs to spend her vacation.

The Children's Home Mission Society of the Methodist church, was most enjoyably entertained last Sunday by one of its members, Miss Emma Jane Miller, at the hospitable home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller. The president, Miss Pearl Johnson and 15 members were present. Nice refreshments were served and an interesting program was discussed.

Rev. Minor S. Clark, pastor of the Methodist church at Carrollton, was here Monday enroute home from Williamstown, where he was formerly located. Rev. Clark is one of the finest pastors in the Kentucky Conference, and everywhere he has been stationed he has left a valuable impression for the excellent work he has accomplished.

Monday the sad news reached here of the death of Mrs. Maud Miller Jones, which took place at St. Anthony's Hospital in Louisville, that morning about 6 o'clock. She had been ill for some time with an internal trouble, and was taken to Cincinnati by her husband, Harry F. Jones for treatment, and it was afterwards decided to take her to Louisville, where a surgical operation was performed Monday, June 14th, and there was every indication that she would recover, but a sudden change for the worse brought her bright young life to an end, and has saddened the hearts of a large circle of friends. Mrs. Jones was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodford R. Miller, of this place, and was born at Big Bone Springs, January 17th, 1886, and was 23 years, 5 months and 5 days old at the time of her death. She was married to Harry F. Jones, October 15th, 1902, and the husband and four small children mourn the loss of a devoted wife and an affectionate mother. The children are Christine, Charles, James and Harry Fred. The remains were brought to her old home at Big Bone Springs Monday night, and the funeral will take place this morning at Hughes Chapel, Rev. B. H. Nelson of the M. E. Church conducting the services The many friends of the bereaved relatives tender their heartfelt sympathy in their great sorrow.

EDWARDS BROS., Walton, Ky.

GRANT.

Born, to Leslie Wingate and wife on the 13th inst., a girl.

W. B. Arnold made himself a present of a fine, new rubber tired buggy, one day last week.

The fine weather the past week helped the farmers to get the best of the weeds that were in their crops.

Miss Irene Cook, Mrs. Dede Pope and Dr. Williamson were guests of your reporter and wife last Wednesday.

Mrs. Belle Clore had as guests, Wednesday, Dr. Hopkins and wife, of Rabbit Hash, and her mother, Mrs. Lamora Huey.

Sol Long took a load of the local ball fans to Rising Sun, Sunday, to see a game between Rising Sun and a city team. The Sunners didn't have a look in. Score 8 to 0.

Evergrene Rebekah Lodge will give an icecream festival at the Odd-Fellows' Hall on Saturday, June 26, for the benefit of the lodge. Doors open from 4 to 11. A cordial invitation is extended all.

Two river thieves stole five gallons of paint from Wm W. Grant, Sunday morning, and Mr. Grant and a party of citizens gave chase in Sol Long's gasoline yacht. The thieves were in a skiff and had about an hour's start of the pursuing party. They were sighted at Hamilton, headed for the Indiana shore, which they made in safety. They suspected they were being pursued by the party in the yacht, and took to the bushes and concealed themselves. It took Mr. Grant and his party some time to locate the thieves, who confessed to the theft after being threatened with hanging or shooting. They said they threw the paint in the river at McVille. They were told to get on down the river as fast as possible, and they made good. They gave Mr. Grant a large monkey wrench which they had probably stolen from someone up the rive. The pursuing party was composed of Sol Long, Pepper Smith, Morris Rice, Forest Rice, Will Grant, Dr. Perkins and Harve Smith.

Belleview	1	0	0	1	1	3	0	0	0	0—6

Base on balls—off O'Donnel 2.
Earned runs—Hebron 3; Belleview 5. Two base hits—Brady and Berkshire. Base hits—McCarty, Stucky 2, Wingate 1, Berkshire, Rogers 2 Smith, Clore 2. Hebron—Fox, Ryle, Sprague, Vance, Goodridge. Wild pitch—O'Donnel. Passed balls—Hogan 4, McCarty 1. Errors—Belleview 12, Hebron 6. Struck out by Brady 12, O'Donnel 6. Double plays—Belleview 3, Hebron 1. Batteries—Brady and McCarty. O'Donnel and Hogan. Unpires—Tanner and Rogers.

NOTES.

A large crowd witnessed the contest.

Ed Sandford made a sensational catch of a long drive to right field which he turned into a double play by a long throw to first base.

IDLEWILD.

June 25.—If evils did not exist remedies would not be necessary.

W. L. Cropper and family were visiting relatives in Erlanger, Thursday.

Born, June 24th, to Robert McGuire and wife, of Ashby, a nice baby girl.

If remedies were not necessary people would not endeavor to discover them.

W. A. Price, of Erlanger, spent Wednesday night with his son, Carl, of Oak Knoll.

Mrs. Clinton Gaines was visiting her brother in Lawrenceburg, Saturday night and Sunday.

Walter Swaney, of Francesville, was circulating among relatives at Petersburg, last Sunday.

Ernest Brown and wife, of Bullittsville, spent Sunday with papa and mamma Brown, of Idlewild.

Large audience and a splendid sermon at Bullittsburg last Sunday. Sermon was highly praised by many.

Ed Lonlaker, of Bullittsville, has a very sick baby. His mother and sister were with them Wednesday night.

Mrs. Hall and daughter, Myrtle, of Gaines Heights, were guests Saturday night and Sunday of John Feeley and wife, of Weneeda.

Jack McMurray and wife spent Sunday with their aunt, Mrs. McIntosh, who is very sick. On their return they reported her no better.

Mrs. Fletcher Clore returned from an extended visit to her son and wife at Rushville, Ind., last Monday. She reported a pleasant visit.

Doctor Hays took T. C. Masters' little boy to Dr. D. Y. Vail, an eye specialist in Cincinnati. The boy has some eye trouble. Went up last Saturday.

The horse Robt. Grant advertised a couple of weeks since has not yet been sold. He is still for sale, and will be sold at some price. Here is a bargain for some one.

James and Lee Masters, of Bullittsville, champion fence builders, of Boone county, are building a wire fence on the east side of the pike, starting at the line of B. C. Graddy and running down the pike to the line of Ben R. Gaines. Quite a string of it.

Luther Scothorn and wife, of Idlewild, called on papa and mamma Scothorn, of Francesville, Sunday evening. Mr. Scothorn is a slave all week, scarcely getting time to eat and sleep, and it is refreshing and a pleasure for him to call on Sunday for a drive behind his flyer.

A goodly number of the members of the Bullittsburg church gave their minister, Rev. C. V. Brooks, a house warming Tuesday afternoon We think heart warming would be a more appropriate name. During the evening a Mission Society was organized. A pleasant and profitable time was had. All returned home happy because of having made others happy.

Mrs. William Hall, of Gaines Heights, entertained a large crowd Thursday as follows: Mrs. John Feeley and Mrs. Charles Utzinger, of Weneeda—three ladies including the hostess. They will average 225 pounds and we call that a large crowd. By the way, three better looking, kinder and more sociable ladies are not met every day. We know whereof we speak.

HERE AND THERE.

The harvest of the golden grain will be begun this week.

The wind and rain, last Thursday night, did considerable damage to the oats crop, where the straw was heavy.

Local bee men say the bees have put out a large number of colonies this summer, but they have made very little honey.

Some of the farmers finished putting up their first crop of alfalfa last week. Others who did the work early, now have a second crop ready for the machine.

Hewett Bros., are talking of leasing John Baldon's threshing outfit for the season. Mr. Baldon is in Colorado, and will not return to use it. In a letter to a friend, recently, he said he succeeded in securing a tract of timber that he was trying to contract for, he would have his engine and sawmill shipped to Colorado next fall.

M. O. Stephens and wife entertained the following guests last Sunday a week: Homer McCrander and wife and little daughter, Anna, of Gunpowder; Mrs. Anna Bradford, of Florence; Miss Eva Akin, of lower Woolper and Messrs. J. J. and R. C. Aylor and sisters Pearl, Grace, Emma and Georgia, of Ashby. In the evening the young folks accompanied the Misses Aylor to their home, where they were pleasantly entertained until bed time.

Drs. O. S. Crisler, of Burlington, and Jackson, of Lawrenceburg, were called to Plattsburg, Sunday, to diagnose a case of lameness in the foot of Bernard Sebree's young mare. Dr. Crisler was first sent for but he being young in the profession, and the case a serious one, he was afraid to risk his own judgment and Dr. Jackson was sent for. When Dr. Jackson arrived it was found that Dr. Crisler had diagnosed the case correctly. It was pronounced a bruise in the foot and barring complications will cause no more serious trouble.

DEVON.

Jim Carey was the guest of Jerry Conrad Sunday.

Miss Sophia Reish entertained her sister, Miss Rosa Reish, with a miscellaneous shower last Saturday evening. Mrs. J. Grabow followed with a kitchen shower last Thursday afternoon. Miss Reish is to be married the 30th of June.

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or Kidney trouble show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

MIDWAY.

Last Friday morning the people of the neighborhood assembled at the home of Harry Jones, equipped with hoes, and during the day cleaned out 15 acres of very weedy corn and six acres of tobacco. Mr. Jones, like many others, was a little over cropped for the kind of a season and the hinderances occasioned by the sad sickness and death of his young wife of which this paper gave an account last week, made it impossible for him to handle his crop as it should be. Mr. Jones desires through the columns of this paper to thank the many friends, who so kindly and gratultuously came to his rescue, and especially those who showed him such expressions of kindness during the sickness and death of his dear wife, to those he knows no words to express his gratitude. He also desires to thank the undertaker, Scott Chambers for the feeling manner in which he conducted the funeral and Bros. Nelson and Bedinger for the consoling remarks, also the Big Bone choir for their beautiful singing.

HEBRON.

Mrs. Mary Aylor and sons spent Sunday with Martin Aylor and family.

Fred Seikman and family were Sunday guests of Boy Goodridge and wife.

The Gunpowder Convention.

On Saturday, June 19th, Rev. Allie Stith, of Burlington, called the meeting to order, while Bro. McMullian opened the meeting. For moderator and secretary, Rev. C. S. Ellis, of Latonia, and myself, were elected respectively. The devotional part of the meeting was led by Rev. C. S. Ellis, who read Malachi iii. There were two prayers, one by Rev. Allie Stith and the other by Rev. W. A. Burns, of Madison Avenue Baptist church, Covington. The first topic, "Who Should Conduct the Teacher's Meeting," was well put and was strictly to the point and was backed up with scripture. Rev. Ellis led the discusion and Rev. Burns made a reply. The morning session was dismissed by prayer by Rev. McMillian The afternoon session was opened by two songs. Bro. Smith (licentiate) opened with prayer. The first topic was, "Why Every School Should have a Home Department," and it was ably and aptly set forward by Bro. Wayman, of Walton, (licentiate.) Discussions were made by Rev. McMillan, Rev. Stith, Bro. Webb and Rev. Ellis. Bro. Wayman made a reply. The second topic under discussion, "The Sunday School a Force in Present Day Temperance Movement," was led by myself and the discussions were made by Revs. Stith and Burns. After open questions and discussions, a collection was taken, and dismissed by prayer. The Gunpowder people well displayed their "Southern blood" in their hospitality and kindness to all, who were at the convention.

Several months ago the postal department at Washington was asked to make a change in rural route No. 2. Considerable correspondence was done by the department in regard to the change, but nothing having been heard in regard to the matter for some time, it was thought the application had been pigeonholed. But a few days since notice was received by the postmistress at Burlington that the change had been granted to take effect July 1st, which is next Thursday. This additional distance, which is two miles, will give Mr. Coneley, the carrier, an increase in his salary, bringing it up to $900 a year. All are glad to see Mr. Coneley's pay increased with but little additional labor. Instead of going across the hill from W. C. Weaver's, after July 1st the route will go down Gunpowder creek to the old mill site at John Ryle's, thence to Clarence Mitchell's, thence with the present route again south.

Union's Traction Road.

The parties who are pushing the traction road which it is proposed to construct from Covington to Big Bone via Union are growing stronger day by day in the belief that the road will be a go. They claim that within three days after the right of way is obtained the money necessary to build the road can be secured. With prospects so flattering there is no reason why the Union and Big Bone people should not be stimulated to doing everything in their power to land the right of way. Nothing would be so beneficial to the territory it is proposed to penetrate as a traction road, and if the people permits a failure to get the right of way to thwart the building of the road they will never regret it but once.

A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheny, Wash. was saved from a frightful death is a story worth the world. "I had a hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to Los Angelis, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough its supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, Ky.

H. B. Howe, agent for the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, is on the road this week taking application for renewals of policies and at the same time hunting new business.

Mack Aylor, of Lawrenceburg, was in Burlington, Sunday, enroute to W. C. Weaver's. He has been in bad health for some time, and he hopes to be benefitted by a few weeks' visiting among his Boone county relatives and the inhaling of the ozone that is wafted over Kentucky's hills and through her valleys.

Prof. A. C. Collins, for many years a teacher in the schools of this county, but now the principal of the Fifth District School in Covington, has recently been honored by the State University at Lexington, the faculty of which conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. The degree is signed by J. K. Patterson, President of the University, and by Governor A. E. Wilson as President of the Board of Trustees.

Rev. and Mrs. Edgar D. Jones and children, of Bloomington, Illiuois, are expected to arrive this week for their annual outing with Mrs. Jones' parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Willis, of Bullittsburg. Rev. Jones has just completed his third year as pastor of the First Christian church of Bloomington. Besides his heavy duties as pastor, Mr. Jones gives considerable time to platform work, and is to lecture next season under the management of the Chicago Mutual Lyceum Bureau.

R. Clark Perkins and wife, of Lincoln, Nebraska, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Rouse. Mr. Perkins is Secreatary of the Nebraska State Railroad Commission at a good salary, which position came to him as a partial reward for the hard work he did editorially for the Republican party of his State during his fourteen years' experience as owner and manager of the St. Paul Republican. Mr. Perkins is only about thirty-five years of age and has a very promising future before him. His father, Richard Perkins, is a son of the late James Perkins, who, for many years, was jailer of this county, while his mother is a daughter of the late Arthur Blythe, of this town, consequently people here feel an interest in him.

Indians at Erlanger.

The Nebraska Indians will be at Erlanger Park Saturday afternoon, July 3d for a game with the Erlanger team. It is a treat to see this band of full blood warriors play the national game, and the e will be a big crowd out to see them. They have visited Burlington on several occasions, and the public knows they can play ball. They are still under the management of Guy Green and are captained by Tobey.

SEEK HIDDEN TREASURE.

A romantic story of supposed hidden treasure, quite in the style of Edgar Allan Poe, comes from Choenberg in Moravia. The tower of the ancient Rathaus, despite the protests of the Vienna Conservatives, was lately demolished, as it was declared to be unsafe. As the ruhhish was being removed a document was found in a hollow stone stating that during the thirty years' war the town funds were bricked up in a certain part of the Rathaus. The place could be seen when at a certain hour on a certain day the shadow of the Rathaus spire fell upon it. The town council has resolved to find the shadow hy hulding a scaffold of the same height and form. Much excitement prevails, and many bets are heing taken. Some people suppose that the document was inserted hy a workman, and they believe that after the war the treasure was recovered.

The success of a wireless transmission experiment at Omaha, where 4,000 lamps at the electrical show were lighted for four hours hy a current sent to them without wires is something to cause uneasiness among the holders of shares in electric lighting companies, and carry a feeling of satisfaction to municipalities which have refused to be tempted into street lighting ventures.

A queer complaint, made hy a citizen of Los Angeles, emphasizes the march of progress in this age. The compiaint is to the effect that owing to the popularity of aviation in the city, appropriately named of the Angels, the sand from balloons is thrown down over the lawns and freshly-painted flats, instead of in the garbage cans provided for city refuse.

Says the New York law under which the chauffeur was convicted after killing the boy: "The killing of a human being by an act imminently dangerous to others, and evincing a depraved mind, regardless of human life, although without a premeditated design, is punishahle by a verdict of murder in the first degree." That seems to fit the case very nicely.

Boston women are, discussing the question of whether beauty and hrains go together. Ancient history lends its aid to modern gallantry to make the answer easy. Of course they do. The Greeks were noted no less for their art and philosophy than for their physical graces. Beauty and brains are natural affinities, as much as pork and beans.

SENATE HAS TAX IDEA

TWO PER CENT. ASSESSMENT FOR EVERY CORPORATION PROVIDED IN TAFT PLAN.

CONCERNS GET EXEMPTION

Will Be Benefited by $5,000 Provision Which is to Be in Force Until Act Becomes Effective—President Is Author.

Washington. — President Taft's much heralded corporation tax plan was presented to the senate hy Senator Aldrich, chairman of the finance committee and was ordered printed as a committee amendment to the tariff bill.

Briefly stated, the plan imposes a tax of two per cent. upon the net earnings of every corporation, joint stock company or association, organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares, and every insurance company, organizer under the laws of the United States or of any state, territory, or district, or organized under the laws of any foreign country and engaged in business within the United States.

Every latitude is given to concerns subject to the tax for the exemption of expenses, cost of maintenance, the depreciation of property, debts and the interest thereon, other forms of taxation and all expenditures usually taken from earnings' accounts. Every corporation is also given an exemption of $5,000 of earnings before the tax shall apply.

Commissioner to Collect.

All of the machinery relating to the collection, remission and refund of internal revenue taxes is made applicable to the corporation tax and the responsihility for the enforcement of the proposed law rests with the commissioner of internal revenue in the same manner as other internal taxes.

While the corporations are required to supply information of a most intimate character relating to their husiness, provision is made to safeguard them against wrongful use of data obtained for the purpose of assessing the tax. Penalties are provided in cases of false or fraudulent returns.

Practically every character of incorporated institution organized for profit is brought within the provisions of the corporation tax.

Defines Taxable Concerns.

The provision defining the concerns from which the tax will be collected is as folows:

"That every corporation, joint stock company or association, organized for profit and having a capital stock represented hy shares, and every insurance company, now or hereafter organized under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory of the United States, or under the acts of congress applicahle to Alaska or the District of Columbia, or organized under the laws of any foreign country and engaged in business in any state or territory of the United States or in Alaska or in the District of Columbia, shall be subject to pay anually a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, equivalent to two percentum upon the entire net income, over and above $5,000, received by it from all sources during such year.

"This is exclusive of amounts received by it as dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations, or insurance companies subject to the tax hereby imposed, or if organized under the laws of any foreign country, upon the amount of net income, over and above $5,000, received by it from business transacted and capital invested within the United States and its territories, Alaska and the District of Columbia, during such year, exclusive of amounts so received by it as dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations or insurance companies, subject to the tax hereby imposed.

"Such net income shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of the income of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company from all sources."

EARTHQUAKE SHAKES WEST.

District, Supposedly Out of Zone of Seismic Disturbances, Feels Terrific Tremor of Ground.

Grass Valley, Cal. — An earthquake, the most severe shock experienced here in several years, occurred in this vicinity. A second and lighter shock came at 11:49 p. m.

Reports from Marysville, Nevada City, Chico and Colfax say that those towns were also shaken.

Reno, N. M. — An earthquake shock was felt here. While it was one of the heaviest experienced here, no damage was done. This section of the country has heretofore heen considered as being out of the earthquake zone.

MRS. GOULD WINS HER SUIT

GETS SEPARATION AND $36,000 A YEAR.

New York. — Justice Dowling in the supreme court decided that the charges of intoxication and improper conduct against Mrs. Howard Gould had not been proved and granted the legal separation for which she sued the multi-millionaire son of Jay Gould.

With the exception of alimony, her victory was complete, but in this phase of the case the court decided that $36,000 a year was sufficient, although in her suit Mrs. Gould asked for $250,000. She has been receiving $25,000 a year from Mr. Gould, so that the amount fixed hy the court is but a slight increase compared with the amount sued for. If Mrs. Gould returns to the stage the amount may be reduced.

Immediately after the decision, De Lancey Nicoll, for Mr. Gould, asked for a 60-day stay of judgment and Clarence J. Shearn, for the plaintiff, asked for an immediate judgment. Justice Dowling compromised by making the stay 30 days.

Howard Gould hurried from the room as soon as the decision was given and declined to discuss the case. Mrs. Gould left the court with Mr. Shearn and drove away in an automobile.

Mr. Shearn, jubilant at the decision, was eager to discuss it.

"Judge Dowling's decision," he said, "is a sweeping and complete vindication of Mrs. Gould. That has been the object of all this bitter litigation. Mrs. Gould could have compromised for a fortune at any time but would never consider for a moment anything but the opportunity of clearing her name in an open, public trial."

Mrs. Gould issued the following statement:

"I am the happiest woman living because I have heen so completely vindicated hefore the entire world of all these horrible charges. Not one little pang shot through my heart at the smallness of the allowance—only supreme joy and the deepest gratitude. I send a thousand loving thanks to all who have helped me."

NINE TOURISTS DROWNED.

Five Americans and Four English Perish in Killarney Lake—Two Boatmen Lose Lives.

Killarney, Ireland. — A large rowboat carrying five American and four English tourists and four Irish boatmen, was swamped in a gale while crossing Lower Killarney lake Wednesday afternoon. All of the tourists and two of the hoatmen were drowned.

The victims were: Mrs. A. A. Hilton and son of Tacoma, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Loughead of Boston, Miss M. H. Catum of Massachusetts, (town not known); Rev. B. Barton and sister of London and Miss Florence Wilkinson and cousin of Brentwood, Essex; Boatmen Con Tooney and Con Gleeson.

EXPLOSION KILLS SEVENTEEN

Wehrum, Pa.—Further search for bodies was made Thursday in mine No. 4 of the Lackawanna Coal & Coke Company where 17 men were killed and 16 injured Wednesday by the explosion of gas. It was believed that all the bodies had been taken out and that first reports of 65 being entombed were exaggerated. Only one American was killed.

Inspector Joseph Williams of Altoona with a party entered the mine shortly after eight o'clock at night to ascertain whether anyone was yet entombed.

All but two rooms of the mine were thoroughly searched and it was announced that it was thought no more bodies were in the mine. Coroner Hammers has not yet set the date of an investigation of the explosion.

Superintendent A. M. Johnson said that while the mine has always been regarded as non-gaseous, the explosion was due to the ignition of a pocket of gas by the open lamp of a miner.

The mine has only been operating two days each week, Tuesday and Friday. Those in the mine had entered the shaft for their daily allowance of coal for family use.

Grouped about the slope entrance of the mine just helow the explosion were several Italians. When the terrific subterranean upheaval of rock and deadly gas spouted skyward these Italians were caught. Terribly burned and maimed, they rushed about the settlement crying for aid. The cries and sound of hissing mine gas at the entrance of the mine brought the entire town to the scene.

Superintendent W. N. Johnson, backed by the office force of the company, stood at the mine entrance and held back the frantic women whose relatives were entombed.

NEGROES FIRE A TOWN.

Feud Caused by Election of Gov. Hughes Blamed for Goshen (N. Y.) Blaze.

New York.—A fire of incendiary origin, believed to have been started by negroes as the result of a race feud growing out of the election of Gov. Hughes last fall, nearly destroyed the town of Goshen, the summer home of E. H. Harriman, Thursday.

Arthur Coates, president of the Coates Automobile Company, rode through the town in his touring car and with a megaphone gave the alarm to every household. The Presbyterian church, the Sayer Lumber Company yard, and an eight-story tenement house and several private dwellings were destroyed and the Millar Cart Company and Coates Automobile Company were partly burned. The loss is more than $100,000.

HORSE HAULS DEAD MASTER.

Faithful Animal Takes Body of Man Who Was Struck by Lightning Into Town.

Des Moines, Ia.—During a violent thunderstorm at Perry Thursday night Fred K. Mell, former chief of the fire department and wealthy resident, was struck and killed by lightning as he was riding to his home in a buggy.

His faithful horse carried the body to the post office, where Postmaster F. M. Hoey found it. Lightning also struck the Christian church, demolishing the tower.

FAIR WISDOM

A Love Tale of Solomon.

Book of the Wisdom of Solomon.—This is the sixth book of the Apocrypha, and contains 19 chapters. It may be conveniently divided into two parts: 1.—(Chapters 1-9)—It contains the doctrine of wisdom in its moral and intellectual aspects. 2.—(Chapters 10 to 19)—The doctrine of wisdom as shown in history. The first part contains the praise of wisdom as the source of immortality, in contrast with the teaching of sensualists; and next the praise of wisdom as the guide of practical and intellectual life, the stay of princes, and the interpreter of the universe. The second part, again, follows the action of wisdom summarily, as preserving God's servants, from Adam to Moses, and more particularly in the punishment of the Egyptians and Canaanites. From the internal evidence, it seems most reasonable to believe that the book was composed in Greek, at Alexandria, some time before the time of Philo (about 120-90 B. C.)

GEMS FROM THE BOOK.

Whoso despiseth wisdom and torture, he is miserable, and their hope is vain, their labors unfruitful, and their work unprofitable.

Wisdom is the gray hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age.

Wisdom is glorious, and never fadeth away: yea, she is early seen of them that love her, and of such as seek her.

To think upon wisdom is the perfection of wisdom.

Wisdom goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her, showeth herself favorable unto them in the ways, and meeteth them in every thought.

The very true beginning of wisdom is the desire of discipline; and the care of discipline is love. And love is the keeping of wisdom's laws.

Glorious is the fruit of good labors; and the root of wisdom shall never fall away.

Wisdom is a treasure unto men that never faileth; which they that use become the friends of God, being commended for the gifts that come from learning.

Wisdom is the breath of the power of God, and a pure influence flowing from the glory of the Almigthy.

THE STORY.

IT was in the long, long ago, when the good King David ruled in the land of Israel, and the Jews had become a mighty nation, possessing wealth and safety at home and holding the fear and the homage of the nations far and near. In accordance with the custom of those days the magnificence and the power and the glory of the kingly office was indicated by the number of women of the royal household, and David the king had a number of wives, and at the period of our story there was none more beautiful, or one who enjoyed the kingly favor to such a degree as the fair Bathsheba.

She it was who dwelt in the most beautiful of the palaces. She it was who enjoyed daily communion with the king, and shared with him in the activities of the royal household. And she it was who had been blessed with a most beautiful and a most promising baby boy, who at the time our story begins was developing into the early stages of that boyhood time which marks the border line of the state of young manhood.

This boy's name was Solomon. And the fame of the little prince had spread through all the royal household, and he no doubt would have been spoiled by the flattery and the petting of those about him had it not been for the faithful ministry and watchful care of the Prophet Nathan, who from the early days of Solomon's babyhood had made it his special task to guard and guide the little life. And it was the touch of this Godly life and the instruction and encouragement which he was able to give which kept the little prince growing in body, mind and spirit so splendidly that he was famed as much for the precociousness of mind as he was for the comeliness of his countenance.

Such was Solomon at the time of our story when he met fair Wisdom and fell in love with her.

It was a real experience and the holy passions which she inspired were as real and held him as powerfully as though her présence had been a visible one. Nay, more, for the spiritual emotions far outweigh those of the fleshly desires in potency once they are quickened into being and are nurtured and fed by the unfailing manna of truth.

Solomon had the buoyancy and open-heartedness of youth and still possessed that subtle something which made him sensitive to the deeper things and indicated a depth of thought and character which mystified and delighted the old prophet as he gave him his daily instruction and pointed the upward way for his eager feet.

It was just a little thought, an idea, like a glinting ray of purest light flashing through the tiny crevice into the dark cavern, which broke in upon Solomon's soul one day as Nathan talked with him. Some incident had transpired which had raised the question as to the difference in the lives of men. Some made for good and were always upward to better things, while others were downward with evil in control. And Solomon had questioned why.

"Why couldn't people always choose that which was best and which would bring the best good to them and to others about them?" Solomon had asked, and Nathan had gone on to try and explain to the thoughtful young boy one of the great mysteries of the human soul.

And the little flash of supernal light which broke in upon his soul held him as one under a spell. A wonderful idea had broken in upon the young boy's heart, and he was impatient to be off by himself and to dream of that one idea. To let its fascinating charm take full possession of his soul.

"Ah, how wonderful," he exclaimed, with a sigh. "I wish she might come to me."

"Who?" questioned a low voice at his elbow, and turning he saw at one side, in the midst of the delicate tracery of the luxuriant foliage of a magnificent fern a face and form of surpassing lovelliness.

"You, it must be," exclaimed Solomon, fervidly, "for who can be as lovely as thou art? What is they name?"

"I am Wisdom," came the answer in soft, musical tones which stirred the boy's soul to its very depths.

"Oh," exclaimed Solomon, with rapture, "I am so glad, for it must have been of thee I was just thinking."

"Yes?" responded the fair one, inquiringly, while she smiled in encouragement.

"Yea, who else could it have been. Could any one but Wisdom lead unerringly, and give richest blessing upon a life?" earnestly responded the prince.

The fair one made no reply, but stood silent as though waiting for further word, and Solomon again spoke, a great yearning sounding in his voice, as he said:

"Ah, what would not a life be in power and influence if he could have but thee always at his side?"

"Oh, can it be?" exclaimed Solomon, springing to his feet and making as though he would spring to the other side of the great drooping fern leaves and seize the beautiful creature in his arms.

"Nay, not so," responded Wisdom, causing Solomon to pause by her word and look and gesture. "I come as a gift from above."

And when Solomon looked again she was gone. With a disappointed cry he sprang forward and searched in breathless haste all through the garden plot, looking into every nook and cranny and under every leafy bower, but Wisdom was nowhere to be seen, and at last the prince threw himself down upon the green sward where he had at first been seated, and with almost a sob he exclaimed:

"She is indeed gone. Oh, that I might possess her?" Then he recalled her last words as she vanished, and he exclaimed: "Yea, I perceive I cannot obtain her except God give her me. I will seek him that he may give me this great gift." And throwing himself upon his face he lifted his voice and cried:

"O God of my fathers, and Lord of mercy, who hast made all things with thy word, and ordained man through thy wisdom, that he should have dominion over the creatures which thou hast made, and ordered the world according to equity and righteouaness, and executed judgment with an upright heart: give me Wisdom, that sitteth by thy throne; and reject me not from among thy children. For I, thy servant, and son of thine handmaid, am a feeble person, and of a short time, and too young for the understanding of judgment and laws, for though a man be never so perfect among the children of men, yet if thy Wisdom be not with him, he shall be nothing regarded. O send her out of thy holy heavens and from the throne of thy glory that being present she may labor with me, that I may know what is pleasing unto thee. For she knoweth and understandeth all things, and she shall lead me soberly in my doings and preserve me in her power."

"I have seen her," Solomon exclaimed in answer to Nathan's inquiring glance.

"Who?"

"Fair Wisdom."

"Thou doest well," was the fervid response.

"Yea, and better still, I have not only seen her, but God hath given her to me."

The fear of the Lord is the end of wisdom.

Temptation resisted is might acquired.

Feet swift to mischief are slow to service.

The heart well kept keeps the life.

The selfish soul shall be made lean.

The Lord thinks highly of the lowly

WOODILL SLAYER A SUICIDE

BROKER EASTMAN TAKES OWN LIFE AFTER CRIME.

Woman's Career Shrouded in Mystery —Was Attractive and Posed as Lyman Gage's Ward.

St. Michaels, Md.—Famished for food and water, surrounded by armed and determined men and his last chance to escape gone, the man who killed the beautiful May Edith Thompson Woodill fired a bullet into his own heart, thus ending the final chapter of a crime that is unparalleled in the history of this section of the country. The finale of the tragic story was written in the early summer's dawn, as the murderer, at bay, stood in the skiff in which he had made a desperate but futile effort to escape and took his life to escape a sure penalty of death for the slaying of a young woman rarely excelled for beauty.

Taking his fate into his own hands and blotting out untold the story of the death of a girl who had moved in the highest social circles of Baltimore, Washington and Los Angeles—a beautiful, talented girl who had been a protege of Lyman J. Gage, and of former Gov. Frank Brown of this state—the man known here as Emmet E. Roberts, but who in reality was Robert Emmet Eastman, a failed broker of the Consolidated Stock exchange of New York, passed beyond the reach of the law, and with his going there vanished the hope of clearing up the motive and the baffling details of this strange tragedy.

Hemmed in on all sides, Eastman tried to steal out through one of the many branches of the creek but the slight noise of his oars was detected, and the eagle-eyed watchers saw the dark form of his boat over the water. There was a sharp command to halt, which was unheeded; then another command. Then Eastman fired, whether at the posse or at himself is unknown.

A letter found upon Eastman's body, addressed to his wife, an actress, known as Vinnie Bradoome, in New York, gave Eastman's ill-sustained excuse for the crime. It was a rambling account of how he had been out in a launch with a party of men and women, all of whom had been drinking to excess with the exception of himself and Mrs. Woodill; of how one of the women in a fit of jealous frenzy had attacked Mrs. Woodill with a wine bottle and killed her, leaving him to dispose of the body.

Mrs. Woodill, the wife of Gilbert Woodill, an automobile dealer in Los Angeles, though twice married, was but a slip of a girl, vivacious, petite and immensely fond of pretty clothes, always immaculately dressed and weighed only about 100 pounds. Where the girl sprang from and who her father was, are clothed with much of the same deep mystery which surround the details of her death. She was adopted by Col. Charles H. Thompson, a well-to-do farmer of the eastern shore of Maryland, 19 years ago, when she was a tot of three. The baby was in the custody of a Minneapolis street car conductor and his wife, who said they knew nothing of her parents.

BARE FRENCH NAVY SCANDAL.

Fleet Costing $700,000,000 Would Be Without Coal in Six Hours, Says Report.

Paris. — The report of the parliamentary commission which investigated the naval scandals in France has been turned in. It is a scathing condemnation of the naval administration for the last ten years, and it makes an astounding exposure of the deplorable condition of the fleet for which France has spent $700,000,000 since 1899.

The 350 pages of the report are filled with details of the inefficiency resulting from confusion and red tape, conditions that make French naval construction cost 25 per cent. more than English or German.

Perhaps the gravest feature of the exposure is the lack of reserve coal and ammunition supplies at the various ports and arsenals. One officer testified before the commission that at the end of a naval battle of six hours the ships would find it impossible to replenish and would be virtually out of commission.

ILLINOISAN LONDON BRIDE.

GLEANED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Out of 300,000 Residents of Louisville There Is But One Chinaman, According to Canvass Made by Police to Ascertain Number of Celestials.

Louisville, Ky.—The murder of Elsie Sigel in New York city by Leon Ling, Chinaman, caused a canvass to ascertain how many Chinese residents this city has. The investigation, made by the police, revealed the fact that out of 300,000 persons, there was but one Chinaman. The Orientals always have given Louisville a wide berth. The police say that, of all the cities in the country, Louisville is the most unpopular spot with Chinese. Nearly a half century ago a Chinaman here was accused of some crime and all of them were given notice that they would have to leave. At that time there was a big Chinese colony here, the population being upward of 200.

STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION.

Commercial Club of Louisville Goes on Record as Opposed to Plan.

Louisville, Ky.—Before one of the largest assemblages of business men ever held in Louisville the Commercial club of this city went on record as against state-wide prohibition. The vote came after a number of impassioned speeches had been made and was practically unanimous, those voting for a resolution that the club decline to commit its membership on the proposition scarcely being able to make themselves heard. While the meeting was in session in the big dining room of the Galt house hundreds of telegrams were received from business men and corporations in Covington, Newport, Lexington, Paducah, Owensboro, Henderson, Frankfort and nearly every city and town in the state appealing to the Commercial club to take a firm stand against state-wide prohibition. Mayor and Editor Clarence E. Woods, of Richmond, a recognized temperance worker, sent the following message: "Your million country cousins will make grass grow on your Main street if Louisville merchants take sides with the liquor people against us. A sober state, like a sober workingman, buys merchandise and not booze. Whose trade do you prefer?"

INVITED TO KENTUCKY.

Louisville Board of Trade Extends Invitation to Tennessee Liquor Manufacturers.

Louisville, Ky.—At an open meeting of the Board of Trade to consider the advisability of the whole board extending an invitation to the liquor manufacturers of Tennessee to take refuge in Kentucky and do business here, the specific invitation was amended to include all lines of business in all states. The effect of the meeting was to open wide Kentucky's doors to those who are suffering from the effects of state-wide prohibition wherever they may be.

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM

For Frankfort Will Cost Between $45,000 and $50,000.

Frankfort, Ky.—Frankfort is to have practically a new telephone system, as Engineer L. C. Griffith, for the Home Telephone Co., arrived here from Louisville and immediately began work to locate an exchange. The company will probably buy the building and will install a complete new central energy system, with modern equipment, instruments and fixtures, at a cost of between $45,000 and $50,000.

Frankfort, Ky.—Two negro convicts, Theodore Johnson, sent from Clark county for 15 years for housebreaking, and Irvin Johnson, sent from Woodford county for forgery, escaped from the penitentiary by picking the cement from around a large stone under their cell window and scaling the wall in the woman's department. Theodore Johnson served a term at Sing Sing, New York, and is still at large. Irvin Johnson was captured by James Switzer, who lives near Duckers Station, in Woodford county, four or five hours after he had escaped. He was returned to the penitentiary by Switzer, who received $100 reward.

Lexington, Ky.—Plans for pooling the 1909 crop of tobacco in Kentucky were discussed at a meeting of the district board of the Burley Society here. Congressman Cantrell and Dr. McMiller, of Pendleton county, represented the American Society of Equity.

Lexington, Ky.—Thomas J. McGurk, who was arrested twice for keeping open his saloon and fined $50 and costs in the police court, sent a written notice to the mayor to the effect that he is not vested with any judicial power or right to impose penalties. Upon receipt of this notice the mayor promptly revoked his license.

Cynthiana, Ky.—John W. Urmston, a wealthy farmer, died at his home in the Broadwell neighborhood from injuries sustained when he was gored by a bull some time ago.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Railroad Commissioner Appointed.

Gov. Willson appointed Representative John P. Haswell, of Hardinsburg, Breckinridge county, as railroad commissioner in the First district, to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late McD. Ferguson.

Kentucky Flashes

Winchester, Ky.—The new $40,000 fraternity building, the joint property of the local Masons and Knights of Pythias, was dedicated here.

Jackson, Ky.—John McCoy and Norman McCoy were placed in jail here on the charge of assaulting with intent to kill County Judge S. S. Taulbee.

Louisville, Ky.—Walter Paris, secretary of the Ross-Paris Hotel Co., proprietors of the Louisville hotel, and one of the best-known hotel men in the country, died of appendicitis at a local infirmary, following an operation four days ago.

Lexington, Ky.—The first meeting of the Central and Eastern Kentucky League of Postmasters was held here. The officers elected were J. A. Barnes, Owingsville, president; Miss Pearl C. James, Muir, secretary, and Miss Ida M. Bauner, Stamping Ground, treasurer.

Louisville, Ky.—As the result of facts brought out in a mass meeting of health authorities, held here, in which it was shown that Jefferson county is being deluged with impure milk, a special committee was appointed to draw up specifications governing the sale of milk.

Paintsville, Ky.—It is said J. G. Crabbe, state school superintendent, is to succeed the late Dr. Roark as president of the Eastern Kentucky State Normal at Richmond. The appointment of Mr. Crabbe, it is said, has been unanimously agreed on by the board of regents.

Louisville, Ky.—The mandate from the circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati, ordering that Weber Bros. be ousted from the management of the Masonic theater here, is in the hands of local authorities, and the Grand Lodge of Kentucky will be given possession of the theater at once.

Nicholasville, Ky.—A government order has been received by the sawmills on the Kentucky river to the effect that all log booms must be removed, as they interfere with river traffic and work injury to the government locks and dams. These plants employ several hundred hands.

Frankfort, Ky.—Dr. J. N. McCormack, of Bowling Green, was here to secure evidence in numerous reported cases of criminal practice. He secured one, and, it is reported, two signed statements from sixteen-year-old girls. He will ask Judge Stout to call a special session of the grand jury.

Louisville, Ky.—That Indiana and adjoining states are making Louisville the dumping ground for diseased cows, and that the sale of germ-laden milk in this city had already gone far beyond the danger line, were statements made before members of the special committee of state, county and city health authorities.

Louisville, Ky.—With all the bravado of a real western road agent, an unmasked man on horseback rode up to the door of Theodore Dedden's saloon at midnight, and with drawn revolvers, held up the bartender, rifled his pockets, took the contents of the cash register and rode away. The robbery was committed where dozens of people were passing the door.

Louisville, Ky.—The "National Association of Numbered Postal Station Clerks," which will be organized in this city at the convention of the National Druggists' association in September, will be composed exclusively of drug clerks who also work in postal stations established in drug stores. About 4,000 druggists from all parts of the country will attend the convention.

Lexington, Ky.—The general council at a special meeting passed Mayor Skain's ordinance creating a water contract commission composed of five members of the council and five members of the Commercial club, to draft and submit for approval a 25-year contract between the Lexington Waterworks Co. and the city of Lexington.

Bellevue, Ky.—Supt. H. L. Eby, of the public schools, was denied any voice at the meeting of the board of education with reference to the charges against the Misses Brunson, McLaren and Smith, teachers in the schools, and by a resolution they were re-elected for another term.

Georgetown, Ky.—Will Taylor, a negro, 19, who worked on the place of Mrs. Alvin Brocking, on the Stamping Grounds pike, was arrested, but because of fear of mob violence the arrest was kept secret. The negro is charged with attempted assault on the 4-year-old daughter of Zach Brocking.

Louisville, Ky.—The third biennial convention of the National Fraternal Society of Deaf Mutes will be held in this city July 5-10 and elaborate preparations are under way for the entertainment of the guests.

The Grant County News, published at Dry Ridge seems to be up in the air because of the very handsome sum allowed Mr. LeBus as salary as president of the State organization of the Society of Equity. As the News is one of the most ardent advocates of the society in Kentucky, and did heroic work in its behalf, that which it says touching the president's salary will have considerable weight in the territory where it circulates. The criticisms of the News are severer than those of anyother paper that has been received at this office. They are as follow :

The board of Control of the Burley Tobacco Society in session at Winchester last week, voted Mr. C. LeBus, president of the society, a salary of $39,000 for three years' work. In doing os we believe that they sowed seed for discord greater than it were possible for them to have done in any other manner. So far we have heard no expressions of approval of the act of the board by those who are members of the Burley Tobacco Society, but we have heard many expressions of disapproval. True, it may be, that the Board of Control better understands the value of Mr. LeBus' services than the ordinary layman. But be that as it may, it will be hard to convince the ordinary layman that Mr. LeBus is worth to the society the princely salary that has been allowed him. Already we have heard from several sections of this county, and of other counties, too, expressions of much dissatisfaction over the action of the board, and in some places the members have gone so far as to call indignation meetings, requesting Mr. LeBus to resign and demanding that the $25,000 allowed Mr. LeBus for his first two years' work be turned back into the treasury. Far be it from our intentions to criticise unjustly, or to even attempt to fix the value of the work of any man of Mr. LeBus' caliber, but we, among thousands of others in the burley district, have a right to our views on the matter, and to express them, too, for are we not all good equity men, working for a cause that we believe to be greater than any man or set of men ?

We have no doubt that Mr. LeBus is a valuable man to the society, but that he is more valuable than many other men who could have been secured at a salary commensurate with the services rendered, we do not believe. There are hundreds of good men, honest men, men of ability, of just as great ability as Mr. LeBus, who could have been secured at a reasonable salary In fact, we believe that the $5,000 per annum that Mr. LeBus was supposed to have received for his services, was amply sufficient and that he ought to have been satisfied with it. If he was not satisfied with that salary we believe that he should have stepped down and out. We do not believe as the Board of Control, or at least a majority of the members of that body believe, that the welfare of the society depends upon one man, and that man Clarence LeBus. We do believe that the action of the Board of Control in allowing this enormous salary, for considered from the tobacco growers' point of view, it is enormous, will create more discord and dissension than any other thing that could have been done.

The Tobacco growers of Grant county are ready and willing to pool their tobacco grown this year, provided they are convinced that there will be no graft, no steal, and what is true of Grant is true of every other Burley Tobacco county, but this year they are going to have to "be shown," and the Board of Control in fixing this salary have shown them, not that there will be no graft, but that so far as they are concerned there will be graft.

Every local in Grant county, and it is to the Grant county people alone that we can appeal, for our circulation does not extend to any considerable extent beyond the confines of the county, should call a meeting at once and discuss among themselves what the best thing to do regarding this important action of the board, and if they deem it necessary to take action regarding the matter.

Don't imagine for an inftant that we are trying to stir up trouble in the society, for the The News has always fought for its principles and for the people who have made it what it is, but we believe that it is to the best interest of the society to work this matter out to a final conclusion at once, so that there will be no future bickerings.

GAMES NEXT SATURDAY.

Belleview at Burlington.
Hebron at Big Bone.

LAST SATURDAY'S GAMES.

The game, last Saturday, between the Burlington and Hebron teams on the grounds of the latter, was an interesting contest throughout, and showed that each team is very much at home on the diamond. At first the Hebron sluggers thought they were going to knock Conner all over the lot, but at the end of the third inning his wing was working right, and in only one inning thereafter was Hebron in the least dangerous. Shinkle's arm was also in good condition and he was not effectively hit, scores being made on him in only two innings. There were three errors behind Shinkle and one behind Conner. Nothing doing in the first inning. In the second inning Conner hit safe, Clore struck out, Tolin out pitcher to first, Westbay made a three bagger and Conner scored, Walton hit and scored Westbay. Next two men out. In Hebron's half of this inning Hogan's grounder to second let him down at first, Houston hit for two bases and was followed by Louden with a single, and little later an error allowed Houston to cross the plate. In the next inning only four Burlington batters faced Shinkle, while for Hebron, Shinkle, the first man up hit for two sacks, and was followed by Garnett and Fox each with a single, fast work on the part of Burlington putting Shinkle ont at the plate, and Hebron was never in the game again. In the ninth Westbay singled, Walton out, and White smashed the sphere for two sacks and Westbay scored, being the last run put over.

Base hits—Slayback, Smith, Conner 2, Westbay, Walton; Garnett 2, Fox, Houston, Louden, Yates, Shinkle. Two base hits—Slayback, White; Honston, Shinkle. Three base hit—Westbay.

Struck out—By Conner 8, by Shinkle 10.

Earned runs—Burlington 3.

Batteries—Conner and Slayback; Shinkle and Ernst.

Umpires—Tanner and Sullivan.

Bellevne 6—Big Bone 0.

The Taylorsport ball team visited Oakley, last Sunday, and played the local team. It took 16 innings to decide the contest which went 3 to 2 against the Kentuckians. Johnnie Hogan, captain of the Hebron team officiated behind the bat for Taylorsport.

A strong base ball team will be here next Monday to hook up with the Burlington team for two games in the afternoon. The visitors come well recommended and both games will be worth seeing. The team will come from Newport. Come out and see the games.

Lawrence Phipps, of Middle creek, passed through Burlington, Monday, enroute to Bullittsville neighborhood, to assist his brother, O. P. Phipps, whose crop he says is rapidly becoming weed-bound. Many other farmers in this county are having a similar experience with their crop, but considerable headway has been made this week destroying the weeds and grass to which the weather has been so congenial.

Trouble Makers Ousted.

When a sufferer from stomach trouble takes Dr. King's New Life Pills he's mighty glad to see his Dyspepsia and Indigestion fly, but more—he's tickled over his new, fine appetite, strong nerves, healthy vigor, all because stomach, liver and kidneys now work right. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Mr. John Stephens and daughter, Miss Lizzie, and son Benjamin, wife and son, passed through Burlington, yesterday, in a large, new auto, the property of his son Benjamin. They came into town at a good rate of speed, and after a short stop proceeded on their journey ont the Petersburg pike at a merry clip.

Persons who are willing to assist in having the cemetery north of town cleaned up, can leave their contributions at this office. They will be delivered to a person who will see that they are properly applied.

The breeze that prevailed yesterday afternoon was a great relief to humanity, as without it the heat would have been almost unbearable.

Cure Your Dandruff

Why? Because it is annoying, untidy. And mostly, because it almost invariably leads to baldness. Cure it, and save your hair. Get more, too, at the same time. All easily done with Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula. Stop this formation of dandruff!

Ayer's — Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

The new Ayer's Hair Vigor will certainly do this work; because, first of all, it destroys the germs which are the original cause of dandruff. Having given this aid, nature completes the cure. The scalp is restored to a perfectly healthy condition.

—Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.—

Great is the auto industry. Beginning only 11 years ago with 25 manufactories in the country, turning out not more than 1,200 machines, the number at present is estimated at 160,000 from over 250 concerns, or ten times the number in 1898. And the capital now invested in the business $200,000,000, is just ten times that of 11 years ago. The auto industry, it is said, is about the only one that is really active in the manufacturing centers. The demand is so great that orders at all the factories are far ahead of the supply, and must wait weeks if not months to be filled. It is an unhealthy condition of trade when an article that is not, excepting in few cases, a necessity in business, and brings no returns in a financial way, is in fact merely an expensive luxury, is the only one almost that is in active demand. It appears that hundreds and perhaps thousands who have been struck with the auto craze, will have to sacrifice their homes as well as the autos for which they put them under mortgage.

A Big Harvest.

The wheat, oats and hay crops will constitute a considerable harvest in this county, this year, and it is hoped that there will be no trouble in securing hands enough to handle them properly. The immense tobacco crop that has been pitched in this county will be requiring considerable attention during the harvest period, which, may cause some trouble in the saving of the hay and grain crops. With favorable weather, though, the farmers can turn off an immense amount of work in a short time with their modern methods.

Struck by Lightning.

Lightning got pretty close to J. C. Revill's residence, during the storm last Thursday evening, striking both his wood house and coal house, which building, are within a few feet of his residence. Very slight damage resulted. Some of the family thought they were struck, some of them experiencing a considerable shock, while others were disturbed only by the loud crash.

By good management considerable alfalfa hay has been saved and put in the barns.

The wool crop brought to Boone county an unusually large amount of money this year. The pool appears to have given general satisfaction.

Jerry K. Glass, the noted jack that belonged to the Burlington Jack Co., died last Monday night. He was sick for several days, and Dr. O. S. Crisler says he does not know what was the matter with the animal.

The wet weather of the past several weeks has been harmful to the watermelon crop, which, to be a success, requires dry, hot weather. It is a source of considerable revenue to the growers along the river, and in case of a crop failure they feel the effects considerably.

CORTRIGHT

Property owners in districts lacking adequate fire protection are never free from the care and thought of the probability of fire with the inevitable total loss.

Cortright Metal Shingles being fire proof, lightning proof and storm-proof take the place of this lacking protection and bring a peace of mind that can seldom be bought. They outlast the building.

FATHER AND SON.

JOSEPH A. GAINES.
Sept. 16, 1822—June 8, 1909.

OSCAR W. GAINES.
March 17, 1853—June 13, 1909.

Joseph Addison Gaines was born in Boone County, Kentucky, on the 6th day of September, 1822, and died on June 9 h, 1909, having lived his entire life of eighty-seven years in the county of his birth.

He was descended from the Gaines family which emigrated from Wales during the first half of the seventeenth century and settled in the valley of Virginia. He was the son of William Gaines and Jennette Watts, and the grand son of George Gaines and Su-anna Graves, who moved from Culpepper County, Virginia, and settled in Boone county, Kentucky, during the last decade of the eighteenth century. His great-grandfather, Henry Gaines, was the son of James Gaines and Mary Pendleton (the sister of Judge Edmund Pendleton, the great Virginia jurist and patriot, and also sister of Capt. Nathaniel Pendleton, the great-grandfather of George H. Pendleton, the Democratic candidate for Vice-President of the United States in 1864), and was second cousin to President James Madison and third cousin to Gen. Zachery Taylor, the twelfth president of the United States.

His scholastic training was such as the schools of the county afforded. His first school days were spent at those little log school houses located in the Sand Run neighborhood. One of these was located near the old Johnson Graves residence, one was about midway between the present residences of Mrs. Alice Watts and John Stephens and another was near the Sand Run church, a few hundred yards west of the present town of Francesville. His teachers at these schools were, Greenleaf, Robinson, Hastings, Benjamin, Chapman, William Ray, Professor Morris, Alexander Laurie and Wm. R. Johnson. His remaining school days were spent at Bullittsburg Seminary under Daniel Foster and Dr. McGuffey, and at Burlington Academy under Professor Sackett Meade. While he thus received such education as could be had in the county, he was practically self-educated. Upon the foundation received from the county schools, he built an educational structure in which anyone might well feel a just pride. He was an indefatigable student, a profound thinker, and he made his mind a vast storehouse of useful information. He considered a good book the best of companions. He kept himself well informed upon all general subjects, but his best thought was devoted to subjects of an economic, ethical, philosophical or political character He was never too old to learn, and was a student to the day of his death.

He followed no leader, of whose life, character and teachings he could not conscientiously approve, and he accepted no political doctrine which did not accord with the test of reason which he applied to it; he was frugal and saving, yet he practiced a generous liberality; he was prosperous, but never grasping; he possessed a fund of knowledge, but used it without ostentation. He ever strove to master himself, to subdue evil tendencies and to encourage the growth of moral qualities, and thus it was that no bad habits crept into his life.

While eminently qualified to fill positions of public trust, he never but once allowed his name to be used for a political office, namely, in 1876, when his friends sent him to the Legislature. In the Legislature he represented his county with ability and fidelity, but public life was not congenial to his retiring disposition, and he was glad when his public duties were at an end, and he could retire to his quiet home life among his kindred and friends.

He believed in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. He had the most abiding faith in the goodness of God and no man had greater reverence for his Maker. His dealings with his fellowman were fair and honest. To the poor and unfortunate he ever extended a helping hand; to the young just beginning the battle of life he was ever ready with kindly counsel and substantial assistance, and to the cry of distress he hastened with relief. His home was most hospitable—not only to his friends, of whom he was most fond, but to strangers as well. No traveler ever applied to him for food and shelter in vain, and many a pilgrim, sore-footed and weary, he has freely entertained for the night and bidden goodspeed with the morning.

In all his ministrations of kindness and mercy, he was not alone. God had given to him a companion and help-meet, one, who was in truth "a crown to her husband," whose life was a benediction, "full of good works and almsdeeds which she did"—a loving mother—a ministering angel among her neighbors—ever walking with fervent piety, in the foot-steps of the Master.

Joseph Addison Gaines lived a long life—consistent in every way. He was a loving husband, father and friend, "with ill-will towards none—with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gave him to see the right."

He died as he had lived. He saw the end approach and welcomed it; he fearlessly looked into the future with hope and confidence; he came to the close of a long and useful life and sank to rest, as the sun, at the close of a long, glorious summer's day, sinks beneath a cloudless horizon.

"Life! we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear;
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh—a tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not 'good night,' but in some brighter clime,
Bid me 'good morning.'"

Hadn't Long to Stay.

A member of the force that is making a geological survey of Kentucky was in Burlington, one day last week, having come over from Erlanger. He was inquiring the way to Union and big Bone, and at first seemed particularly anxious to see any peculiar rock formation that existed in the county, but when told of the Middle creek cliffs and the formation that composed them, he was not sufficiently interested to drive four miles to view what is considered in this part of the country a remarkable performance of nature. These large stones are composed of millions of smaller ones, and appear to have been subjected to intense heat in the process of which they were cemented together. It has always been supposed that Middle creek cliffs were a field that would prove somewhat interesting to a geologist, but in the case of the gentleman who was in Burlington, last week, his time was too limited for him to visit them although in his line of investigation according to his statements.

Milton Campbell, a native of Burlington, has been retired as fireman in Cincinnati, and will draw a pension of $50 a month so long as he lives. Through choice he served several years longer than it was necessary to entitle him to being retired, although his friends urged him to do so. There is an excitement about the life of a fireman that is fascinating to the members of the department in large cities, and they like to remain on duty as long as they can. Mr. Campbell was one of the oldest men in the point of service in the Cincinnati department in which he held several responsible positions during the time of his service.

They All Wanted It.

Look out for the Ponies.

The pony ring at the Florence fair this year will be a new feature, and one that should be especially interesting to the kid patrons. The ponies will be exhibited on the first day.

Whooping-cough Here.

Whooping-cough is doing Burlington again, there being three or four cases in the town. If it pays its respects to all the eligibles there will be numerous cases before it runs its course here.

Look Out for the Auto.

In the next week or ten days William Hughes will be delivering mail from an auto on rural route No. 1. His machine will not be of the touring car variety, but smaller and adapted to his business.

Made a Misstep.

When getting off of his grocery wagon while out on his rural route on Tuesday of last week, C. C. Roberts made a misstep and went down between the singletree and the doubletree, bruising his right lower limb badly, and it gave him considerable trouble for several days.

Educational Needs in Kentucky.

Following are some of the thoughts emphasized by Superintendent of Public Instruction Crabbe which are worthy the consideration of citizens of the county and State:

"Popular thought should be turned from National to State and local affairs.

"If the people rule, they must take time from private to attend to public business.

"The most important duty of any generation is to prepare the next to enjoy and transmit what society has gained through ages of toil and suffering.

"The whole people must be educated to meet the demands of our complex civilization. Every child has an inherit right to an equal chance in the race of life.

"The State needs enlightened men; for a republic with an ignorant electorate is an impossibility. The State needs honest men, brave men, religious men, men of faith and self-denial, and the schools must supply them.

"Kentucky stands low in the scale of general education, because of the indifference of the people to its needs.

"Kentucky is not giving her children an equal chance, educationally speaking, with the children of many poorer States; and, as a result, there is a possibility that her sons may become servants in the house of their fathers. All the best positions practically in the educational work in Kentucky are held by men and women from other States. This is not fair.

"The average white child in Kentucky has not an equal opportunity with the average negro child; for the majority of white children are being educated under rural conditions, while the majority of colored children live in the cities. This is not fair. Country people should see to it that their children have an equal chance with others.

"The only way the rural school can be made as good as the city school is through county and district taxation.

"The counties in Kentucky should build good school houses in every district and put a good teacher within the reach of every child. It will pay to do so.

"The Common School does not prepare fully for life's duties; therefore there should be a public High School in every county.

"The Colleges and Universities of our State are crippled because there are so few highly educated teachers to inspire students to "climb the heights."

"Kentucky needs more university men; for the real advances now being made along industrial lines are, for the most part, the work of these men—highly trained in the arts and sciences.

"A school tax is not really a tax, but an investment, for, suppose society invests $700 in the education of a boy, will she not get it back with compound interest through the long years of his manhood?

"It pays the individual to be educated. It pays every individual, and that which pays every unit of society, pays society itself.

"It will pay Kentucky, in every way, to give every one of her children a common school education; it will pay her to give as many as possible a high school education; and it will pay her to give thousands of her sons and daughters university training.

"Education measures the distance from savage to civilized life. The creation and security of wealth depends upon the education of the people.

"It may not be right to make one man help educate another man's children for the parent's sake; but it is right to make every man who enjoys the blessings and security of civilized society help prepare the next generation for citizenship."

The days are growing shorter.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk?
It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by WASHINGTON. — There was unveiled in the nation's capital recently a statue of the Rev. John Witherspoon, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. More and more attention is being given throughout the country to the memories of the men who signed the liberty document. Not long ago there was held in Washington a convention of the descendants of the signers. It is expected that as the result of the labors of this hereditary organization there will be gathered together for preservation in one safe place all the things that are attainable which had intimate association with the men who on the 4th of July, 1776, took their lives and their pens in hand.

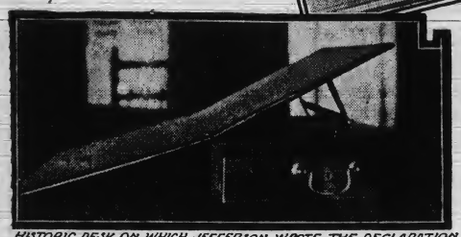
In the year 1776 lived a woman who was fond of giving curtain lectures to her husband. She was the original Mrs. Caudle, though her name was Mrs. Dickenson, the wife of John Dickenson of Pennsylvania, whose "Letters of a Pennsylvania Farmer" had done much to arouse a spirit of liberty among the people. One night several weeks before the meeting of the continental congress, of which Dickenson was a member, his spouse, speaking from beneath the shadow of her nightcap, said: "Johnny, if you have anything to do with this independence business you'll be hanged, and leave a most excellent widow." John Dickenson spoke against the resolution declaring the colonies to be free and independent.

The great independence dehate was held within closed doors, and no record of the speeches was kept, because it was felt that in case of the capture of any one of the members of the body that King George would have him strung up speedily should there he written evidence that he had spoken against the supremacy of the crown. When the Brunswick monarch, however, had been forced to relinquish his grip on the united colonies, some of the delegates told what they had said or what others had said. These fragmentary speeches had never before been gathered together, it is believed. Bits of them appear here and there in revolutionary-day stories. Others are to he found in the correspondence of some of the fathers of the republic, and two others have had their spirit, but not their letter, preserved through one of the almost matchless orations of Webster.



WHERE THE ORIGINAL DRAFT OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE IS PRESERVED

STATE DEPARTMENT BUILDING AT WASHINGTON, D.C.

WILLIAM McNEIR, CUSTODIAN

HISTORIC DESK ON WHICH JEFFERSON WROTE THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

THE STEEL SAFE IN WHICH THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE IS PRESERVED

It is a well-known fact that the declaring of the colonies independent was not thought of seriously before the convening of the memorable congress of the spring of 1776. Washington was bitterly opposed to any such declaration until it became a military and civil necessity. Patrick Henry was perhaps the only outspoken advocate of the year when the cutting was actually accomplished, though Benjamin Franklin and Timothy Dwight thought, and sometimes said, that the yoke should be removed. Henry, by the way, in one of his speeches, undoubtedly gave the keynote to which Rohert Emmet afterward attuned the last sentence of his speech when condemned to die. As early as 1773 Patrick Henry declared that the colonies should strike for independence, and prophesied that France would not be backward in coming to their aid. The last words of his speech were almost literally a part of the concluding words of Robert Emmet's speech: "Then our country shall take her place among the nations of the earth."

The original declaration of independence was a local affair. Mecklenherg county, North Carolina, at a public meeting held in the town of Charlotte, in August, 1775, declared that "it threw off forever all allegiance to the British crown." It was not long after this that North Carolina instructed its delegates to the continental congress to vote "first, last and always" for the independence of the united colonies. It must be said that many historians doubt the authenticity of the Mecklenherg declaration.

The congress that was to declare America free convened in Philadelphia, and in a general way discussed the matter of throwing off the yoke. Richard Henry Lee of Virginia introduced this resolution: "Moved, That these united colonies are, and of right ought to he, free and independent states, and that all political connection between us and Great Britain is, and ought to be, dissolved."

John Adams of Massachusetts seconded the motion, but the names of hoth mover and seconder were omitted from the record, because it was the belief that if the British authorities got hold of them as prisoners they would stretch hemp without a trial. Before the discussion of the resolution congress adjourned and came together again in June, when hegan the debate, perhaps the most momentous in history, the details of which, save in detached form, were never preserved. During a part of the proceedings Benjamin Franklin presided.

In a letter written 20 years after the debate one of the delegates said that when Benjamin Franklin, after the signing, said: "Now, we must all hang together or we'll all hang separately," Harrison, who had a ready wit, looking at his ample proportions, said: "If they drop us off at a rope's end some of you lightweights will he kicking and suffering long after I'm done for."

During the time of the adjournment, the committee which had heen appointed to prepare the declaration of independence chose Jefferson, the youngest of their members, to write the document, on the ground that he was "the best penman" in the lot. Now, the word penman in those days was sometimes used to denote a man who expressed himself well on paper, and not necessarily a man who wrote a good hand. The English of the declaration perhaps shows that the word was used with the former significance, though some of Jefferson's detractors have insisted that Tom Paine wrote the famous document.

The Declaration of Independence was read paragraph by paragraph to the assemhled memhers. As a matter of fact, the most hrilliant speakers were opposed to the resolution. Among those so opposed were Dickenson, Robert R. Livingston, James Wilson and Edward Rutledge. It leaked out afterward that most of these men made speeches opposing the severing of the British honds. Of three of those who spoke in favor of independence it was afterward said: "Jefferson was no speaker; George Wyeth was sensible, but not clear, and Witherspoon was clear, hut heavy."

It has always been believed that Richard Henry Lee said, in standing for the absolute independence of his country: "Why still delliberate? Why, sir, do you longer delay? Let this happy day give birth to an American republic. Let her arise, not to devastate and conquer, but to re-establish the reign of peace and law. The eyes of Europe are fixed upon us; she demands of us a living example of freedom that may exhibit a contrast in the felicity of the citizen to the ever-increasing tyranny which desolates her polluted shores. If we are not this day wanting in our duty to our country the names of the American legislators of 1776 will be placed hy posterity at the side of Theseus, of Lycurgus, of Romulus, of Numa, of the three Williams of Nassau, and of all those whose memories have been and forever will he dear to virtuous men and good citizens."

Just how Lee's speech leaked out was not known, but it led to a somewhat remarkable scene in the English school of St. Bees. Lee had a son, a mere boy, a pupil in St. Bees. A member of a board of visitors to the institution asked the head master who the boy was. "He is the son of Richard Henry Lee of America," was the answer.

"Come here, young man," said the inquisitor, and when Lee approached the Englishman said to him: "Do you know we will soon have your father's head on Tower hill?"

"You may have it when you can get it," was the boy's spirited answer.

John Dickenson of Pennsylvania, although he had been one of the foremost advocates of resistance to tyranny, spoke forcibly against the adoption of the declaration. It may he that his wife's, "Johnny, you'll be hanged," was still on his mind. He was one of the best speakers in the congress, and the friends of liherty feared the effect of his arguments. The gist of what he said was years afterwards made puhlic, and, while Dickenson feared simply that the time had not yet come for the declaring of the country's independence, and was in reality a patriot at heart, his memory has suffered for the stand he then took.

When Daniel Webster delivered his panegyric of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams he drew a verhal picture of that scene in the continental congress when the Declaration of Independence was under discussion. He knew the thread of Dickenson's discourse as it had been imputed to him, and though Webster mentioned no name, his amplification of Dickenson's words will probably stand forever as containing the essence of the opposition of the colonial legislator to the taking of a firm stand for his country's freedom.

Dickenson's speech, as it has come down, runs in part as follows: "Let us pause. This step, once taken, cannot be retraced. This resolution, once passed, will cut off all hope of reconciliation. If success attend the arms of England we shall then be no longer colonies, with charters and with privileges; these will all be forfeited by this act, and we shall be in the condition of other conquered people —at the mercy of the conquerors. For ourselves, we may he ready to run the hazard, but are we ready to carry the country to that length? Is success so probahle as to justify us? Where is the military, where the naval power, by which we are to resist the whole strength of the arms of England, for she will exert that strength to the utmost? Can we rely on the constancy and perseverance of the people, or will they not act as the people of other countries have acted, and, wearied with a long war, submit in the end to a worse oppression?

"While we stand on our old ground and insist on redress of grievances we know we are right, and are not answerable for consequences. Nothing, then, can he imputed to us. But if we now change our object, carry our pretensions farther and set up for absolute independence, we shall lose the sympathy of mankind. We shall no longer be defending what we possess, and which we have solemnly and uniformly disclaimed all intention of pursuing from the very outset of the troubles. Abandoing thus our old grounds of resistance only to arbitrary acts of oppression, the nations will believe the whole to have been mere pretense, and they will look on us not as injured, hut as ambitious, subjects.

"I shudder before this responsibility. It will be on us if, relinquishing the ground on which we have stood so long, and stood so safely, we now proclaim independence and carry on war for that object, while these cities hurn, these pleasant fields whiten and bleach with the bones of their owners, and these streams run hlood. It will be upon us; it will be upon us if, failing to maintain this unreasonable and ill-judged declaration, a sterner despotism, maintained by military power, shall be established over our posterity, when we ourselves, given up by an exhausted, a harassed and misled people, shall have expiated our rashness and stoned for our presumption on the scaffold."

It is a fairly well established fact that one of the delegates, lacking a prepared speech of his own, quoted from Tom Paine's pamphlet, "Common Sense," which some months hefore had created a sensation. Tom Paine, as is well known, was an atheist, hut that made little difference to the delegate, who was said to be a pious Puritan, when he had a chance to let his feelings go ripping through sentences like these: "It matters very little now what the king of England either says or does; he hath wickedly broken through every moral and human obligation, trampled nature and conscience beneath his feet, and by a steady and constitutional spirit of insolence and cruelty procured for himself a universal hatred. • • •

It has been reported that John Witherspoon of Princeton, stanch orthodox Presbyterian, was the man who quoted thus liherally from Tom Paine, atheist. Some years afterward the Scotch dominie, it is said, was taken to task for quoting Paine, and reverend John said, if tradition may be believed, that the devil's pitchfork was none too bad a weapon to use in prodding John Bull out of the country.

It was left, however, for John Adams to make the great speech that brought to the side of those favoring independence all the wavering ones, and strengthened in their position those who stood for the signing of the declaration. What Adams said was given in substance to the world, when there was no longer any danger of his heing hanged for his utterances. Daniel Webster lent his own eloquence and something of his diction to his interpretation of Adams' discourse, which, on the eventful day, it may be truly said won for the country the declaration of independence.

Adams' powerful and electrifying speech was in part as follows: "It is true, indeed, that in the beginning we aimed not at independence. But there's a divinity which shapes our ends. The injustice of England has driven us to arms, and, blinded to her own interest for our good, she has obstinately persisted till independence is now within our grasp. We have but to reach forth to it and it is ours. Why, then, should we defer the declaration? Is any man so weak as now to hope for a reconciliation with England, which shall leave either safety to the country and its liberties or safety to his own life and his own honor?

"I know there is not a man here who would not rather see a general conflagration sweep over the land or an earthquake sink it than one jot or tittle of that plighted faith fall to the ground. For myself, having 12 months ago in this place moved you that George Washington be appointed commander of the forces raised or to be raised for defense of American liherty, may my right hand forget her cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if I hesitate or waver in the support I give him. • • •

"My judgment approves this measure and my whole heart is in it. All that I have and all that I am, and all that I hope in this life, I am now ready here to stake upon it. • • • I am for the declaration. It is my living sentiment, and, by the grace of God, it shall be my dying sentiment, independence now and independence forever."

The 2d of July is in reality Independence day, for on this date in the year 1776 a majority of the delegates from each colony voted for the declaration. Two days later the document was signed and went into effect, and from that day to this, in fulfillment of John Adams' prophecy, the day has been celebrated "with pomp, parade, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illumination from one end of the continent to the other."

WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES

A bad back makes every day a dull round of pain and misery. It's a sign the kidneys are sick and cannot keep up their never-ending task of filtering the blood. Lame back, backache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders are warnings that must not be overlooked. A. G. Smith, 405 E. Mills St., Liherty, Mo., says: "I was racked with pain, stiff and lame, had dizzy spells and a terrible condition of the kidney secretions. I got so miserable I went to bed, but the doctor did not do anything for me and no one expected me to recover. Doan's Kidney Pills first relieved, then cured me, and I have had no kidney trouble for seven years since."

Judge Balcom was talking to a crowd on the street a few days ago, telling them the proper way to put shingles on a house. He said:

"The old rule was to allow six inches of the shingles to 'show to the weather;' hut that is too much. You should allow not more than four inches to show."

Some wag remarked in a matter of fact tone to the judge: "How would it do not to let any show?" The judge replied: "I've seen roofs made that way; but it takes a great many shingles."

Then the judge wanted to get mad when the crowd laughed.—Twiggs County (Ga.) Citizen.

Escape Nicely Timed.

A German shoemaker left the gas turned on in his shop one night, and, upon arriving in the morning, struck a match to light it. There was a terrific explosion, and the shoemaker was blown out through the door almost to the middle of the street.

A passerby rushed to his assistance, and, after helping him to arise, inquired if he was injured.

The little German gazed in at his place of business, which was now burning quite hriskly, and said:

"No, I aindt hurt. But I got out shust in time, eh?"

Consumption Permanently Cured.

That consumption can be permanently cured is demonstrated by some figures published by Dr. A. Van Bneden of Belgium, who says that 75 per cent. of the patients treated in the Bourgoumont sanatórium in 1903-4 have continued, four years after treatment, to improve, and are in a condition to return to their regular occupations.

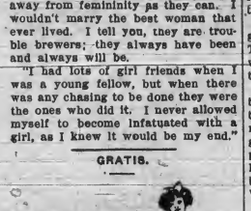
SCOUT'S IDEA OF MARRIAGE.

Crusty Massachusetts Bachelor of Eighty Years Has Most Decided Views on the Matter.



Eighty years of single blessedness is the record of Moses P. Stowe, one of the oldest residents of Grafton, Mass. Not a woman crosses the threshold of his cozy home.

"It makes no difference who or what the woman is; she wouldn't get inside of this house," he says. "Even women peddlers create a different atmosphere when they only knock at the door.

"Marry? Well, I should say not. You don't know what that word means. Why, look at all of the men in this country who have fastened themselves to women whom they professed to love, and now want to get as far away from femininity as they can. I wouldn't marry the best woman that ever lived. I tell you, they are trouble brewers; they always have been and always will be.

Fearful Eczeme All Over Baby's Face —Profession Treatment Failed.

A Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little girl was six months old I noticed small red spots on her right cheek. They grew so large that I sent for the doctor but, instead of helping the eruption, his ointment seemed to make it worse. Then I went to a second doctor who said it was eczema. He also gave me an ointment which did not help either. The disease spread all over the face and the eyes began to swell. The itching grew intolerable and it was a terrible sight to see. I consulted doctors for months, but they were unable to cure the baby. I paid out from $20 to $30 without relief. One evening I began to use the Cuticura Remedies. Was Proud of His Dad.

Here is one relating to the public schools, even though it has no bearing on the present public school controversy. Like as not it isn't even true, but somebody lowed it was. Anyway little George came home from one of the schools on the West side and told his dad that he wished he would write him a little essay on skating.

George's father, while not a professional writer, prides himself on his ability to put his thoughts into good clear English, and he willingly dashed off a little composition for his son's edification.

"You're all right, popsy," he declared, proudly. "I copied off that essay of yours and turned it in, and the teacher said there was only one better one in the whole class."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TAKE TOLL OF ALL

WESTERN STATES PAY TRIBUTE TO NEW ENGLAND.

Tariff Bill is Being Framed for the Special Benefit of a Handful of Trust Magnates Who Control Legislation.

Recent doings in the senate add another instance of the zealous care with which Senator Aldrich protects New England mill bosses.

The Payne bill raised the tariff on hosiery. Mr. Aldrich restores the Dingley rate. Then, by way of reward, he jumps the tariff on cotton gloves to a point where his mill boss friends can monopolize our entire cotton glove trade.

New Jersey and Delaware sit at the gate of industrialism and take toll. These toll states levy tribute on the whole republic by granting charters to predatory trusts.

Rhode Island—another pocket edition of a state—also makes a specialty of industrial piracy. Rhode Island numbers within its little borders a goodly proportion of New England's privilege grabbers. And Rhode Island has also the distinction of giving the trusts their legislative captain, Nelson W. Aldrich of the national senate.

Why should a handful of trust magnates control the highest legislative body in the United States?

Simply because they have a general who understands selfish human nature. Aldrich takes his orders from the trusts and proceeds to execute them with the skill born of long experience. He knows his quarry.

When western senators become too obstreperous in resisting Aldrich's manipulations of tariff schedules to suit eastern trusts, he merely threatens them with reprisals on agricultural products. When southern Democratic senators threaten to take seriously their party's pledge for lower tariff duties Aldrich brings them into line by threatening free raw materials for the manufacturers of their respective states.

And so the farce goes on—always to the ultimate advantage of the little group of New England manufacturers who have commissioned Aldrich to frame the tariff bill for their special benefit. The tail wags the dog and the convention pledges of the Republican party for "downward" revision are laughed to scorn.

Secretary Root's Bad Start.

Despite his great abilities and his unique prestige, Senator Root has made a bad start in the senate. It was not becoming that a man who had never before sat in a legislative body should have presumed to lecture men grown gray in legislative activities upon the proprieties and duties of senatorial service. It is never becoming in any man at the beginning of any career to pose as an expert and lay down the law to others older in service than himself. In overlooking this rule, in presuming to help the senate to better methods and manners, Mr. Root has suffered a serious humiliation, and in truth something of a setback in his senatorial status. If Mr. Root is the man he is thought to be, he will learn something from his experience and in the end will be no loser by it. But he will have to move cautiously. Anything like an exhibition of resentment, with a further effort to assume the character of guide and philosopher of the senatorial body before his own seat has fairly gotten worm, will destroy his respect in the senate and nullify the working value of his acknowledged intellectual powers. For Mr. Root, as for all men, great or small, the policy of modesty is always the best policy.

New Hampshire's Bluff.

Artemus Ward's willingness to sacrifice his wife's relations on the altar of his country was not more pathetically generous than New Hampshire's readiness to revise downward the tariff on wheat. Senator Gallinger, a priest of the stand-pat hierarchy, was in no wise abashed in presenting a petition to this effect from the wheat consumers of his state. Like the Irish landlord who warned his irate tenants that their murder of his agent could not intimidate him, Senator Gallinger could say: "If you think to scare me out of high tariffs for New Hampshire products by slashing Nebraska wheat you are much mistaken." As for Nebraska and the other wheat states, they welcome the issue. The wheat tariff has never yet held up the price of wheat till after nothing was left but the fag end of a crop, and that mostly in speculators' hands. If New Hampshire thinks otherwise it is fortunate. It may open the way to trade free wheat for lower tariffs and lower prices on the paper, lumber, leather, cotton and woolen goods that New Hampshire has to sell us.—Nebraska State Journal.

Impossible to Move Aldrich.

Of what use is it for Mr. Dolliver to urge Mr. Aldrich to "get that ghost, the British manufacturer, out of his system?" If Mr. Aldrich really believes that the attacks on his schedules are "prompted by British manufacturers," as he says, he will probably so continue. He is hopeless. There are only a few thousand British manufacturers, and they have no votes here. There are eighty-odd million American consumers with voices to protest. But Mr. Aldrich is schoolman enough to repeat of his British bogy: "I believe because it is impossible."

BURDEN FALLS ON THE POOR

System of Federal Taxation Enables the Wealthy to Escape Paying Their Just Share.

To the World's demand that congress shall reduce the cost of living: tax wealth, not poverty, the Troy Press objects:

"Of course the outcry to 'tax wealth, not poverty,' is cheap demagogy, for here wealth is taxed proportionately. The law reads in effect that a million dollars' worth be assessed for that amount, whether it is owned by one, a dozen, or a thousand individuals. This is common sense, just taxation."

Only in the case of real estate is it even approximately true that wealth is taxed proportionately. The personal property of very rich men almost entirely escapes taxation. Franchise values are taxed in New York, but for years their owners have fought off payments.

These remarks apply only to state and local taxation. Federal taxation, instead of proportionately burdening the rich, is laid almost entirely upon consumption; and it is so levied as to fall most heavily upon the cheapest grades of articles most commonly consumed. Poor men must have food, clothes and shelter for themselves and their children, who are more numerous than the children of the rich; and these things are heavily taxed.

The result is a higher average cost of living for people of moderate means than obtains in any other country, and in ironic recompense therefor a great group of tariff-made millionaires whose vast wealth, whose extravagance and whose follies in the second and third generation are the wonder and sometimes the scandal of the world.

If wealth really were taxed in proportion, this country would be an even better one to live in.—New York World.

Democratic Senators Rebuked.

The senate voted to retain the Dutch standard test of sugar, which is wholly in the interest of the sugar trust, and to maintain the present rates, thus giving the trust the present differential between the cost of raw and that of refined sugar. The duty on refined sugar is $1.90 a hundred pounds and on raw $1. It was proposed to make the former duty $1.82½. This would have reduced the margin in favor of the trust from 90 cents to 82½ cents a hundred pounds, or by 7½ cents. But the proposition was defeated, only six insurgent Republicans, including Senator Beveridge, voting for the reduction. The two "Democratic" senators from Louisiana voted against both the proposed amendments. The correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer, with a picturesqueness that is to be highly commended, says:

"The result of these two votes was immediately flashed over to New York by the agents of the sugar trust, and doubtless the tentacles of the octopus are going through the gyrations of a Salome dancer."

A Tariff Prophecy.

"If this bill, or anything substantially like it, becomes a law I predict that a campaign for lower duties will begin the moment the extraordinary session of congress adjourns, and will continue with increasing zeal until the judgment entered in the court of public conscience is also entered in the journals of congress."

Thus speaks Senator Cummins of Iowa to his fellow senators on the floor of the upper house. Mr. Cummins has been governor of Iowa, and knows the sentiment of that state. What is more important, he knows that tariff reform sentiment among the Iowa farmers is a type of similar sentiment throughout the great agricultural west.

To Be Fought Out at the Polls.

Such a tariff as Mr. Aldrich and the finance committee are trying to push through would not settle anything. It would be only the beginning of the bitterest fight over the tariff that the country has known for half a century. Against the radicalism of the Aldrich following there is a popular radicalism which cannot be suppressed, in favor of a just tariff which shall contribute liberally to the revenues of the government. If the reactionaries prevail in the making of the new tariff the question will be the burning issue in next year's campaign.

Benefit of "Downward" Revision.

As a matter of fact, what is called the danger of a treasury deficit in "downward" tariff revision is probably the prelude to a national blessing. Extravagance is the curse of government, as it is the curse of individuals. If a general reduction in tariff duties caused enough deficit to force congress into an era of wise economy it would prove a double benefit to the country.

Aldrich the Supreme Ruler.

The faith of Nelson Wilmarth Aldrich in the perfidy and temerity of the Republican party and in the subserviency of the people to green goods politics has to be witnessed to be believed. The history of the American government furnishes no parallel to the insults which are heaped upon the doctrine of popular government by the senatorial boss from Rhode Island.

President Taft pleads for an intelligent opposition party in the south, which, of course, means an effective Republican party. Good enough; now will he have an Aldrich Republican or a La Follette Republican party there? —Washington Times.

But with all the shifting of schedules the tariff, you know, is really "on" the ultimate consumer.

TUSSLE ON TOP OF PIKE'S PEAK

In Which Government Employe Was Fatally Injured—Fought With Two Tourists Over Price of Rooms.

Colorado Springs, Col., June 28.—After a desperate hand-to-hand conflict early Sunday morning on the summit of Pike's Peak, 14,000 feet high, John a Clark and George Shipley, students of the University of Chicago, are in jail and Howard H. Robinson, government caretaker of the Summit house, is hovering between life and death at the St. Francis hospital, in this city.

The attempted murder was the result of a quarrel over the charge demanded by Robinson for accommodation in the Summit house, which is maintained as a resting place for those who make the peak trip. The fight took place in total darkness in the middle of the night, when the three men were the only ones on the mountain top.

The two young men say that Robinson attacked them because they awakened him, and they attacked him in self-defense. Robinson is still unconscious, and his version of the encounter is not known. The police officials of the city are making an investigation to find the real cause of the trouble, and will not place any charge against the men in custody until more is found out.

Shipley and Clark arrived in this city from the east two days ago. They were well dressed and seemed to have plenty of money and made a number of friends. Saturday night they decided to walk up to the summit of Pike's peak, a favorite trip of tourists in the Rocky mountain region.

They reached the summit and were weakened to the point of exhaustion by the icy winds and the blinding snowstorm. They rapped on the door of the Summit house, where Robinson was asleep. The latter admitted them and they had something to eat. After they had come back to the main room, which was illuminated only by the candle in a neighboring room a quarrel arose over the price of rooms for the remainder of the night.

According to the story of one of the men Robinson ordered them out. Then the three men, three miles above civilization, fought in a fierce death struggle. After several minutes of desperate struggling Robinson dropped back unconscious.

DRIVEN MAD

By Daughter's Death, Gurney Kills His Father, Wounds His Sister-in-Law and Commits Suicide.

Quincy, Ill., June 28.—George Gurney, 56, foreman for Black & Laird, general contractors, of New Orleans, Sunday shot and instantly killed his father, Dr. Seneca Gurney, seriously wounded his sister-in-law, Mrs. Seneca Gurney, jr., aged 37, and killed himself.

The family had planned to go on an excursion to Springfield, Ill., but after breakfast Gurney called his sister-in-law to his room, told her he felt ill and would not accompany them. She expressed sympathy for him, when he pulled a magazine revolver from under the bed clothes and shot her in the neck. Dr. Gurney rushed in to help her and was shot in the head. The murderer then shot himself in the brain.

Ill health and worry over the death of his daughter are believed to have driven Gurney insane.

Dynamite Works Havoc in Chicago.

Chicago, June 28.—An explosion supposed to have been caused by dynamite did untold damage in the business district here Sunday night, injuring two or three persons severely and wrecking stores and windows for a block near Clark and Washington streets. The exact nature of the explosion remains a riddle, because of the great amount of debris thrown around the alley where it occurred. It is probably another in the series of gamblers' war bombs that have mystified the police of this city for two years. Bomb No. 30 in the series wrecked a saloon a few nights ago.

Chinese Attack American Officer.

Pekin, June 28.—Hazrah Ali, a surveyor in the India service, and Mr. Sowerby, interpreter, both attaches of the meteorological expedition under Lieut. Clark, an American officer, were attacked June 21 by natives 20 miles south of Lanchow, the capital of the province of Kan Su. Hazrah Ali was pursued three miles and killed.

Killed While He Prayed.

Chicot, Tex., June 28.—While J. E. Moser, 47, was on his knees in a church near here, Roy E. Burnham, 19, son-in-law, arose in his pew and fired three shots at Moser, killing him instantly. Burnham's wife, who had recently left him, was beside her father when the shooting occurred.

His Skull Fractured.

New Haven, Ct., June 28.—William K. Shepherd, instructor at Yale Sheffield Scientific school, suffered a skull fracture when an automobile in which he was riding with several Yale students was run into by another machine near Westerly, R. I.

High Diver Killed.

Beaumont, Tex., June 28.—Charles Harris, aged 30 years, professional high diver, was killed when making a dive into the Neches river from a 60-foot ladder, Sunday. His neck was broken.

SEA MONSTER CHASED SHIP.

Mariners Just Arrived at Boston Tell of Exciting Experience on the Vasty Deep.

Entered in the permanent log of the British steamship Moreddio, Capt. Clark, is a record of a sea monster sighted while the ship was on a passage between Penarth and Santos. Chief Officer Neil S. Murray was in charge of the bridge at the time and a Greek quartermaster, who first sighted the monster, was almost petrified with fear and was at the point of permitting the big freighter to take her own course.

"It was like this," explained the chief officer when the Moreddio docked at East Boston: "The ship was 500 miles from Santos. I saw the Greek acting strangely and followed the direction he was looking.

"My hair nearly stood on end at the sight. Swimming parallel to the ship was a monster lizard. It was big as a whale. The ocean fairly seethed as it propelled itself with enormous dragon's claws. A head as big as a pilot house and one coil of the beast's neck were above water.

"For a distance of nearly 300 feet the sea heaved and was lashed into foam. I think the lizard was fully the Moreddio's length, and I feared for the safety of the steamship as the creature, mailed in huge, bony scales of a dark green color, swerved as if to come alongside. It had a sawlike ridge on its back and its girth was fully as great as that of a whale.

"After the serpent had raced the ship several minutes it humped its back and sounded. The swash from its commotion shook the ship and sent a spray over the starboard rail.

"I have followed the sea many years and, mind you, I am not given to fancies. That creature so impressed me that I entered the incident in the scrap log, and later made a permanent record of it."

The Moreddio's crew substantiates Officer Murray, while the Greek quartermaster admits he did not recover from the shock for several days.—Boston Herald.

200 Year Old Butter.

Ghee is used in India as is butter in America and European countries, and in fact is butter, so prepared that it never grows stale, instances being known of its preservation for as long as 200 years.

In preparing ghee, butter is boiled until all the watery particles and curds have been thrown off by repeated skimmings. When the liquor is clear oil it is poured into a vessel to cool. When cooled it is in granulated form, and will keep for years without becoming rancid or of bad odor. Ghee has been found in deserted castles, where it must have been left more than two centuries ago.—Popular Mechanics.

Benefits of a Fruit Diet.

Fruitarian diet is to be vigorously advocated this summer by the Order of the Golden Age of England, which has opened an international headquarters in London.

The following are given as advantages of a fruitarian diet: Man's physical structure demonstrates that he is a fruit-eating creature; flesh food is very frequently diseased, and so causes many distressing maladies; fruitarian food is superior in nutritive value to the flesh of animals.

If man adopted a fruitarian diet, said Dr. Robert Bell at the headquarters, there was no reason why he should not attain the age of 128.

Story of an Egg.

Burman Hunter while on a trip near Unadilla found an egg beside the railroad track. He brought the egg home and set it under a hen, and now Mr. Hunter has one of the finest 11-days-old wild ducks ever seen.—Cordele Rambler.

Probably.

"How do you supose the Venus lost her arms?" "She evidently dropped them to grab her bath robe which you can see is slipping off."—Houston Post

TUMOR OF FOUR YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindley, Ind. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They said that only an operation could help me. I am very glad that I followed a friend's advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it has made me a strong and well woman, and I shall recommend it as long as I live."—MRS. MAY FEY, Lindley, Ind.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

His Stomach Rebelled.

A dyspeptic Atchison man went into a restaurant the other day and ordered fried catfish. "Fried cat!" bawled the waiter to the cook. Instantly the weak stomach rebelled. "Cancel that order" the customer said, "and give me an order of country sausage." "Sidetrack the cat and make it dog!" yelled the waiter, and he is wondering yet why the man grabbed his hat and left.—Exchange.

HARRY HAMILTON, D. D. S.

A. B. Tompkins, the popular traveling representative of the Graf, Morsbach Co., Cincinnati, one of the largest saddlery and harness houses in the country, spent a few days the past week here with home folks. His little daughter, Miss Isabelle, who has been visiting friends at Clarksville, Tenn., has returned home.

Quite an interesting game of base ball was played on the home grounds Saturday, June 26th, between Walton and the Newport Monarchs, resulting in a score of 15 to 14 in favor of Walton. The score was tied six different times during the game, and eleven innings were necessary to decide the game.

The members of the Walton Methodist church surprised their pastor and his estimable lady, Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Harris, last Wednesday evening with a "Pound Party," at which there were about fifty present. A most delightful evening was spent together and Rev. and Mrs. Harris, who have always been fond of the members of their congregation, were more than impressed with this very kindly remembrance.

At the last meeting of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the Methodist Church, it was decided to extend an invitation to the Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the Covington District to hold its annual meeting in Walton in October. The local society has grown rapidly of late, and the last meeting held at the house of the vice-president, Mrs. S. W. Beverly, was interesting and well attended. The third Saturday afternoon in each month is the time of meeting.

The Court of Appeals decided the case of John G. Adams, Administrator of the estate of Mrs. Rebecca Powers, deceased, with the will annexed, versus Joseph Redmour, who endeavored to usurp Mr. Adams' right to serve as the administrator. Judge Harbeson of the Boone circuit court decided against Mr. Adams, and his attorney took the case to the Court of Appeals, and secured a judgment for his client, the court holding that he was the legal administrator as he had never declined to serve as such.

We desire to hereby express our appreciation of the delightful pound party given us Wednesday evening, June 23d, by Walton friends. The pleasure of being so kindly remembered by the neighbors was only equaled by the complete surprise we had when, upon returning from prayer-meeting we found the house standing open and every room lighted and full of a genial company of our friends. Being conducted to the kitchen, we found the table filled with a choice assortment of the indispensables of house keeping. Truly it was a kindness far beyond our expecting our deserving. We thank you, one and all, and extend a cordial invitation to come and sample with us the good things you brought.

REV. AND MRS. J. B. HARRIS.

Samuel C. Hicks, of the firm of S. C. Hicks and R. Lee Huey, has received and settled for the pooled wool he has bought in Boone county. They bought a large quantity paying as high as 34 1-2 cents per pound, and distributed about $21,000 among the wool growers. Frank Mitchell, of the firm of Coffin & Son, Philadelphia, received the wool for his house, that firm buying the wool from Hicks & Huey, and there was not a single complaint of any kind nor was there the least friction over the delivery of the wool. Mr. Mitchell stated that the wool was bought very high, too high for the present market, and he figured a loss on the purchase to his firm, but did not make any complaint, feeling that the contract should be taken care of the same as if a good profit was in sight on the purchase.

LAWN FETE.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church will give an ice cream social on the lawn of Mr. Napoleon Rich in South Walton, on the afternoon and evening of July 3, the proceeds to go for the benefit of the church. Come, you will enjoy a pleasant evening and help a good cause.

4TH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

The patriotic citizens of Walton and vicinity are respectfully requested to participate in an Independence Day Celebration to be held at the Walton Opera House, Monday, July 5th, at 2 o'clock p. m., when there will be patriotic addresses by Dr. W. W. Evans, Prof. H. C. Wayman and others. Come all and enjoy the occasion. BOBT. CHAMBERS, Chairman Committee of Arrangements.

A BAD ACCIDENT.

Last Saturday evening Dr. B. K. Menefee and Hon. John C. Byland narrowly escaped serious injury by the coupling coming unfastened as they were starting to Beaver Lick on professional business. The horse was started at a rapid gate and in going out of Walton down the Beaver road the buggy suddenly parted and the horse, shafts and two front wheels went flying forward, while the remains of the buggy and its occupants made several revolutions in the roadway, throwing both gentlemen out with great violence, and both sustained severe bruises. It was thought that Mr. Byland's left arm had been broken at the elbow and he was taken to Cincinnati that night, and the X rays applied to ascertain the extent of his injuries, and it was found that he sustained a dislocation of the elbow and a fracture of the bones, and while it is still a very painful injury yet no serious results are apprehended, and he is able to get about in his business interests.

PRIMARY ELECTION IN GALLATIN.

The Democratic primary election held in Gallatin county, last Saturday, was the hottest that has ever been held in that county, and it was a close finish in several races. In the race for county judge Wm. R. Payne, the incumbent, and James S. Brown, who had served as judge in that county for about 24 years, were the contestants. Both reside at Warsaw, and that precinct tied in their race, each receiving 142 votes, and in the county Brown won by a majority of three votes. There is some talk of a contest before the committee, but it will not amount to anything, as the general opinion seems to be that Brown is entitled to the nomination. In the race for assessor there were a lot of candidates, and Billy Ferguson, of near Sparta, won by a plurality of eleven, his principal opponent being Jas. L. Hendrix, of Napoleon. The other nominees are Ben S. Lindsay for County Attorney, Jos. K. Nesbit for County Clerk, George W. Snyder for Sheriff, and Thos. Morris for Jailer, the latter being a candidate for re-election and winning by about forty plurality.

LITTLE GIRL DROWNED.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Sue Collins, the twelve year old daughter of Ed. Collins of Crittenden, was drowned in the pond near his flouring mill. The little girl had gone in bathing in the pond with her little brother and sister Richard and Ada and got beyond her depth and was drowned. The other children did not notice her sinking beneath, the water as she made no struggle or noise, and in a short time missing her, they went to the house, and finding that she had not returned gave the alarm. Her father and Uncle Jos. Collins hurried to the pond and plunged in and at last the father struck the body of his darling child with his foot, and diving, brought the body to the surface. It was hurriedly taken ashore and for an hour the greatest effort was made to restore life to the little body, as there appeared a chance for resuscitation, but all efforts were unavailing. The little girl was a beautiful and winsome child and was idolized by her parents and beloved by everybody, and her shocking death is a heart-breaking ordeal. The funeral took place at Crittenden, Friday, the services being conducted by Rev. F. S. Pollitt, of the Methodist church, after which the remains were brought to the Richwood cemetery and interred.

AN AMUSING INCIDENT.

Quite an amusing incident, to the bystander, was witnessed here last Thursday: A party of ladies and gentlemen, who have been in the habit of touring the northern States in an automobile where a toll gate is a curiosity, so seldom is one encountered, made a trip in their auto from Covington to view the beautiful scenery along the Lexington pike in the famed Blue Grass State. Just before reaching Walton they passed through a toll gate, and the pole being up they paid no attention to it until they reached Walton, where the doughty town Marshal held the party up at the point of a pistol that resembled a mountain cannon. The keeper of the toll gate had telephoned to have the party stopped and the marshal thought that perhaps "Toronto Jimmy" was coming to town and prepared himself accordingly. The men in the auto were astounded and thought it was a genuine "Dick Turpin" holding up in broad day light, and the ladies went into hysterics, and all were about to deliver over their valuables when 'Squire Watson came from the telephone and explained that the auto party had overlooked paying the fifteen cents toll. With a great sigh of relief the party produced the necessary coin of the realm, paying 'Squire Watson, and after making another entry in their "Notes by the Wayside," pursued their journey.

GUNPOWDER.

Aunt Polly Rouse is visiting relatives in Kenton county.

B. C. Surface and wife were guests of H. F. Utz and wife, last Sunday.

Bob Snyder and family broke bread with J. W. Rouse and wife, last Sunday.

G. C. Barlow and wife entertained several of their friends at dinner, last Sunday.

D. L. Carpenter and family, of Home City, Ohio, spent last Sunday with aunt Jemima Tanner.

Emerson, little son of W. N. Smith and wife, of Union neighborhood, spent several days last week with relatives in this neighborhood.

Rev. Walterick complied with the request of the Superintendent of Public Instruction and delivered an interesting discourse on education at Hopeful, last Sunday.

J. H. Tanner and daughter left, last Monday, for Eaton, Ohio, to visit his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lizzie Quick, who is seriously sick at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Levy House.

Another successful term of school, taught by Miss Stella Carpenter at Pleasant, Ridge, closed last Friday. It was the seventh term taught by her at that place, and she has given perfect satisfaction, and wherever she may be called to teach the patrons may rest assured that their children are in care of a good teacher.

IDLEWILD.

July 2.—The cow is unlike man; too modest to blow her own horn.

John Cropper is having his barn in Pushburg painted, Deputy McGuire, contractor.

Geo. Pfalzgraf is yet unable to shoe horses on account of the trouble with his ankle.

Mrs. Fanny Randall and daughter, Martha, of Idlewild, attended church at Mt. Pleasant, Sunday.

R. C. Gaines' second barn was raised this week. Hossman is a "hoss" when he turns himself loose.

Ernest Brown and wife, of Bullittsville, were down to papa and mamma Brown's, of Idlewild, Sunday.

Mrs. Snyder and daughter, below Petersburg, spent Tuesday with Mrs. Snyder's cousin, Mrs. Goodridge, of Sand Run.

The sawmill at Idlewild has not been running to amount to angthing this week on account of sickness in operators family.

John Eggleston and wife attended church at Sand Run, Sunday, returning pleased and well paid for their long drive from Pushburg.

Lester Jones, of Cincinnati, was down to his uncle Will Jones', Saturday. Went back Sunday evening. Of course he called on his best piece of calico.

Miss Edna Riley, of Bullittsville, is studying for a county certificate, and if she succeeds the first school she will teach will be the Bullittsville school.

Miss Martha Randall, of Idlewild, returned a few days since from a two weeks' visit with her uncle and aunt, Ed Botts and sister, Pearl, of Sorrel Horse farm.

Rev. C. V. Brooks filled his regular appointment at Sand Run, last Sunday. The congregation was the largest of any since he has been preaching there. Text—Matthew 5-8. Sermon an able one.

The party that bored the well at the Hebron creamery brought his machinery, Wednesday, to R. C. Gaines, and will bore a well for Mr. Gaines and perhaps two or three others in the neighborhood.

R. B. Huey, of Sunnyside, passed through Pushburg, Monday, looking as natural as of yore, and wearing that pleasant smile of his that never fails to make one feel good. He says, "you have had more rain at Pushburg than we have at Sunnyside."

Sam Houston, of Bullittsville, sold his residence and smithshop to Theodore Birkle. When a man sells his residence in Bullittsville some one has to leave the town. We are not advised as to where Mr. Houston will go, or what he intends doing.

Thomas Milton Riley, of Bullittsville, called on Carroll and Kirtley Cropper, Tuesday, but no one was at home. They are three as nice, kind, polite and well behaved little boys as can be found anywhere. All the little boys and girls here are nice and well behaved, which speaks well for their parents.

Ed Lonisker of Bullittsville, took his wife's sister, Miss Wafford, who has been staying with them the past two weeks, to her Indiana home, Sunday, and returned Monday, bringing another sister for help and company for his wife during their baby's illness, as his business, that of mail carrier, takes him from home from 7 a. m. until 6 p. m.

There is 110 rod of the fence that Lee and James Masters put up for Jack, the little man. They commenced Wednesday morning of last week and finished Monday at noon, this week. They put up 61 posts, 5 of which were end posts, and 10 angle, necessitating 5 anchors and the burial of 10 dead men. It is an 11 wire fence. We will wager there are not two more men in the county who can do the work neater, better and in less time. They intended buying the post holes but Parmer Jones has a corner on post holes and the price was too high.

PETERSBURG.

Mrs. Jennie Rice, of Carrollton, is visiting among her friends here.

H. E. Arnold and wife spent Saturday in Burlington as guests of his sister, Mrs. Clutterbuck.

The picnic given Saturday by the Epworth League was a great success both socially and financially. Everybody enjoyed the day and the refreshments, amusements, fireworks, etc., were excellent and all seemed to think the Epworth League knows how to give a picnic.

Dr. J. M. Grant left, Thursday evening, for Louisville, where he is to undergo a serious operation. His friends all extend wishes for a successful treatment and hope soon to have him back among them well and strong. His nephew, Dr. Carl Grant, of Louisville, has been doing his work here during his illness.

The series of lectures given by Rev. T. W. Watts, of Millersburg, have proved to be very interesting and the illustrated lectures, which were given in the school yard, were instructive, the pictures being so real. Despite the hot weather the crowds were large and he will extend his meetings until Wednesday evening.

The sixteen graduates on the Teachers Training Course under Rev. Carter of the Christian church, received their diplomas at Krutz's Hall, Monday evening, June 28. There were a number of nice songs and an interesting lecture by Dr. Hubert Moning, founder of this course of Teacher Training. Miss Ethel Sturgeon received a $2.50 gold piece as a prize for selling the largest number of tickets.

The remains of James B. Tolin were brought here Thursday evening and deposited in the vault to await burial. Mr. Tolin was born July 4th, 1857, and died June 30th, 1909, at the Betts St., Hospital, Cincinnati. He was twice married, first to Miss Mollie Sullivan and after her death to Mrs. Nannie Baker, who preceded him to the better land several years ago. His first union was blessed with two sons, Wade and Warren, both of whom are left to lament his death. He united with the Methodist Church here in 1902 under the Rev. T. B. Cook. He was a faithful Sunday School Superintendent for about five years and his works witnessed to the sincerity of his profession. Mr. Tolin was employed at Delhi, Ohio, just before his death; and, although he was a long sufferer from physical disease, he always tried to do his work faithfully. The community extend to the bereaved ones their deepest sympathy. Funeral services were held Friday morning at 11 o'clock at the cemetery by Rev. S. J. Bradley, after which the body was interred.

CARD OF THANKS.—We desire in this way to express our heartfelt thanks to the good people for the kindness shown us in our hour of sorrow. To Rev. Bradley for the consoling words, the singers, and the friends who placed flowers upon our father's casket.

We all extend to Mr. and Mrs. Riggs our best wishes for a long, happy and prosperous life. May God smile down upon them as their life boat goes sailing down the stream of time; may He guide and direct it with His kind and loving hand that it may reach the haven in safety for, "Like unto ships far off at sea, outward or homeward bound are we."

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick, of Danforth, Me. "Although past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger.

The dog belonging to S. W. Tolin got snappish yesterday and tried to bite his owner, for which offense the death penalty was inflicted. The dog was bitten a year or so ago by a strange dog which was afterwards reported to have hydrophobia. Since the dog was killed one or more persons remember having noticed that it had been behaving in a strange manner for a day or two.

By no means has B. B. Hume abandoned the idea of putting in an automobile to make a couple of trips a day from Burlington to the car line at Highland Cemetery. It is believed that a good passenger patronage will soon result.

Leslie Robinson and Miss Mollie Spillman surprised their many friends last week and were married. We extend to them our best wishes for a long and prosperous life.

James B. Tolin Dead.

The announcement of the death of James B. Tolin, last Friday morning, was a shock to his friends here, very few of whom had heard of his illness. He had been in poor health for a year or more, having spent several weeks in the hospital on two occasions previous to last Sunday morning a week, when prostrated by typhoid fever, he was taken to Betts Street hospital. It was a second attack of the disease, the other attack being no longer ago than last fall. Only a few weeks ago he was in Burlington, and was looking well and was very much encouraged by the great improvment made in his physical condition in the month or six weeks previous, and intended to return to work in the next few days. He was a brother of attorney S. W. Tolin, was in his 53d year, and a widower the second time. By his first wife he had two sons, Wade and Warren, both grown, and survive their father. By his second wife he had no children. James Tolin was of a very quiet, retiring disposition yet a bright man, and many men with much less natural intellect have been pushed forward and given prominent positions in public affairs where their supposed ability was applauded. For many years he was a faithful contributor to these columns and was regarded as easily the most vesatile writer on the paper's staff. He knew a news item when he saw it, and had the rare knack of presenting it in the most entertaining manner. The burial was in the Petersburg cemetery at 3 o'clock last Friday afternoon.

Life 100,000 Years Ago.

Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men, who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was in constant danger from wild beasts. Today the danger as shown by A. W. Brown, of Alexander, Me., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Lungs, Colds, obstinate Coughs, and prevent Pneumonia, it's the best medicine on earth. 50c and $1. Guaranteed by Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger. Trial bottle free.

There are many very weedy fields of corn in this county, and in very many instances is this condition due to no neglect on the part of the person cultivating it, as the long wet spell this spring gave the weeds and grass such a start as to make it next to impossible to overcome them, especially where a little too much was planted.

Thomas Roberts and "Boss" Eddins got a roast at Billie Rice's last week—they were putting a metal roof on the barn they are building. The metal got so hot on several occasions that it almost blistered their hands. The work was decidedly unpleasant.

Billie Hughes did not go out on his route with his auto yesterday. It being slippery and he having had so little experience in handling the machine he thought he would better use a horse and buggy until conditions improve.

James Corcoran, an old and esteemed citizen of Bullittsville neighborhood, was buried at Petersburg, last Monday. He was a hard working, clever, upright man, who had many friends to deplore his death.

Rev. Edgar D. Jones will give his lecture "An Evening with the Dialect Poets," at Bullittsville Christian church, Saturday evening, July 10th at 8 p. m. Admission, 25 cents.

Rev. Marion Crosley will preach at the Burlington Universalist church, Sunday, July 11th, morning at 10:30 and evening at 8 p. m.

Mr. Beick and family, of Cincinnati spent from Saturday evening until Monday evening with J. F. Blyth and wife.

Jeweler Robert Clark was called to Indiana, last Thursday, on account of the dangerous illness of some of his relatives.

Mrs. O. N. Scott, of the Split Rock neighborhood, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Susan Clutterbuck, one day last week.

W. R. Davrainville and wife, of Newport, spent from Saturday until Tuesday with her mother, Mrs. Susan Kirkpatrick and family.

Mrs. Sarah Huey, of Somerset, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Gaines, at her pleasant country home out on the Petersburg pike.

Harry Brown and wife, of Cincinnati, spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mrs. Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Roberts near town.

Miss Sarah Gayle Furnish and Master Milton Revill, of Covington, came out to celebrate the fourth with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Revill.

The Ninth street Baptist church, Cincinnati, Sunday school, spent Monday at D. M. Snyder's. The school celebrates independence day every year with him and his family.

Miss Charlotte Hall, Miss Nellie Trotter and Mr. Chester A. Allen, of Newport, spent from Saturday evening until Monday evening with Miss Charlotte's parents, F. A. Hall and wife.

Miss Stella Davranville, of Newport, was the guest of her cousin, Miss Bessie Hall, Monday and Monday night, and left Tuesday morning to visit Miss Jessie Utz, of Hathaway neighborhood.

S. W. Tolin and son, Garnett, were summoned to Betts Street hospital, Cincinnati, by telephone last Thursday morning, on account of the death at that institution that morning of the former's brother, J. B. Tolin.

Ed Rice, of Idlewild, attended county court Monday, and got badly weather bound. He said when he left home Monday morning they were taking the mower out to commence harvesting the second crop of alfalfa, and he was certain rain was near at hand. He did not get home until yesterday afternoon.

Col. Ben Normau, of Gunpowder, was in Burlington yesterday on business pertaining to the public roads in his bailiwick. The Colonel is one of the best overseers in the county and his heart and soul are in his work. He never fails to call on the hands under his command when the time of year arrives to give the highways attention.

G. M. Moore, of Crittenden, Grant county, was in Burlington, last Friday, making a fiduciary settlement with county Judge Cason. He reported the farmers in his part of the country as waging a hard battle with the weeds, although corn and tobacco is growing nicely. He reported that Geo. W. Sleet, whom a few people in this county know, and of whom a few others have heard, as thriving as usual.

Col. W. T. Stott and wife, of Petersburg, spent last Wednesday in Burlington, guests at the Boone House. Mr. Stott spent the greater part of his time while in town at the sheriff's office, securing a list of the taxable property in the Petersburg graded school district. He is an enthusiastic supporter of the school and is putting forth his best endeavors in behalf of the institution. If Mr. Stott's interest in the school is an index to the educational interest in general in his town, Petersburg G ded school is bound to prove a success.

A Soldier's Big Game Hunting

By Lieut.-Gen. R. S. S. Baden-Powell, F. R. G. S.

Through all the world the name of Baden Powell, soldier and scientist, is celebrated and but few people know that he has the ability to shine by right of his pen and brush as well. The hero of Mafeking and a dozen other campaigns filled in the gaps between military engagements with hunting and this "Sport in War" contains some dramatic adventures sprinkled with bits of rare humor and caustic comment. A most unusual feature is the reckless way in which he hunted with military arms instead of the customary weapons for big game.

"WHAT kind of sport did you have out there?" is the question with which men have, as a rule, greeted one on return from the campaign in Rhodesia; and one could truthfully say, "We had excellent sport." I am about to tell of facing lions with a small caliber military rifle, an adventure to thrill army sportsman.

This scouting, to be successful, necessitated one's going with the very slenderest escort—frequently with one man only, to look after the horses, and for long distances away from our main body, into the districts occupied by the enemy and by big game. Thus, one was thrown entirely on one's own resources, with the stimulating knowledge that if he did not maintain a sufficient alertness of observation and action, he stood a very good chance, indeed, not only of failing to gain information which you were desired to seek, but also of getting himself wiped out, and left in stress on the veldt.

"Spooring," or tracking, was our main source of guidance and information and night the cover under which we were able to make our way about the enemy's country with impunity.

The pleasures of the pursuit of game were all the more enhanced by the knowledge that the meat was really necessary to us, and especially by the fact that we often carried out our sport at the risk of being ourselves the quarry of some sneaking band of rebel warriors.

Dangers of Camping in the Lion Country.

Moreover, to all our fun a seasoning was added in the shape of lions, whose presence or propinquity was very frequently impressed upon us at nights by deep-toned grunts or ghostly apparitions within the halo of our watch-fires. In defiance of the rules of war—which forbid the use of fires by night, as guiding an enemy's night attack—we had a ring of bright fires burning 'round our bivouac to scare away the lions.

By day we saw them, too. One patrol, indeed, came upon a group of nine lions dozing in the bush; and when the nine arose and yawned and stretched their massive jaws and limbs, the patrol, remembering the old maxim concerning the relations between discretion and valor, changed the course of their advance and took another line.

One time, when I was patrolling the bank of the Shangani river with three men, the massive form of a lion was seen slowly moving over the boulders of the river-bed. The corporal and I jumped off our horses in a moment, and fired a volley a deux, at about 180 yards. One shot thudded into him, the other striking the ground just under his belly. He sprang with a light bound over a rock and disappeared from our view. Posting one man on a high point on the bank to watch the river-bed and leaving the other in charge of our horses, the corporal and I made our way down to where we had last seen the lion. We were armed with Lee-Metford carbines and we turned on our magazines in order to have a good running fire available should our quarry demand it.

Meantime our main body, coming along the opposite bank of the river, had seen our maneuver, and an officer and one man had come down into the riverbed from their side to help us.

Gradually and cautiously we surrounded the spot where we guessed the lion to be—cautiously, at least, as far as three of us were concerned; the fourth, the man who had come from the main body, was moving in a far freer and more confident manner than any of us could boast; he clambered over the rocks and sprang with agility into the most likely corners for finding a wounded lion lying ambushed, and his sole weapon was his revolver—for he was a farrier. Such is Tommy Atkins; whether it is the outcome of sheer pluck, or of ignorance, or of both combined, the fact remains that he will sail gayly in where danger lies, and as often as not sail gayly out again unharmed.

However, to continue; at last we were on the spot, but no lion was there—an occasional splash of blood, and here and there, where sand lay between the rocks, the impress of a mighty paw showed that he had moved away after being hit. But soon all traces ceased, and though we searched for long we could find no other sign of him.

THE LION TOSSED UP HIS SHAGGY HEAD.

Outwitted by the Jungle King

We halted on the river-bank during the intense heat of the day, and before resuming our march in the evening we sallied out once more to search the river-bed and an islet grown with bushes, where we hoped he might be. And while we searched the hussar, who had been assigned to me to hold my horse, and who was the man who, in the morning, had been posted to watch the river-bed, asked: "How many lions are there supposed to be here?" I told him "Only the one we fired at this morning."

Whereupon he grimly said, "Oh, I saw him go away up the river when you went down it. He was a dragging his hindquarters after him."

It appeared that the man thought he had been posted to guard against surprise by an enemy, and did not realize that we, being down among the rocks, could not see the lion which was so visible from his lookout place. And so we lost that lion.

But I had better luck another time. It stands thus recorded in my diary:

"10th October.—(To be marked with a red mark when I can get a red pencil.) Jackson and a native 'boy' accompanied me scouting this morning; we three started off at 3 a. m. In moving round the hill that overlooks our camp we saw a match struck high up near the top of the mountain. This one little spark told us a good deal. It showed that the enemy were there; that they were awake and alert (I say 'they,' because one nigger would not dare to be up there by himself in the dark); and they were aware of our force being at Possett's (as otherwise they would not be occupying this hill).

"However, they could not see anything of us, as it was then quite dark. And we went farther on among the mountains. In the early morning light we crossed the deep river-bed of the Umchingwe River, and, in doing so, noticed the fresh spoor of a lion in the sand. We went on and had a good look at the enemy's stronghold; and on our way back, as we approached this river-bed, agreed to go quietly, in case the lion should be moving about in it. On looking down over the bank, my heart jumped into my mouth when I saw a grand old brute just walking in behind a bush. Jackson did not see him, but was off his horse as quickly as I was, and ready with his gun: too ready, indeed, for the moment that the lion appeared, walking majestically out from behind the bush that had hidden him, Jackson fired hurriedly, striking the ground under his foot, and, as we afterwards discovered, knocking off one of his claws.

"The lion tossed up his shaggy head and looked at us in dignified surprise. Then I fired and hit him with a leaden bullet from the Lee-Metford. He reeled, sprang round, and staggered a few paces, when Jackson, who was using a Martini-Henry, let him have one in the shoulder. This knocked him over sideways, and he turned about, growling savagely.

"I could scarcely believe that we had got a lion at last, but resolved to make sure of it; so, telling Jackson not to fire unless it was necessary (for fear of spoiling the skin with the larger bullet of the Martini), I went down closer to the beast and fired a shot at the back of his neck as he turned his head momentarily away from me. The bullet went through his spine and came out through the lower jaw, killing him.

"We were pretty delighted at our success, but our nigger was mad with happiness, for a dead lion—provided he is not a man-eater—has many invaluable gifts for a Kaffir, in the shape of love-philtres, charms against disease or injury, and medicines that produce bravery. It was quite delightful to shake hands with the mighty paws of the dead lion, to pull at his magnificent tawny mane, and to look into his great deep, yellow eyes. Then we set to work to skin him; two of us skinning while the other kept watch in case of the enemy sneaking up to catch us while we were thus occupied. We found that he was fat, and also that he had been much wounded by porcupines, portions of whose quills had pierced the skin, and lodged in his flesh in several places. Our nigger cut out the eyes, gall-bladder, and various bits of the lion's anatomy, as fetich medicine. I filled my carbine-bucket with some of the fat, as I knew my two 'boys,' Diamond and M'tini, would very greatly value it. Then, after hiding the head in a neighboring bush where we could find it again, we packed the skin on to one of the ponies and returned to camp mightily pleased with ourselves."

A Nubian Lion Hunt

By Baron Heinrich Albert

Baron Heinrich Albert, the Austrian-Swiss adventurer, has hunted game in every part of the world. He has an estate which provides him with an income of $5,000 per year, and for the past 18 years, that is since his majority, he has traveled over the globe facing dangerous animals and laying them low. It is not often that a man is found who has hunted puma, grizzly, moose, lion, tiger, elephant, wolf, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, leopard, oceolot, etc. In these especially written papers he has narrated for this series some of his most stirring encounters in the territory through which Ex-President Roosevelt will hunt.

IT WOULD be absurd after negotiating the dangers of a passage of the Upper Nile out of season and after traversing several hundreds of miles of country in the hands of rebellious tribesmen, to come to a mortal end under the paws of a Nubian lion. It would be the irony of fate, but that is what nearly happened to me some years ago. With perils innumerable behind us the two white men of the party, one a gold-seeker the other a pure adventurer of the type of Tamer, nearly came to an end.

We frequently left the river and navigable tributaries which we were working out slowly, to explore the ravines for high bars, never taking with us more than four bearers, though at times we were absent from the main party outfit for a fortnight, knowing it was entirely safe in the care of a thin cross-eyed Arabian ex-chasseur who was a born voyageur with a tinge of Napoleon and the Devil and Uncle Tom in him. He was true as salt Arabian and the blood brother Senegal negro are two types of dark skinned men with whom I would as soon face danger and difficulty as with any white men that live.

One night we were about to make camp when we encountered a party of women and girls bearing water jars and they told us of a village a mile further on. Before we reached the village we were met by the chief and his induanas who begged us to make a stay with them as they were seriously troubled with lions. Two of the chief's horses and two of his wives had been killed among the losses which the village had suffered and the three muskets in his army were of no avail especially as none of the officers in command could be induced to get near enough to the bold beasts to risk a shot.

About the second hour of darkness the cattle in the village became very restless. The wind was from the south and as the half full moon was so bright that any skulking animal near the village would have been noticed, Drayton and I agreed that the lion was in a little coppe of rocks about a half mile up the wind. We had not had time before dark to examine any of the old spoor and knowing merely that there was at least a lioness with cubs among the lot, we set out instead of waiting until they approached the stream. Drayton carried a special 50.50 Winchester and I a Parker ten-gauge, which I had loaded with special shells of dense powder and buckshot set in wax.

When within 50 yards of the koppe a splendid animal form rose out of the rocks and stood facing us his fore paws on a huge boulder. We were bidden by the clumps of brush through which we had been working and he did not see us. Slowly and majestically he surveyed the little plain then, thrusting out his ponderous jaw uttered a roar that went thundering down the reaches of moonlit silence.

It was with difficulty that I could restrain Drayton from risking a shot from where we stood. The lion held his pose and ducking under cover of the brush and treading softly on the sand we hurried forward to the first ridge of rocks. To pass these, we must attract his notice to a certainty, so Drayton dropped on one knee while with every nerve tingling and my eyes and ears astrain to catch any sign of his mate, who might be just beyond the ridge for all we knew, I waited for Drayton's shot. He chose the chest and the crash of the Winchester went echoing among the rocks. The magnificent beast leaped ten feet in the air, then came rolling, tumbling, clawing down our side of the koppe directly toward us. His wounded roar was answered from other directions. There were two other lions on the other side of the koppe and one in the rocks and brush not 20 yards from us to the right. But we had not time to think of them. The wounded lion got to his feet with incredible energy and quickness. As he leaped, with another roar I poured both barrels of my Parker into his body. That was enough. He landed in convulsions and it was fortunate that he had enough. There was a crash in the brush to the right and bounding into the moonlight giving terrible voice, came his mate. She stopped as she caught sight of us. Never have I broken and loaded a gun more quickly. Drayton had pumped in another shell and without pausing to more than swing on his knee and cover, he let drive and missed, barely raking her shoulder. She bit hastily at the wound and then came for us like a thunder bolt. I meant to pull both barrels, but gave her the right. She wavered a trifle, but was on us before I could fire again. She knocked Drayton flat and his head, striking a rock, he lay senseless, while her outstretched talons tore his rifle from his hands and tumbled it clattering among the bushes. Her momentum carried her over him and her body merely brushed me. I leaped one pace to the right and swinging my piece without even bringing it to shoulder drove the bucks into her throat. She was in the act of whirling to rush upon Drayton, but now dropped in her final agony rolling over and over on him, one blind blow from her paws tearing half the clothes from his body but leaving him unhurt. I did not know then but that she had crushed his skull as she leaped, but dragging him aside I saw that he was merely stunned and was now coming around.

TROUBLE OVER MERRY WIDOW

The Hat So Named, of Course, Is Meant, and the Tale Is a Dismal One, Indeed.

There's a weeping bride in Borough Park and an angry bridegroom, too, and a frenzied hatter, which does not matter as much as the bride's "boo-hoo!" writes the poet reporter of the New York Tribune.

When subway trains and rushing crowds of men from every nation had jammed the stairs and platforms of the Twenty-third street station the ticket seller, Charlie Hott, whose temper seemed erratic, held up a ticket buyer with a question most emphatic. The buyer, Israel Cohen, a milliner's errand boy, with a hat as big as ever seen, had caused the clerk's annoy. The hat was just a linear yard across from brim to brim, while half that distance up and down made other hats look slim. For the hat a bride was waiting and the hour was getting late, but the subway, Hott insisted, was not built to carry freight.

So Hott emerged from out his box and made a pass at Cohen, while Israel seemed inclined to think 'twas time that he was goin'. But ere the luckless messenger was able to escape the "Merry Widow" outfit had assumed a woeful shape. No longer high and lofty, but mashed so badly that it looked more like a pancake than a "Merry Widow" hat.

But while the fight was at its height a copper came around, arrested Hott (heaven help his lot) before he'd fought one round. To the nearest station of police, in Twentieth street, they tell, he took poor Hott, charged with assault, and locked him in a cell.

DUSKY MONARCH "EASY MARK"

Wiles of Beautiful Captive Proved Just the Thing When Emergency Came.

The beautiful young captive retained her presence of mind, however, and when it came her turn to be taken before the cannibal king, she marcelled herself very carefully.

"You're simply it!" he replied cordially.

"Well, sweet things are terribly fattening."

"Ah!"

"O, terribly. And there's nothing so hopelessly out of it as to be fat, these days!"

Whereupon the king was greatly shaken and commanded her instant release.

"People used to blame me because I knew I was pretty, but all the time I felt sure the knowledge would come handy some day!" commented the lovely creature, as she was led away.—Puck.

HER FRIENDS WONDER

How Mrs. Kessler Was Rescued from Almost Certain Death.

Few have lived through such trials and suffering from kidney disease as were endured by Mrs. Caroline Kessler of W. Main St., Paw Paw, Mich. Well and strong again, her case is thought a miracle by her friends. What Mrs. Kessler went through makes a long story—backache, rheumatism, dizzy and fainting spells, urinary disorders, dreadful bloating of dropsy and finally a complete prostration that defied medical skill and caused her to be given up. Through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills Mrs. Kessler is a well woman and is willing to tell about her case to anyone who cares to inquire.

AN OLD TIMER

Has Had Experiences.

A woman who has used Postum since it came upon the market knows from experience the wisdom of using Postum in place of coffee if one values health and a clear brain. She says:

"At the time Postum was first put on the market I was suffering from nervous dyspepsia, and my physician had repeatedly told me not to use tea or coffee. Finally I decided to take his advice and try Postum. I got a package and had it carefully prepared, finding it delicious to the taste. So I continued its use and very soon its beneficial effects convinced me of its value, for I got well of my nervousness and dyspepsia.

"My husband had been drinking coffee all his life until it had affected his nerves terribly, and I persuaded him to shift to Postum. It was easy to get him to make the change for the Postum is so delicious. It certainly worked wonders for him.

"We soon learned that Postum does not exhilarate nor depress and does not stimulate, but steadily and honestly strengthens the nerves and the stomach.

"To make a long story short, our entire family continued to use Postum with satisfying results, as shown in our fine condition of health and we have noticed a rather unexpected improvement in brain and nerve power."

Increased brain and nerve power always follow the use of Postum in place of coffee, sometimes in a very marked manner. "There's a Reason."

HEROES OF HISTORY—I

Jesus, Son of Sirach, Extoleth Them.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1902, by the Author, W. E. Edson.)

Based on Apocryphal Book of Ecclesiasticus.

Ecclesiasticus—This is the title given to the seventh book of the Apocrypha, otherwise called "The wisdom of Jesus the son of Sirach." The word, like many others of Greek origin, appears to have been adopted in the African dialect. The right explanation of the word is given by Rufinus, who remarks that "it does not designate the author of the book, but the character of the writing," as publicly used in the services of the church. According to Jerome the original Hebrew title was Proverbs and the Wisdom of Solomon, the title of The Book of All Virtues. In the Syriac version the book is entitled "The Book of Jesus the Son of Simeon Asiro," and the same book is called the "Wisdom of the Son of Asiro." The Palestinian origin of the author is substantiated by internal evidence, e. g. 24:10f. The language in which the book was originally composed was Hebrew. Jerome saying that he had met with the Hebrew text. Nothing however, remains of the original proverbs of Ben Sira except the few fragments in pure Hebrew which occur in the Talmud and later Rabbinic writers. The book is divided into 51 chapters.

GEMS FROM THE BOOK.

The root of wisdom is the fear of the Lord, and the branches thereof are long life.

Be not a hypocrite in the sight of men, and take good heed what thou speakest.

Gold is tried in the fire, and acceptable men in the furnace of adversity.

The greater thou art, the more humble thyself, and thou shalt find favor before the Lord.

Many are in high place, and of renown, but mysteries are revealed unto the meek.

A stubborn heart shall fare evil at last; and he that loveth danger shall perish therein.

The heart of the product will understand a parable, and an attentive ear is the desire of a wise man.

Observe the opportunity and beware of evil.

Be not as a lion in thy house, nor frantic among thy servants.

Strive for the truth unto death, and the Lord shall fight for thee.

Sweet language will multiply friends, and a fair speaking tongue will increase kind greetings.

A faithful friend is a strong defense, and he that hath found such an one hath found a treasure.

Open not thine heart to every man, lest he requite thee with a shrewd turn.

THE STORY.

"THE good deeds of a great man—how they live to inspire the lives of those who come after."

"Thou hast well spoken, Lycius. And what nation hath more to glory in than Israel?"

"Then why hast thou not spoken of them before? Thou art rich in wisdom, and proverbs flow from thy lips like water from the rippling spring."

The elder man sat silent and a deep, faraway look came into his eyes, and an expression of sadness settled upon his face, but he made no reply to the other's query.

The two men were seated in a shaded nook in one of those beautiful grape arbors which centuries ago covered the hillsides of Judea. The younger man had come on a long journey that he might find and converse with Jesus, the man of proverbs, whose fame for the wisdom of his words and the beautiful rectitude of his life had spread to his own land.

"I would know this man," he had exclaimed, "and would sit at his feet and learn of him."

And having formed this resolve he prepared for the journey, and having bade his friends goodby, had started, saying:

"I go seeking the truth. He who speaketh such wisdom must be endowed by the gods with an understanding of the mysteries of life. I would learn of him."

And so Lycius had come and had found Jesus the son of Sirach as gracious in manner as he was in words. And since the day of his coming they had communed together concerning the deeper things of life, and from his manuscripts Jesus had read to his guest the treasures of thought which he had gleaned through the years.

On the particular day on which our story opens they had been discussing the uplifting and transforming power of a lofty thought, and Jesus had said that a good life was a revelation of the truth. And Lycius had followed with the remark with which our story opens.

"Yea, Israel hath indeed had many great and good men to lead and guide and inspire her, and you dost ask why I have not spoken of them before?" And a deeper shade of sadness settled upon the face of Jesus, but he paused for only a moment and went on. "Dost not thou see what evil has come upon this nation? Where is the glory of David and Solomon? Where is the glory of the temple? Where is our influence for good among the nations? Gone! Gone! Gone!"

"Yea, but thou hast the memory of thy great leaders to comfort thee," spoke up Lycius in effort to cheer his companion.

"But see how little my nation careth for them or the truth for which they stood."

"Yea, but shouldest thou not speak of them, nevertheless? Perchance some soul will be blessed in the telling."

"Verily thou speakest wisdom," exclaimed Jesus, earnestly. "I will, and thou shalt hear of the men who knew and served, even before Abraham the father of our nation was called out to go to the land which God had chosen for him."

"Say on," urged Lycius.

"Listen, then, for we will praise the famous men of history. We will tell of the men through whom from the beginning the Lord hath had great glory and hath shown his power. Such as did bear rule in their kingdoms, men renowned for their power, giving counsel by their understanding, and declaring prophecies. Leaders of the people by their counsels, and by their knowledge of learning, meet for the people, wise and eloquent in their instructions. Even such as found out musical tunes, and recited verses in writing; rich men furnished with ability, living peaceably in their habitations. All these were honored in their generations and were the glory of their times."

"Thou dost make me eager to hear their names. And as thou speakest may it not be well if I but write down thy words," and suiting the action to the words he reached into the recesses of his tunic and brought forth his parchment and stylus, and spreading the former out upon a smooth-topped stone lying conveniently near he looked up with a nod to indicate that he was ready for Jesus to begin.

"Very well, if thou art so minded," responded Jesus, graciously. "Let us see—whom could we better begin with than Enoch the son of Adam, who pleased the Lord and was translated, being an example of repentance to all generations. Noah was found perfect and righteous, and in the time of wrath he was preserved. Therefore was he left as a remnant unto the earth when the flood came. An everlasting covenant was made with him, that all flesh should perish no more by the flood."

Jesus paused, and Lycius, looking up, asked, thoughtfully:

"Do these illustrate types of thy God's mercy?"

"Yea, both kept by God. One taken from the iniquity of the world because he had chosen to walk with God. The other preserved in the world, even while God punished the unbelieving in the world. But we must hasten. We come to the great Abraham, who marks another great dispensation in the plan and purposes of God. He it was who was the father of many people. And in glory was there none like unto him. He kept the law of the most high, and was in covenant with him, and he established his covenant with him in his flesh, and when he was proved he was found faithful. Therefore did God assure him by an oath that he would bless the nations in his seed, and that he would multiply him as the dust of the earth and exalt his seed as the stars, and cause them to inherit from sea to sea and from the river unto the utmost part of the land."

"When shall that time be?" eagerly asked Lycius. "It surely cannot speak of the present time. Is it past or future?"

"This is the time yet to be," spoke Jesus, with confidence. "For with Isaac did the Lord establish likewise his covenant, that the blessing should extend to all men. And upon Isaac's son Jacob did he cause to rest the covenant, acknowledging him in the blessing which his father gave him and establishing him in the heritage. And to his twelve sons did he divide their portions. And long years afterward the Lord brought out of the children of Isaac a merciful man, which found favor in the sight of all men, even that Moses, who was beloved of God and men, and whose memorial is blessed. He was made like to the glorious saints, and was magnified, so that his enemies stood in fear of him. By the word of this man Moses did he cause wonders to cease, and made him glorious in the sight of kings, and gave him a commandment for his people, and showed him part of his glory. And he exalted his brother Aaron a holy man, to uphold his hands, and he established him in the priesthood forever."

So Jesus continued speaking and naught was heard beside the voice save the scratch of the stylus of Lycius over the parchment.

And as they returned in the dusk of the evening Jesus turned to Lycius and asked:

"And what are thou going to do with the writing."

"Wait," was the response, "thou shalt see."

Hard Drinker a Menace.

The drinker sometimes boasts of his ability to carry a large quantity of liquor. He is strong enough to carry without staggering what would make others dead-drunk. The fact that he boasts of such strength shows that he is weak in wisdom. His boast is his folly. While he is strong enough to carry large quantities of mixed drinks, he so weakens his moral stamina that he can justify the blow for a reward" and so tempt or slander his neighbor as to take away his righteousness from him. Such a man becomes a walking contagion, a menace to all with whom he comes

PAPER USED TO SAW WOOD

Experiment Demonstrates That the Faster Particles Vibrate, the Harder the Object.

Science for some years has put forward the theory that all the things in the universe are composed of minute particles. It is the vibration of these particles, it is said, which gives a thing its form and consistency. The faster the particles vibrate the harder the object; this, scantily stated, is the rule. In conection with this, it is interesting to recall a number of experiments which have been made from time to time, and which culminated the other day in the using of a disc of thin paper to saw wood in two.

It has long been known that a bullet made from ordinary candle could be fired through a board an inch thick. It does not flatten out when it hits the board, as it would if you pressed it against the board with your finger. It cuts sharply through. In other words, its greatly increased speed adds, as it were, to its hardness.

Astonished observers have from time to time reported that after a cyclone, they have found straws sticking into trees to a depth of one to two inches. This is a different phase of the same thing. The speed of the wind enabled the straws to pierce the tough grain of the tree trunk.

But most astonishing of all, perhaps, was the experiment recently made of cutting wood with a disc of note paper. The paper was cut in a perfect circle. It was then glued between two spools as an axis. The spools were fitted onto a bar which turned by a belt and motor. When the current was switched on, the disc of paper began to spin around. Faster and faster it went. When it seemed to be merely a bright blur of white, flickering about the rod, a pencil was held toward it. The disc whistled sharply as it cut quickly into the wood. It sighed as it ate through the lead, then whistled on through the remainder of the pencil. The bit of wood was cut through as clean as if by the most perfect implement of steel. As for the paper disc, its edge was not so much as frayed.

Building a Concrete Island.

A great French gun company has constructed an artificial island in the Mediterranean sea, some distance out from Toulon, to be used as an experimental station for torpedoes, says Popular Mechanics. It is called the "L'ile des Torpilles," which means the Island of Torpedoes, and the method of its construction is ingenious.

When the idea first presented itself to the company a small island in a proper locality was searched for, but without success. Therefore the company decided to build a hollow concrete island, float it to the position desired, and sink it to the sea bottom The huge structure, 75 feet long, 50 feet wide and about 70 feet in height, was constructed on the banks of the Seine, launched, and towed to its position in the Mediterranean.

Society to Keep Early Hours.

In Paris hostesses are taking drastic measures to bring about the keeping of early hours, and though it is to be hoped we may not have to adopt the desperate methods to which some well known society leaders are resorting in France, yet it is devoutly to be wished that it would be made clear to guests during the London season that when a hostess asks them to come between certain hours the "closing time" mentioned should be strictly observed.—Lady's Pictorial.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

The immense crop of tobacco under cultivation in the Burley district makes the pooling of the crop this year a necessity if anything like a reasonable price for the crop is to be obtained. The plan of conducting the pool has been modified considerably, with a view to making it work smoother and at the same time reduce expenses considerably. The dissatisfaction resulting from the action of the board fixing the salary of the president, will keep out of the pool a great many who had heretofore remained out but had concluded to enter this year, while some who have been its strong advocates will refuse to sign up. The final out come is just now very uncertain.

Don't Think it too Much.

D. C. Saunders, member of the Burley Board of Directors, in an article in the Flemingsburg Democrat, has this to say in regard to the salary paid President LeBus:

"I think his services worth the money for the amount of business done in three years' work which is about $20,000,000, for which we give him $39,000 and he pays his own expenses, after which he has left net $33,000, or $11,000 per year and a bonus of $10,000, if the 1909 pool succeeds. If you will stop and figure, you will see that if we pool 150,000 hogsheads in 1909 pool and pay Mr. LeBus $15,000 salary, that it will cost you but 10 cents a hogshead. If you are a small grower and have 5,000 pounds, your part of the salary will be 50 cents, but if you are a large grower and have 20,000 pounds, your part will be $2. Now don't strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. We do not want a cheap president. My experience in doing business is that the best we can get is none too good, and I would rather have LeBus at the head of this 1909 pool on $15,000 than anyother man I know of at a $5,000 salary, and I believe that I look after expenses as close as any of you."

LAST SATURDAY'S GAMES.

The Burlington and Belleview ball teams met for the second time this season, on the grounds of the former, last Saturday afternoon. Burlington took the first game the two teams played this season, and Belleview, believing it had strengthened its line-up materially since the first game, was very sanguine of victory last Saturday, and the team was accompanied to the scene of conflict by a considerable delegation of enthusiastic rooters, who had things pretty much their own way while the game was young.

In the first inning there was nothing doing, but in the second inning two hits, a sacrifice and an error put the visitors two runs to the good. Sandford was going nicely in the box and continued to serve up goose eggs until the fourth inning, when the band flew off and Sandford was pelted for three bingles which, with two errors behind him netted Burlington two runs, tieing up the score. In the sixth inning Brady's single, Arnold's double and an error were responsible for two runs, and Belleview began to feel pretty good again, but in this inning after the first two Burlington men up were out Walton got his base on balls, White made a hit as did Smith, which with an error gave the locals another run. In this inning a peculiar and bad accident occurred. Earl Smith in running to first collided with Mahan, who had leaped into the air to take a high throw, the result being the breaking of one bone in Smith's arm near the wrist. The collision caused neither of the men to go down. Conner seemed to grow better in the box, and held the opposing batters to one bingle in the seventh and one in the ninth. In the seventh inning Craig took Smith's place. In this inning Souther's double and Slayback's single scored another run, which put the clubs on equal terms. In the eighth the visitors excurted in an air ship, and when they got back to earth, Burlington had made two runs and nailed the victory down good and strong. Below is the score:

Belleview	0	2	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	—4

Base hits—Slayback, Souther, Snyder, Smith, Conner, Walton, White 3, Brady, Mahan, Berkshire, Ruth, Smith.

Two base hits—Souther, Arnold.

Struck out—By Conner 11; by Sanford 9

Double play—Clore to Souther to Tolin.

Errors—Burlington 4; Belleview 7.

Umpires—Sullivan and William Rogers.

NOTES.

Last Saturday's games completed the first half of the schedule.

The double play put through in the eighth inning by Clore, Souther and Tolin was a beaut.

About the greatest play of the afternoon was made by Snyder from third, when he captured a grounder, drove a runner back to second and then threw the batter out at first.

In the fifth luning, when running to first, Earl Smith collided with Jas. Mahan, who covered that sack, beaking one bone of former's left arm near the wrist.

A good sized crowd witnessed the game.

Both the pitchers, Conner and Sandford, were in fine form, but Conner had slightly the edge on his opponent.

Big Bone vs. Hebron.

Following is the score of the Big Bone-Hebron game played on the grounds of the former, last Saturday afternoon:

Hits	1	2	1	0	0	2	1	1	2	—10
Hebron	2	0	2	1	1	0	0	0	0	—6

Base hits—Fox, Hogan 3, Riley 3, Goodridge, Shinkle, Walton; Kite, R. Williamson, C. Williamson, Rich 2, Wood, Watts, Ewalt.

Two base hit—Vance.

Three base hit—R. Williamson.

Double plays—Vance to Fox to Goodridge; R. Williamson to Black.

Bases on balls—By Wood 1.

Struck out—By Shinkle 8: Black 3, Wood 7.

Left on bases—Hebron 8, BigBone 6

Passed balls—Hogan 2, Rich 3.

Wild pitches—Wood 3.

Earned runs—Hebron 3, Big Bone 2

Batteries—Shinkle and Hogan; Black, Wood and Rich.

Umpires—Cloud, Garnett and Burrows.

Two games of ball were played at the local park last Monday afternoon the visiting team being from Newport. In the first game Brady and Slayback were the battery for the home team, and it took the old fox a couple of innings to locate the weak places of the batters, after which he was very effective, they making only six hits off of him during the entire game, while the same number was made off of the Newport pitcher. Brady struck out 8, and the Newport pitcher 2. It was a classy game of ball in which Newport had dicidedly the advantage and her pitcher achieved a clear shutout that was thrown away at the last minute by his catcher. For eight innings the Newport pitcher had served up goose eggs with perplexing regularity, and had struck out the the third man in the ninth inning, but the catcher let the ball drop, and when he recovered it he made a bad throw to first and Walton was safe. The blow-off never stopped and four runs crossed the plate and a defeat was turned into a victory, a surprise alike to players and spectators.

The second game went only seven innings through a considerable fall of rain. Shinkle and McCarty were the battery for the home players. Shinkle got the batters on his wagon right at the start, allowed only two scratch bingles, and struckout 14 men. A single error in the first inning robbed Shinkle of a shutout. The locals made 7 hits and five struck out, and won the game 3 to 1. Shinkle's pitching was admired by all, and he is believed to be the coming twirler in this part of the county, the veteran pitcher Brady being one of his greatest admirers.

Walton saved the day for the local aggregation in the first game last Monday. Had he given up, when he struck out in the ninth inning as is usual with batters, instead of going down to first base at the top of their speed, the game would have been lost then and there. His experience last Monday demonstrates that the batter should play ball, relying entirely on the umpire to tell him when he is out.

Shinkle and McCarty were a small but very affective battery.

Esqu're Moses Scott brought to this office, yesterday, a copy of The Indiana Register, published at Rising Sun, on Saturday, August 19th, 1848. It was volume 4, No. 14 of the publication. John B. Hall was the publisher. It was printed in very small type, and contains four pages each of six broad columns. There has been an entire change in the Rising Sun business men since the date of the paper. No space is given to local news, politics claiming the attention of the editor, the contending parties being the Democrats and the Whigs. The following is copied from the Register:

RUNAWAY SLAVES.

"We learn from the Kentucky Flag that a large number of slaves were lately lost from the counties of Mason and Fayette,—in all between 70 and 80. Pursuit was made, and the fugitives overtaken near the Ohio river, in the county of Bracken. A fight ensued between the pursuers under Gen. Desha, and the blacks, headed by a "white scoundrel," who had bargained to conduct the slaves to some part of Ohio for $10 a head.

In the struggle one of the pursuers was severely wounded. His name was Fowler, one of the returned volunters, and was in the battle of Buena Vista. The blacks were armed with rifles, pistols and revolvers. The name of the white man is Doyle. He passes himself off as a Methodist preacher.—He was sent to Lexington for trial. The affair has created great excitement, and preparations were being made for the forcible capture of the blacks. The Flag says:

"It is time, in all conscience, that the Abolitionists of the free States had ceased to tamper with the rights and property of Kentuckians; and we hope that the fate of Doyle may teach others to know that Kentucky is a dangerous soil for Abolitionists to tread upon."

McGLASSON.

In memory of little Helen Alberta McGlasson, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McGlasson, of Taylorsport, who departed this life June 17, 1909, at the age of 2 years, 2 months and 18 days. Her illness was brief and like a little soldier she bore her suffering and made us love her the more because of her bravery. Oh! how we loved her, and if love could have saved, she would not have died. All that we had, freely would we have given; but hers it seemed was an angel's morning visit. Her days were few; she came and vanished with the dew. Our hearts are saddened and our homes are darkened, but we bow in submission to our Fathers will and say, "Not my will Father, but thine be done." "The Lord hath given and the Lord has taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." We do not say farewell Helen, but only good bye, for it is only a little while until we too without the loss of one we trust shall dwell in the "Land that is fairer than Day." In a home beyond the skies, where there is no death, no night of darkness and sorrow. Heaven is nearer and dearer to us than ever before, dear Helen, for thou art there and art willing for us to come home.

Destroys Hair Germs

Recent discoveries have shown that falling hair is caused by germs at the roots of the hair. Therefore, to stop falling hair, you must first completely destroy these germs. Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will certainly do this. Then leave the rest to nature.

Ayer's

Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says

Recent discoveries have also proved that dandruff is caused by germs on the scalp. Therefore, to cure dandruff, the first thing to do is to completely destroy these dandruff germs. Here, the same Ayer's Hair Vigor will give the same splendid results.

The natural gas that was turned on in Covington, last Wednesday night, is piped from the West Virginia fields, a distance of 150 miles.

In this issue is published the times and places the sheriff will meet the taxpayers to collect their taxes. Cut it out and paste it in your hat.

Very few from the country came into town, last week. The weather was to their liking and they put in all their time cleaning out their corn and tobacco.

When Master David Castleman rying to catch a horse; last Saturday evening, the animal knocked him down and ran over him, hurting his right arm considerably.

Look out for Billie Hughes and his auto, but don't get frightened before your horse does, if you see him approaching, and jump out of your vehicle and break your neck.

Lucien Clore and James Smith put their crops of wheat in the shock the first of last week. They think it will make a fairly good yield, it not having been hurt by the rust nor smut.

A circuit judge at Glasgow, this State, adjourned his petit jurors over last week that they might go home and give their crops needed attention. The judge was considerate of the interest of his people.

See the advertisement of C. C. Seal & Co., Live Stock Commission Merchants, in another column. Consign your stock to that firm, the cattle and sheep department of which is managed by J. M. Conner.

Owing to the fact that the copy for the advertisements for the Florence fair premium list have been unusually slow about coming in the catalogue will not appear before the last of next week.

Nothing been doing for some time in the matter of the pipe line for which a survey has been made across this county. At the time the survey was being made it was supposed that the work of laying the pipe would be well under way ere now.

Tobacco has grown very rapidly in the last ten days and there is some large enough to be topped at 12 to 14 leaves Owing to the early setting of the crop and the rapidity with which it has grown, it will be necessary to top much of the crop very high that it may not ripen entirely too early. The largest crop of tobacco by many hundred acres, ever pitched in Kentucky, is now growing nicely.

Try This Puzzle.

A family consists of one grand father, two grandmothers, one father-in-law, two mother-in-lawe, three mothers, two fathers, two daughters, one son, one daughter-in-law, one son-in-law, one granddaughter, and there are only six persons in the family.

Too Hot for Horses.

The weather last week was hard on teams in use. It was especially severe on horses on the road, and in many instances teamsters had considerable trouble in preventing their animals from being overcome by the heat.

The Stork Got Busy.

The stork is still abroad in the land and on the 26th ult. it called at the home of Hubert Bachelor, over on Gunpowder creek, and left a fine boy, and on the morning of the first inst. it gladdened the home of Charlie Birkle and wife by the presenting of a bouncing boy.

J. M. Conner.

J. M. Conner has connected himself with the firm of C. C. Seal & Co., livestock commission merchants, Cincinnati Union Stock Yards, and has charge of the sheep department. Mr. Conner has many friends in this county, who will gladly consign their stock to his firm.

A Night Rider's Raid.

The worst night riders are calomel, croton oil or aloes pills. They raid your bed to rob you of rest. Not so with Dr. King's New Life Pills. They never distress or inconvenience, but always cleanse the system, curing Colds, Headache, Constipation, Malaria. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Full of Hives.

A yearling colt belonging to D. E. Castleman had a severe case of hives (?) a few days since. There were hundreds of lumps about as large as a medium sized marble—in fact the animal was pretty badly swollen all over, but it did not appear to be sick. It regained its normal condition in a few days after it was discovered.

In Commission Again.

The ferry company has purchased the gasoline launch Mary Pell, and will use it in transferring passengers across the river. The regular ferryboat was launched Thursday, after having been given a thorough overhauling. The company will give its patrons service that will be satisfactory in every way.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Tortured on a Horse.

"For ten years I couldn't ride a horse without being in torture from piles," writes L. S. Napier, of Rugless, Ky., "when all doctors and other remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me." Infallible for Piles, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Boils, Fever-Sores, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Corns. 25. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Died of Consumption.

Miss Josie Bentler, daughter of John Bentler and wife, of Erlanger, died of consumption, last Thursday. Mrs. Bentler spent last winter with her daughter at San Antonio, Texas, hoping to benefit her health, but the sojourn in the south afforded only temporary relief, as the disease was to deep seated to be eradicated by the climate.

Some Onions.

So far as heard from Albert Conner is easily entitled to the belt as the champion onion producer. Last spring he planted two rows of onions, each row being about 30 feet in length, and when he harvested the crop, one day last week, he had five large washing tubs full of fine onions. He proposes to keep secret his receipe for making onions produce.

Woods are Full of Chigres.

The woods about Middle creek cliffs are said to be full of chigres, which make life a burden to the members of picnic parties that go there for a day's outing, consequently there will be few picnicers to visit that romantic locality this summer, as a person who knows anything about the pestiferous chigre does not want to come in contact with it.

Out Early.

Scott Chambers, of Walton, liveryman and funeral director, showed up in Burlington at an early hour, last Friday morning, enroute to Clinton Gaines' to get a fine young horse he bought a few days before. Mr. Chambers has made a big success of his business in Walton, and has made for himself a host of friends in that part of the county. He is always the same quiet, unassuming, accommodating gentleman.

Wheat Crop Injured.

The wet weather and the little green bug together have played hovoc with the wheat in central Kentucky and it is thought the crop will fall far below the average. The continued rains beat off the pollen when the wheat was in bloom, thus preventing thorough fertilization. The green bug which attacks this crop has also gotten in considerable damaging work. These two causes will greatly curtail the yield in this, which is one of the best wheat counties in the state.

Making Loss Good,

The differences between T. H. Kirk, Cincinnati leaf tobacco broker, and the Burley Tobacco Society of Kentucky, arising from the tying up of 150,000 pounds of the 1907 burley crop purchased by Mr. Kirk, will be terminated by the payment to Mr. Kirk of approximately $27,000, this figure being on the basis of seventeen and one-half cents a pound and representing the price established at high tide last winter when the Equity interests prevented Mr. Kirk from disposing of the tobacco.

In addition to paying the amount stated to Mr. Kirk, the Equity must pay the expenses of the litigation that has been going on and it is said this extra amount will aggregate $2,500. The tobacco was graded at the Bodman Tobacco Warehouse last week and will be disposed of at auction on the burley breaks this week.

The market at the present time is averaging fifteen and one half cents, on which basis the tobacco in question will bring $19,500. Whatever the amount raised, the Equity Society will add what is necessary to make the $27,000 and send Mr. Kirk a check for the amount in full. This disposition of the matter takes out of the courts a case that has been pending for six months.

Ten Years Hence.

Here is the way Ed Howe of the Atchison Globe, says the papers will write up weddings ten years hence: "The bride looked very well in a traveling dress, but all eyes were centered on the groom. He wore a dark suit that fitted his form perfectly, and in his dainty gloved hands he carried a small rose. His curly hair was beautifully done, and a delicious odor of hair oil of the best quality floated down the aisle as he passed. The young people will miss him, now that he is married. He is loved by all for his winning ways, tender graces and many accomplishments. The bride commands a good salary as bookkeeper in St. Joe and the groom will miss none of the luxuries to which he has been accustomed. A crowd of pretty men saw him off at the depot."

New Tree on Courthouse.

For many years Greensburg has gained much notoriety through the medium of the tree growing on the courthouse tower. For several years three trees grew there, but a few years ago, two were removed as their spreading roots were thought to be a menace. Thereafter the city acquired the title of the "Lone Tree City." Now this name will have to be discarded, as last week it was noticed that another tiny maple tree was shooting up from above the cornice on the south side of the dome of the tower. The newcomer will be allowed to grow if it is so inclined. It is now about six inches in height and bids fair to be as healthy and strong as its older relative, now about ten feet high.—Lawrenceburg Press.

May Have Been Accidents.

According to reports from Petersburg neighborhood there has been some very reckless or malicious shooting there in the last few weeks, by which Ezra Aylor is the loser of a good horse, while Elijah Parker's residence bears evidence of having been a target for somebody's rifle. These two occurrences followed closely one upon the other, and while some attribute them to malice others take a more charitable view of the incidents and account for them on the grounds of carelessness. To say the least of these matters they will bear investigation, and should it develop that they were accidents the people of the neighborhood will feel more comfortable.

Appointed Special Judge.

Gov. Wilson has appointed Hon. J. G. Tomlin, of Walton, special Judge of the Campbell county circuit court to try a large case that has been pending in that court for a considerable time, and in which Judge Yungblut was one of the attorneys. Judge Tomlin's work has been so eminently satisfactory wherever he has served as special judge under appointment from Gov. Wilson, that the Governor is putting him in the harness when ever the occasion offers in this part of the State. Mr. Tomlin has many friends who are glad to see him making good on the bench.

It is Judge Stone.

James N. Stone qualified, last Thursday, as police judge of the town of Verona, which town, it will be remembered was incorporated at the last term of the Boone circuit court. Verona is now a full fledged town, prepared to deal out justice to the evil doer.

Judge John M. Lassing and family are taking their summer outing on Big Bone island, where they have been in camp for several days. Among their equipment they have a fast gasoline launch that will contribute much to their pleasure.

Hay harvest is at hand now.

Teachers' Institute.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute will be held in Burlington this year, commencing Monday, July 9th. Arrangements are being made with a view to having the coming session one of the best ever held in the county, but the success of the meeting both as to profit and entertainment depends upon the interest manifested by the teachers in the proceedings and especially in the work assigned to them on the program, which will be issued in due time.

Another Voting Contest.

The RECORDER is arranging for a voting contest "what will be a hummer for certain." It is making up a list of five old bachelors which it proposes to give away as prizes as follows: The lady who turns in to the RECORDER between now and January 1, 1910, the largest amount of money on subscription will be entitled to her choice of the five; the lady turning in the next largest amount on subscription will be entitled to second choice, and so on down the line until the list is exhausted. The contest will begin so soon as the list of old bachelors is completed and their names published. There is no doubt but what this contest will prove a veritable gold mine.

Swift Farmers.

James E. Smith and two sons, who live about half a mile out on the Petersburg pike, are decidedly the swiftest farmers in this part of the county. They have a knack of keeping their work up and in hand despite the weather conditions that put many others in trouble. The principal secret in their success is they keep plenty of good teams and modern farm implements that are adapted to their land, and when they do a day's work a considerable has been accomplished. As a sample of the progress they make, by the middle of last week they had a crop of 40 acres of corn laid by in splendid condition and 20 acres of wheat in the shock. It looks like it is natural for them to make progress with their work, while others who put in more time and appear to labor harder are always crowded.

Picnic at the Fair Grounds.

As jolly a crowd as has left Burlington in many a day was that constituting the outing party given last Thursday by Miss Maud Hume in honor of her guest, Miss Mary West, of Walton. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Hume and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Conner. It was near the middle of the forenoon when old Sol was beginning to get in his best work, that the party left Burlington in a hay ride style, going to the fair grounds at Florence, where the day was spent in a most delightful manner, the amusements being protracted to an hour that made the arrival at home about 9 o'clock at night. The well planned program for the day was carried out in a most successful manner, and the occasion will long be remembered by those who participated in its pleasures. The following composed the party: Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Home, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Conner, Misses Maud Hume, Mary West, Nellie Berksbire, Mary Roberts, Jennie Lee Castleman, Alice Carver, Ada Graves McAtee, Jonette and Pattie Revill, Besse Hall, Laura Porter, and Messrs. John Case, Cleveland Snyder, Earl and Russell Smith, Dudley Blyth.

The Peter Blimm Case.

Forty-nine years ago last Monday Peter Blimm killed Thomas Craig, a little boy whom Henry Hoffman, then living where J. J. Duncan now resides out on the Petersburg pike, had taken to raise. Blimm was still on a protracted fourth of July drunk, and, in cold blood, cut the little boy's throat. He was captured and Judge William S. Pryor, then circuit Judge in this district, called a special term of circuit court, and on July 18th, 1870, Blimm was indicted for murder. The trial was had at the special term, and resulted in Blimm's conviction and sentence to be hung on Friday, August 20th following. The scaffold for the hanging was built, and the grave dug beneath the trap door, in the ravine a couple of hundred yards below the bridge at the edge of Burlington, on the Belleview pike A very large crowd assembled to see the hanging, and great was the disappointment when it was learned that the hanging was off, and that the officers who had gone to Frankfort after Blimm, who was in jail there for safe keeping, would not return with him, the court of appeals at almost the last minute having reversed the judgment of the lower court on the grounds that Blimm was drunk when he killed the boy, and gave him a new trial, which was held in Warsaw, Gallatin county, because of the state of feeling against Blimm in this county. In the Gallatin circuit court Blimm was found guilty of manslaughter, and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. He served about eight years of his time, and having made a good prisoner, he was pardoned.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

TATTLING TEA LEAVES.

Since that ancient time when erring Antony wandered after a light love the elusive tnd suspicious blonde has menaced the quiet home of domestic man. It must be assumed, however, that Antony knew nothing of the leaves, else the Roman senate was sadly deficient. All those since who have indulged in the cup that cheers have been wiser in their generation than that New York benedict recently accused of nonsupport by a wife expert in the reading of tea-dreg mysteries. The evidence was so patent that the guilty wretch sought no other defense than a quarrel. With sheer masculine strategy, which is alleged to have included cleaning out the house, he barred the door against his subtle feminine half, says the Washington Post. Whereupon came the airing of these things before that most unsensitive of persons—the local magistrate—a low-brow who would not accept the testimony of a cup "turned three times slowly with a wish." The brute sided with the man, of course. The result achieved by such a dispensation of justice is not one to be desired. The domestic war has subsided to a feigned peace—a sort of armed neutrality. Such well-founded suspicion will never die. The only thing proved by it is that men will hang together, unless it be that there are those who should bar Oolong from the home. Moral: Use a strainer.

The unwarrantable criticism of the duke of Norfolk which arose in some quarters when it was announced that he had sold his famous Holbein—a portrait of Queen Christina of Denmark—and that the painting would go out of England, is now silenced. The criticism was unwarranted because the picture belonged to the duke and he had given the National gallery an option on it which was not used, says the Troy Times. It appears that the purchaser of the Holbein is not an American, but a German, and that the price paid is $300,000. Very well, the duke received a round figure, which would have, tempted many another man to part with a scrap of canvas. The action of the duke which shuts the mouths of his critics is his gift of a park to the city of Sheffield. The property covers 60 acres and is the only park in the city. It is worth more than the duke received for the picture.

The fortune of $5,000,000 which was acquired by Christopher Magee, politician and newspaper publisher of Pittsburg, who passed away several years ago, has been released by his wife's death and will now go to the ultimate purpose for which it was devised by its accumulator—the foundation and maintenance of a hospital for women. The institution is to bear the name of the testator's mother, Elizabeth Steel Magee. One of its features will be a department for women in distress, who are to receive free treatment at all times and be asked no questions. "Chris" Magee did not escape sharp criticism while alive, but even the most inveterate of those who were his political enemies must admit the excellence of the grent purpose to which he saw fit to apply his money.

The April fire loss in the United States and Canada amounted to $19,345,300, making an aggregate of $72,006,700 for the first quarter of 1909. Compared with the two years last past this shows a better state of things, which, it is hoped, may continue. The fire loss for the first four months of 1908 was $90,804,000, and for the corresponding period of 1907, $86,426,200.

An old inmate of an almshouse in New York, aged 86, who had never in the course of her life seen an automobile before, fell in a dead faint in the street when one whizzed by her, with the horn tooting. When she recovered she told the doctor who had attended her that she had been in hell and had seen Satan. Some of the victims of the speed maniacs would not quarrel with her diagnosis of the situation.

The truth is the young man who said the education he got at Yale was a "detriment" to him didn't get any there. The "detriment" came from fooling away his time at Yale instead of doing Yale work.

We trust that the coming aeroplane of commerce will learn to emit a prettier noise than "Honk!"

CORPORATION TAX

AGREED TO BY VOTE OF 60 TO 11

Many Democrats Voted With the Republicans for Amendment—Early Decision Was Somewhat of a Surprise to Many Senators.

Washington, July 3.—The corporation tax amendment, which was suggested by President Taft, drawn by Attorney General Wickersham and presented to the senate by Mr Aldrich, chairman of the committee on finance, is an integral part of the tariff bill, as that measure now stands.

After much tribulation the senate reached a vote on the proposition shortly before adjournment at 7 o'clock Friday night, and the amendment was agreed to by the large vote of 60 to 11.

With all modifying amendments disposed of, many Democrats voted with most of the Republicans for the amendment. Only three Democrats voted against the provision on the final vote, but some refrained from voting at all.

The test vote was on the substitution of the corporation tsx amendment for the income tax provision, and on that vote 45 senators cast their ballots in the affirmative and 31 in the negative. On this ballot all the Democratic votes were cast in favor of the income tax, which also received the support of a number of insurgent Republicans.

The income tax question disposed of, the senate Ssturday will enter upon the administrative features of the tariff bill, probably taking up the maximum and minimum rate provision.

The reaching of a vote came as somewhat of a surprise to a large majority of the senators, but not to Senator Aldrich and his intimate advisers. Mr. Aldrich himself had been confident from the time of his arrival in the senate early in the day after a brief vacation that he would succeed in getting a vote before adjournment. The result shows that while the situation seemed extremely critical for a time, the chairman of the finance committee did not count without a thorough understanding of the situation.

SHOT RANG OUT

From the Priest's Burning Cottage and He Was Found Dead With a Revolver in His Hand.

Denham Springs, La., July 3.—News has just reached here from French Settlement, 23 miles south of here, of the sensational suicide of Father A. Seve, the rector of the Catholic church there, early Friday morning.

Neighbors discovered the cottage occupied by the priest, adjoining St. Joseph's church, on fire and went to the rescue. Before they reached the building a shot wss heard.

The fire was burning briskly in the bedroom occupied by the priest, and it was extinguished after a hard fight. The preist was found dead in bed with a bullet hole through his head and a pistol in his hand.

Those who know him declare that his mind had become unbalanced. He had been acting strangely of late. He left no statement.

Cannon Was Loaded With Dynamite.

Phillipsburg, N. J., July 3.—The first serious Fourth of July accident in this vicinity occurred here Friday, when two boys each lost a hand and one may be blind. Charles Giddens and Ellsworth Davis, each 16 years old, were loading a cannon with dynamite when there was an explosion. Their fingers were blown off and Davis' eyes burned so badly that it is feared the sight has been destroyed. Later the surgeons amputated a hand for each boy.

Landslide Buries Forty Men.

Newport, Monmouthshire, England, July 3.—A landslide occurred here Friday afternoon at the works connected with the new docks. As a result, 40 men were buried alive. Several bodies have been recovered. Communication has been effected with those still alive and food and cigarettes have been sent in to them through pipes.

Deputy Sheriff Killed.

Denver, Col., July 3.—While attempting to arrest George Jamison, charged with horse stealing, at his ranch near Chico, N. M., Friday, Deputy Sheriff J. R. Kent, of Folsom, N. M., was killed and Sheriff Williams was perhaps fatally wounded. The officials in attempting to surround Jamison were fired upon by the latter and five others.

Woman Shoots Herself.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 3.—Mrs. Mary Erckins, aged 26, known here as Beatrice Scott, committed suicide here Friday by shooting herself through the heart. She had been worrying over debts. Her home was in Tampa, Fla.

Crew Escaped.

Detroit, Mich., July 3.—The schooner John Schuette, of Toledo, was sunk Friday evening off the shipyard of the Great Lakes engineering works, in the lower Detroit river, in collision with the steamer Alfred Mitchell, of Duluth. The crew escaped.

Bigamist Tries Suicide.

San Antonio, Tex., July 3.—Ten minutes after he was married to a young woman of this city, Friday, Earl Clark was arrested for bigamy. A few minutes later he swallowed poison and his recovery doubtful.

MILITARY TOURNAMEUT OPEN

THREE THOUSAND REGULARS GATHERED AT TOLEDO.

Troops Representing Every Branch of Service Give Stirring Exhibitions at Camp Taft.

Toledo, O.—The great military tournament at Camp Taft, which has been established in Bay View park, was formally opened Monday, and for a week the officers and men of Uncle Sam's army will give exhibitions of their work in time of war and peace. Three thousand troops are here, representing every branch of the service and they are demonstrating the efficiency of the army and its readiness to meet all conditions, much as the efficiency of the navy was proved by the globe-trotting cruise.

Many thousands of visitors witnessed the maneuvers Monday, for in addition to the people of Toledo, the tournament has attracted a very large number of persons from all the middle western states. Eleven thousand spectators are accommodated in a monster grand stand that has been erected.

Maj. Gen. Fred D. Grant, commanding the department of the lakes, is in command of Camp Taft, and the field events are in charge of Capt. A. J. Bowley, First Field artillery. The soldiers have been training for the event for months and go through their drills and maneuvers with astonishing speed and exactness. The commands that are here are the Second infantry, from Fort Thomas, Ky., whose predecessors participated in the defense of Fort Meigs in the war of 1812; the Tenth infantry, from Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; the machine-gun platoons of the Second, Tenth and Twenty-seventh infantry, and Fifteenth cavalry; six companies of the Twenty-seventh infantry, the third squadron of the Fifteenth cavalry, and Battery F of the Fifth artillery, from Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Company L, Third battalion engineers, and Company A, signal corps, from Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; balloon detachment of the signal corps, with United States dirigible No. 1, from Fort Omaha; Company C, hospital corps, and a detachment of cooks and bakers from the barracks at Washington.

FREED THEN REARRESTED.

Brandenburg Acquitted in Cleveland Latter Case But is Held for Kidnaping His Step-Son.

New York.—Although Broughton Brandenburg was acquitted Tuesday of the charge of grand larceny in connection with the sale of an alleged spurious letter of Grover Cleveland to the New York Times, he had only a few minutes of freedom.

Before leaving the courtroom he was rearrested and will be taken to St. Louis next week for trial on a charge of kidnaping his step-son, James Shepard Cabanne III. The maximum penalty for kidnaping in Missouri is 20 years' imprisonment.

Pittsburg Strike Is Settled.

Pittsburg, Pa. — The street railway strike, which cost the city of Pittsburg more than $200,000 in two days, was officially declared to be at an end at 10:30 o'clock Monday night.

In the private office of Mayor William A. Magee articles were signed by officials of the Pittsburg Railways Company and an executive committee from the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway employes which will for years to come prevent another tie up of the 400 miles of street railway tracks in and about Greater Pittsburg and Allegheny county.

Retail Coal Men Convene.

Chicago.—Several hundred retail coal dealers, members of the Illinois and Wisconsin asociation, gathered Wednesday morning in the Sherman house and opened their fourteenth annual convention. President H. A. Robinson of Peoria was in the chair, and after Walter S. Bogle had welcomed the association to Chicago, he delivered his annual address.

Harvard Crew the Victor.

New London, Conn.—In a grand exhibition of rowing by a crew remarkable for its physical power and endurance, Harvard defeated Yale in their annual varsity boat race on the Thames. The crimson's crew led from start to finish, and won by six lengths. Harvard's time was 21:50; Yale's, 22:10. By this victory Harvard won her second consecutive boat race from Yale in 28 years. Not since 1880 and 1881 has Harvard won two consecutive races from Yale. Since 1854 Harvard has won [illegible]

WRIGHT MAKES FLIGHTS.

Repeatedly Circles Fort Myer Grounds, Attaining Speed of Thirty-Eight Miles an Hour.

Washington.—Calm, confident and nerveless, Orville Wright, late Thursday afternoon, encircled the Fort Myer drill grounds time after time in his aeroplane in three successful flights while a crowd of thousands cheered him for the success that attended his persistency and pluck.

Mr. Wright would not estimate the speed at which the aeroplane traveled, and the length of the flights could not be accurately determined. Maj. Squier expressed the opinion that the rounds on the first flight were approximately half a mile in length. As the machine made three rounds in 50 seconds each, it probably was traveling at a speed of 38 miles per hour.

After the apparently unsuccessful attempts of Tuesday and Wednesday, the performances of the flying machine were inspiring. While the machine oscillated at certain points, it was evident from the regularity with which these things happened that they were due to the condition of the atmosphere and not to any fault of the machine.

MAN O' PEACE FOR THE SICK.

Miss Harriman Hoists Red Cross Flag Over Ferryboat She Provides for Consumptives.

New York.—Miss Mary Harriman, eldest daughter of E. H. Harriman, raised the Red Cross flag Thursday over an Erie ferryboat which she has fitted up and donated to the Brooklyn Red Cross society as a "man o' peace," for use in the war on tuberculosis. The boat lay at the anchorage off Columbia street, Brooklyn, and there Miss Harriman received its first pasengers, men, women and children who are victims of the white plague.

The boat is fitted out with accommodations for 300 patients and they will be given three meals a day and all the milk and eggs they can consume. For the commissary Miss Harriman will forage her father's farm at Arden. Attendants and physicians are provided, and there will be an open air school for Brooklyn children who have been kept out of school because they are tuberculous.

TOLD TO WHIP HUSBAND.

Pennsylvania Woman Instructed by Court to Thrash the Man Who Mistreats Her.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—"If your husband abuses you again give him a good thrashing and if that does not cure him bring him to me, but I think the thrashing will do the business." This was the advice given Tuesday by Alderman Donohue of this city to Mrs. Michael Promack of Dupont who had her thin five-foot husband arrested on the charge of abusing her.

She said he married her for her money and not geting it ill treated her. As Mrs. Promick is six feet tall and well built and as the husband is less than five feet and does not weigh much more than 100 pounds, the alderman thought the woman could inflict more tefling punishment than the law. She said she would try it.

Descendants of Signers Meet.

Philadelphia.—The Descendants of the Signers, lineal descendants of the men who in 1776 affixed their names to the Declaration of Independence, held their annual meeting Monday in the old state house, in the same room where their ancestors adopted the famous document. The sessions were presided over by the president, Albert McClellan Mathewson of New Haven, Conn.

15,000 Tin Workers Strike.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Fully 15,000 men employed in plants of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company quit work at midnight Wednesday and the Amalgamated association claims that 20,000 men ultimately will be affected.

The principal storm centers will be at Newcastle and Sharon, Pa.; Youngstown, O.; Bridgeport, O.; Martin's Ferry and Cambridge, O.; Wheeling, W. Va., and Ellwood City, Ind.

British Officials Assassinated.

London.—A startling double assassination, of a political character, occurred late Thursday night towards the conclusion of a public gathering at the Imperial institute. An Indian student shot and killed Lieut. Col. Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Calas Lalcaca of Shanghai.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Summary of Matters of Special Interest to Our Readers

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Estill Springs, Ky.—A uniform system of accounting is one of the most important needs in practical administration of public affairs relating to revenue in Kentucky, declares State Inspector and Examiner M. H. Thatcher, who has urged the enlistment of the press of Kentucky in behalf of the enactment of a law providing for such a system throughout not only state and county, but municipal, offices of the commonwealth. This was the theme of Mr. Thatcher's address before the State Press association here.

GOV. WILLSON ORDERS PARDON

In Several Cases, But Refused One to Frank Ball, Murderer of Jack Bien.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson commuted the sentence of Richard Ramsel, sentenced in February to two years for accepting a bribe while employed as a park guard, to six months. The offense for which Ramsey, in company with two other guards, was arrested, was "holding up" couples found in compromising situations in the park for "hush money." His two companions never served time, although indicted. Gov. Willson decided that Ramsey had been discriminated against, and that outside influence was brought to bear against him. Gov. Willson also granted a pardon to Carl Mitchell and W. R. Brasher. The men were soldiers in the rider district, and had been indicted on the charge of breaking and entering into a car on a railroad, and with intent to steal property therefrom. Gov. Willson stated that there was no ground for charging them with any unlawful intent, and that the charges were made against them in the interest of those who were opposed to the soldiers being stationed at Guthrie. The governor refused to grant a pardon to Frank Ball, the murderer of Jack Bien, at Middlesboro. Richard Weston, of Bell county, charged with manslaughter, was pardoned, and Arthur Cleveland, of Bell county, charged with manslaughter, had his sentence of five years commuted to two years.

WHEAT CROP IN KENTUCKY

Looks Much Better Than Last Year—Tobacco Crop Will Be Largest Ever Raised.

Frankfort, Ky.—Although there has been more rain this June than any year for a good many years, nevertheless the wheat crop is much better than it was last year. There has been some rust and scale to put in its appearance, but on the whole the condition of the crop is encouraging. A high price is expected by the farmers for the crop. Contrary to the reports from other sources, Commissioner of Agriculture Rankin says that the tobacco crop this year will be the largest ever raised in Kentucky.

KENTUCKY HAS OPPORTUNITY

To Become One of the Greatest Coke Producing States.

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky has an opportunity to become one of the greatest coke-producing states in the union if the coke coal which this state produces is used, according to the annual report made to Gov. Willson by C. J. Norwood, state inspector of mines. Prof. Norwood says that the coal along the Big Sandy valley makes ideal coke, and that but little of it is used for that purpose.

Winchester, Ky.—The meeting of the district board of the Burley Tobacco Society here to consider the contract for the pooling of the 1909 tobacco crop was an open one, and several hundred people, upon the announcement of President Lebus that the session would be open and the public invited, assembled in the courthouse. The secretary read a statement of the society's financial condition, showing a surplus of $300,000 on June 26.

Lexington, Ky.—Two automobiles valued at $3,000 each out of the shops of the Lexington Motor Car Co. were destroyed by fire in a freight car in the Cincinnati Southern yards here. A negro was drawing gasoline from the tank of one of the automobiles when another negro entered the freight car with a lantern, causing an explosion.

Louisville, Ky.—After choosing Lexington, Ky., as the place for the next annual convention and electing officers, the convention of the Kentucky Association of Graduate Nurses adjourned.

Louisville, Ky.—A. Scott Bullitt, who says he has been employed by Louisville business men to prevent the operation of an alleged poolroom across the river, in Jeffersonville, addressed letters to Oscar Johnson, sheriff of Clark county, Indiana, calling on him to enforce the law.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Prison Board and Warden Are Praised.

The board of prison commissioners and Warden E. E. Mudd are highly praised by the Christian Endeavor Society of the prison here, of which Henry E. Youtsey, serving a life sentence for the murder of Gov. Goebel, is president. The blessings of the Almighty are invoked on the officials, and the praises of the convicts are shouted for the improvements which are being made.

Kentucky Pick-Ups

Louisville, Ky.—A fall race meeting will be held at Churchill Downs. It will be of two weeks' duration and will open about October 1.

Louisville, Ky.—Traffic was stopped by a washout on the Louisville division of the L. & N. railroad near Upton, Ky., and it was found necessary to use the Illinois Central tracks.

Lexington, Ky.—Prof. R. G. Lowery, of Nicholasville, assumed his duties as superintendent of the Pythian Widows' and Orphans' Home in this city, succeeding A. C. Byers, resigned.

Frankfort, Ky.—It became known here that at the meeting of the Kentucky Baptist association, at Ashland Dr. M. B. Adams, of this city, was indorsed for state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

Louisville, Ky.—The German-American Alliance in this city unanimously voted to send the largest delegation to the annual state convention of the body in Covington July 10 that has ever represented the local association.

Burlington, Ky.—The flame from the natural gas standpipe in Covington was clearly discernible at this place, 16 miles away. The villagers and farmers in this part of Boone county were under the impression that a great conflagration was in progress in Cincinnati.

Louisville, Ky.—That railroads which serve Louisville are showing favoritism for other cities, and particularly shippers of Cincinnati and Evansville were charges taken up by the Lumber Association of Louisville. Local lumber men claim that Louisville is discriminated against in point of rates to the north and west.

Owingsville, Ky.—Sherman Robinson, one of the colored soldiers discharged by President Roosevelt for shooting up Brownsville, Tex., got drunk in Sharpsburg, proclaimed himself a "bad man from Texas" and shot up the town. He was arrested and fined $150 and given 75 days in jail, the limit of the law for his offense.

Lexington, Ky.—The Louisville & Nashville took formal control of the Louisville & Atlantic, running 101 miles from Versailles to Beattyville Junction, all stock having been bought last week. The line will be extended to connect with other L. & N. lines in Southeastern Kentucky and will be used in opening practically undeveloped coal, mineral and timber fields.

Frankfort, Ky.—Thomas L. Brooks, a negro contractor of this city, was given the contract to erect the administration building and the trades building at the Kentucky Normal and Industrial Institute of this city, the largest institution of the kind in the state, and one of the largest in the south. Every bit of work that can possibly be done on this building by negro labor will be done. The bid is $28,975.

Middlesboro, Ky.—J. M. Mayes, of Norton, Va., a railway engineer, fatally shot Anna Haynes, of Corbin, and Robert Culbertson, of Coeburn, Va., a moving picture man, and then shot himself twice. Having failed to end his life with the revolver Mayes endeavored to sever his jugular vein with a pocketknife, but was unsuccessful. Mayes had purchased tickets for himself and the woman to Corbin, and had checked her trunk, but she ran off with Culbertson. Both men have families.

Winchester, Ky.—Articles were signed here creating a corporation to be known as the Burley Tobacco Co., and to be controlled by the Kentucky Burley Society, which takes in the burley tobacco growing section of this state, Ohio and Indiana. The plan is to use 10 per cent of the proceeds from this year's pooled crop to capitalize the company, which is expected to be in active operation in one year. President Lebus, of the Burley Society, made the statement that on a pool of 15,000 hogsheads the corporation would earn $1,800,000.

Glasgow, Ky.—The firm of J. G. Greer & Co., merchants and fine stock raisers of Lucas, this county, filed a petition in bankruptcy, placing their resources at $5,000, with an indebtedness of $7,000.

Winchester, Ky.—Suit is threatened by the Burley Tobacco Society against fudependent manufacturers who failed to take and pay for tobacco purchased in the sale of November 24. The society has retained attorneys and proceedings will be instituted unless the delinquents settle immediately.

ITALY IS IN TERROR

NEW EARTHQUAKE CAUSES PANIC IN MESSINA AND REGGIO.

FULL DAMAGE NOT KNOWN

District in Which 200,000 Were Killed Last December Again Rocked and the People Flee from the Cities' Ruins.

Messina, Italy.—Southern Italy and Sicily where 200,000 lives were lost December 30 by the most terrific earthquake in history, have again been shaken, and had Messina and Reggio which were laid in waste at that time been rebuilt they no doubt would be devastated again to-day. The full measure of damage and loss of life in the new shock are not yet known.

It would seem that nature is determined to blot out Messina, but recently one of the fairest cities in the world. While minor shocks have been of frequent occurrence in Sicily, in the last six months they became more serious and caused considerable alarm. The most severe quakes came at 7:20 and 7:25 and were similar to the fatal disturbances of December, being accompanied by the same roaring noises that added to the terror of that fateful night. The population again fled in fear, and cries of terror rent the air. The people hurried to the open places praying to the saints that their lives might be spared.

It is impossible to accurately determine the number of casualties. Some of the reports are alarming, but they cannot be verified.

So far as is positively known only a few persons were hurt. One woman was killed by a falling wall, and a child was seriously injured. Gradually, as the confidence of the people returned, Messina had acquired a population of something over 25,000, but now the people again are in terror and do not feel themselves safe even in the temporary huts erected for their shelter, and have fled to the country, preferring the shelter of trees and caves to the danger from falling walls. They lack food and covering, and are camping out in pitiful and desolate groups.

Sailors, soldiers and policemen have been sent out through the district to prevent looting and give courage to the people. Between eight o'clock at night and 7:20 o'clock in the morning eight shocks were recorded, and the instruments at the observatory registered a total of ten shocks of varying severity.

The shocks both here and at Reggio created a great panic among the people of these two cities. Walls of houses not completely demolished in the visitation of December were shaken down, and the inhabitants of the towns rushed from the streets.

The earth shocks have been becoming more intense recently, and they were sufficiently severe to cause alarm. The shocks were undulating and vertical, and accompanied by deep roaring sounds. The first one was followed by an explosion like the roar of cannon, and lasted between eight and ten seconds. It is said that this quake was of greater severity than the fatal one December 28.

WILL INSPECT MISSISSIPPI.

Inland Waterways Commission Starts from Buffalo on Long Trip to Mouth of Ohio.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The inland waterways commission, under instructions of congress, met here Thursday and started on a trip of inspection that will last two months. The commission will go by lake to Duluth, and thence to St. Paul, whence it will start down the Mississippi river, ending the inspection at the mouth of the Ohio. The commission will be met at St. Paul by prominent business men interested in the deeper-channel project, and several important matters, including the proposed harbor plans for St. Paul, the improvement of the Minnesota river and the high-dam question, which covers proposed work between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Late in the month the body will leave for Europe to inspect the waterways of Germany and Holland.

Champlain Fetes Opened.

Crown Point, N. Y.—The fetes in celebration of the tercentenary of the discovery of Lake Champlain began here Monday in the presence of a multitude of persons. The exercises are taking place near the ruins of Old Fort St. Frederic and of Fort Crown Point. The local program included elaborate water pageants depicting the discovery of Lake Champlain and the fight of the Algonquins and Hurons led by Champlain against the Iroquois. A hundred and fifty Indians took part in these pageants. Following came the presentation of the Indian drama "Hiawatha."

Lincoln Pennies Are Ready.

Philadelphia.—The new Lincoln pennies coined at the United States mint in this city are ready for delivery. The new pieces are much like the old ones with the exception of the Indian head.

Steel Men Get Wage Increase.

Baltimore, Md.—The wages of the 3,500 men and boys employed in the plant of the Maryland Steel Company at Sparrows Point, have been increased ten per cent., thus restoring the scale in effect before April 1.

NATURE STUDIES.

The Phunnibeak Bird—Hello, who are you?

The Other Bird—Don't you know me? Why, I'm "The harp that once through Tara's Halls."

The Phunnibeak Bird (shortly)—Oh, tut; tut! You're a lyre! That's what you are.

HANDS RAW AND SCALY.

Itched and Burned Terribly—Could Not Move Thumbs Without Flesh Cracking—Sleep Impossible.

Cuticura Soon Cured His Eczema.

"An itching humor covered both my hands and got up over my wrists and even up to the elbows. The itching and burning were terrible. My hands got all scaly and when I scratched, the surface would be covered with blisters and then get raw. The eczema got so bad that I could not move my thumbs without deep cracks appearing. I went to my doctor, but his medicine could only stop the itching. At night I suffered so fearfully that I could not sleep. I could not bear to touch my hands with water. This went on for three months and I was fairly worn out. At last I got the Cuticura Remedies and in a month I was cured. Walter H. Cox, 16 Somerset St., Boston, Mass., Sept. 25, 1908."

Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Objection to Women Golfers.

"Farmers don't mind renting their fields to golfers, but they are strongly opposed to women."

"Why?"

"Because woman golfers are always losing hairpins and hatpins and stickpins in the grass. Follow the trail of a woman's foursome with a pincushion and I'll guarantee you a cushionful of pins at the end of the ninth hole."

"But why does the farmer mind that?"

"Because afterward when his sheep and cattle graze in those fields they swallow pins. Pins, I needn't tell you, are injurious to the health."

Cheering Him Up.

"Bill," said the invalid's friend, "I've come to cheer you up a bit like. I've brought yer a few fiahrs, Bill. I fought if I was too late they'd come in 'andy for a wreaf, yer know. Don't get down-'earted, Bill. Lummy, don't you look gashly! But there, keep up yer spirts, ole sport; I've come to see yer an' cheer yer up a bit. Nice little room you 'ave 'ere, but as I sez to meself when I was a-comin' up: 'Wot orkard staircase to get a coffin dahn!'"—London Globe.

Less Precarious Also.

Scott—So Rawson has become a preacher. Last time I saw him he was in doubt whether to be that or a lawyer. I wonder what decided him.

Mott—He probably recalled the saying that it is easier to preach than to practice.—Boston Transcript.

Nobleman, Probably.

Howell—I see that the heiress has put her money into the lumber business.

Powell—That so?

Howell—Yes, she has married a wooden man.

Good Excuse.

"But, Egbert, you never used to mind cutting the grass."

"I know, pa, but it's a whole lot harder since you sharpened the lawn mower."

He who speaks honestly cares not, needs not care, if his words be preserved to the remotest time.—Carlyle.

Libby's Vienna Sausage

Is distinctly different from any other sausage you ever tasted. Just try one can and it is sure to become a meal-time necessity, to be served at frequent intervals.

Libby's Vienna Sausage just suits for breakfast, is fine for luncheon and satisfies at dinner or supper. Like all of Libby's Food Products it is carefully cooked and prepared, ready to-serve, in Libby's Great White Kitchen—the cleanest, most scientific kitchen in the world.

Other popular, ready-to-serve Libby Pure Foods are:—

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

No Romance About It.

The stricken man constantly moaned the name of the young woman who had jilted him.

"Tell her," he said to the medical man, "that her cruelty killed me. Tell her I am dying from a broken heart."

The medical man shook his head.

"Aw, go on," he said. "That would be shamelessly unprofessional. Your heart's all right. It's your liver that's the trouble."

The Earth and the Moon.

That the earth must shine on the moon even as the moon shines on the earth is obvious. To detect this light from the earth on the lunar surface and scientifically prove its existence is another matter. It is interesting to find that a recent number of a French astronomical paper contains two photographs of parts of the moon illuminated by earth light. They were taken by M. Quenisset at the Juvisy observatory.

A Youthful Idea.

"See, my son," said an enthusiastic parent, anxious to impress the beauties and resources of nature, "what beautiful green dresses of leaves the trees have now, when in winter they are quite bare."

"I guess," said the youngster, thoughtfully, "that when winter comes they pack these pretty green dresses in their trunks, don't they?"

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sleet, of Beaver Lick, were visitors here, Saturday.

J. T. DeMint, of Carrollton, was here last Wednesday, the guest of Dr. W. W. Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ossman, of Beaver Lick, were welcome visitors here last Thursday.

Hon. John. W. Berkshire, of Petersburg, spent Saturday here with his many friends.

Mrs. Chas. Horrell, of Verona, was the guest of Judge T. J. Crowe and family one day last week.

E. P. Northcutt, one of our enterprising merchants, spent last Friday in Cincinnati on business.

Miss Amelia Reib, of Covington, spent Sunday here with relatives and friends and was the guest of her aunt Mrs. J. C. Miller.

Roy Stamler, the clever member of the firm of John M. Stamler, spent a day in Cincinnati, last week, buying supplies for their daily market.

Mrs. Chas. McCarty who has been undergoing treatment in a Cincinnati hospital, is rapidly improving and will soon be able to return home here.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Miller and family, and their guest, Miss Amelia Reib, of Covington, spent Sunday and Monday with relatives and friends at Big Bone Springs.

Mrs. Harvey Nelson and little son Attilla are enjoying a pleasant visit to her sister at Harrodsburg, Mercer county. Her mother Mrs. J. Wills of Williamstown, accompanied them for a visit.

A. Kirtley Johnson, the popular rural mail carrier out of Walton has been confined to his home the past week with a severe attack of mumps, and his brother, E. M. Johnson is filling his position during the interim.

John C. Miller, the clever cashier of the Equitable Bank, spent a couple of days last week at his old home at Landing, looking after his business interests there. His son Fred spent the past several days there.

William Gaunt, a prominent young lawyer, of Louisville, and a son of Hon. John S. Gaunt, spent last Friday here on business pertaining to the L. & N. Railroad Company, which is represented in this territory by Mr. Gaunt.

Dr. Harry W. Hamilton, our new dentist, is enjoying a very fine patronage. He fills appointments at Verona on Monday and Crittenden on Tuesday and the balance of his time at Walton. His card will be found in this paper.

Courtland Scott and Walter Lancaster, of Grant county, and Stanley Crouch, of Petersburg, were here last Wednesday looking over the business establishment of C. Scott Chambers with a view to buying it for Crouch & Lancaster.

Miss Anna Hudson returned home last week from Richmond, where she has been attending the Eastern Kentucky Normal school, her health not permitting her continuance of the studies. Miss Hudson has about recovered since her return home.

W. E. Vest, the hustling real estate agent, sold to H. V. Didoct, of Batavia, Ohio, the farm of Thomas Dudgeon, situated on the line of Boone and Gallatin counties, and containing 76½ acres, for $1,750, possession to be given March 1st next.

T. Benton Northcutt, who is suffering from blood poisoning is better and able to be out. Several weeks ago he cut his hand with a saw and blood poisoning developed and serious results were apprehended, but by careful nursing and attention he is now rapidly recovering.

Henry C. Diers returned home Thursday from Henry county to recuperate from the effects of a runaway accident near Pleasureville. The horse he was driving becoming frightened and upset the buggy. Mr. Diers was not injured but his companion was badly bruised.

Miss Emma Kipp, of Cincinnati, is the new stenographer and bookkeeper of the lumber firm and sawmill of Geo. W. Maines. The head sawyer, Geo. Young and wife, have moved from Aurora, Ind., to Walton. The mill is now about in running order and has the promise of a good business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Beverly and four children, of Louisville, were the guests of his brotner, S. W. Beverly and family the past couple of days, going from here to Hinton, Scott county, to visit relatives. Mr. Beverly is an engineer on the L. & N. Railroad, and his brother is the station agent at Walton.

Rev. Jas. W. Rogers spent Saturday at Hinton, Scott county, where he delivered the dedicatory address of the beautiful new hall of the Junior Order of the American Mechanics at that place, the hall being dedicated with impressive services, and a big basket dinner, there being a very large attendance. Rev. Rogers spent Sunday at Mt. Lystra, holding his regular services at the Christian church.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Sullivan and two sons, of Williamstown, were visitors here one day last week. Mr. Sullivan was formerly cashier of the bank of Glencoe, but for the past couple of years has devoted his time to the organization of banks in various parts of the country, and is having fine success as he is a gentleman of excellent business qualifications and knows how to "get there." His wife is the daughter of Capt. A. G. DeJarnette, of Williamstown, and is a most charming lady.

The Kenton county pooled wool was sold by sealed bids here yesterday to Sable & Co., of Louisville, at 30¼ cents a pound for the best and 24½ cents for the rejection. The Huntington Produce Co., which purchased the wool at 34½c a pound was represented by its agent, Mr. Elliott and Attorneys Geo. Winslow and E. C. Smith, of Carrollton, who will bring suit for the return of the $1,000 paid on the wool and also damages. J. G. Tomlin and Jno. L. Vest represent the farmers.

C. Scott Chambers, liveryman and funeral director, has sold out his business here to Walter Lancaster, of Ghent, and Stanley Crouch, of Petersburg. Mr. Chambers has built up a splendid business here, and has made a host of friends who will be sorry to lose him and his family as neighbors. Messrs. Lancaster and Crouch are very worthy gentlemen, who will make Walton most excellent citizens both from a business and social standpoint and will be gladly welcomed to the town.

Rev. and Mrs. D. T. Buck spent the past week in Hunter's Bottom, near Carrollton, guests of her brother, Jos. Tandy and wife. Rev. Buck officiated at the marriage of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tandy which was solemnized at the parental home last week. Mr. Walter Benjamin LaMaster, the groom, is a prominent young man of Campbellsburg, Henry county, while the bride is a young lady of high intellectual qualifications. The ring ceremony was used. They received over $500 worth of presents. They went on their bridal tour to Traverse Lake, Michigan.

The delivery of the Kenton county pooled wool was again postponed last Friday, the purchasers declining to receive it claiming it was wet, altho it had never been exposed to any water. The purchasers, The Huntington Produce Company, had paid about $1,000 on some of the wool that had been received and this amount is being held by the growers to make up any loss should the purchasers not take the wool, and the part delivered is being held by the growers for a final settlement. The farmers are much vexed over the delay as they have been obliged to come here several times, neglecting the urgent work on the farm, and yet nothing definite has been accomplished. At the meeting Friday it was decided by the farmers that unless the purchasers took the wool by the following Tuesday, it would be offered for sale at public outcry and disposed of in that manner. The whole affair is regretted by all parties as it has been a source of embarrassment since the first effort was made to deliver the wool. It is the general opinion that the wool was bought too high, 34½c, and the prospective loss is causing most of the trouble.

Bargains In Wire Fencing, Sewer Pipe and Portland Cement.

We have just received a car load of the American Wire Fencing, the best in use for all uses on the farm, including poultry fencing. Also a car load of Sewer Pipe and Portland Cement. These goods were bought before the rise in price, and we can sell them cheaper than ever sold in Walton. If you need any of these goods it will pay you to write us or telephone us, and we will give you full information, and quote you prices that cannot be duplicated elsewhere.

1909 PLEDGE

Adopted by The Board of Control of The Burley Tobacco Society.

FULL TEXT OF PLEDGE.

"1909 crop. County———.

"This contract made this day, witnesseth:

"That, in consideration of the benefits to be derived herefrom by the parties hereto, and that this contract is made by the undersigned and accepted by the hereinafter named board of control and tobacco society as a mutual contract with other contracts of like import taken and to be taken and entered into by and with many of other growers of tobacco, which are of mutual benefit to all, the undersigned growers of tobacco growing———acres of burley tobacco of the 1909 crop grown on the farm in the possession of the undersigned in ———county———adjoining land of hereby constitute and appoint the county board of control and Burley Tobacco Society corporations under the laws of Kentucky as sole agents for the purpose of receiving, commingling, handling, warehouseing, inspecting, insuring, grading, financing and selling all of the said tobacco in such manner and on such terms as said Burley Tobacco Society may prescribe pursuant to its charter and bylaws and for such purpose hereby transfer and assign to and invest in said agents the title and right of possession to said tobacco pursuant to their charter and bylaws, and agree to deliver the same on demand at such point in said county as said society may designate; provided said tobacco shall not be sold below the general price fixed by said society or like grades of tobacco.

INCLUDES ENTIRE CROPS.

"This pledge shall also include all tobacco grown or owned by undersigned of said year's crop, that may not be specified above. The undersigned by reason of this contract becomes, and is entitled to all the privileges as a member of said tobacco society.

The undersigned further subscribe for shares of the capital stock, to the amount equal to 1 per cent. of the gross sales of the tobacco hereby pledged in the Burley Tobacco Company, to be incorporated, and authorize the Burley Tobacco Society to pay for said stock out of the proceeds of said tobacco when sold.

PENALTY FOR VIOLATION.

"Upon our failure to fully compply with the terms and conditions of this contract we hereby agree to pay to said society as liquidated damages, 20 per cent. of the value of said tobacco, for the benefit of the members of said society.

The board of directors of the Burley Tobacco Society is authorized to dissolve the pool as to this year's crop if in their opinion a sufficient quantity of the crop has not been pledged; provided such dissolution is declared on or before October 1st, 1909, and this pledge shall be deposited for safe keeping in a bank in this county selected for that purpose by said county board of control, and the executive board of the Burley Tobacco Society, to await and be subject to the finanl action of said directors of the Burley Tobacco Society.

"The solicitor has no authority to change the terms of this contract."

The usual number of spread-eagle speeches having been made and the regulation quantity of gunpowder having been burnt in the celebration of the glorious fourth, the country has resumed business.

July 10.—Don't be discouraged by the idea that you can't equal anyones achievements.

T. C. Masters and wife, of Ashby, were visiting relatives in Bullittsville, last Sunday.

James Noble and wife, of Petersburg, were visiting in the vicinity of Francesville, Sunday night and Monday.

Walter Ogden and wife, of Garrison, were visiting a sister-in-law between Hebron and Burlington, Thursday.

Cleve Rector and wife, of Ashby, were visiting papa and mamma Jones, of Bullittsville, Saturday night and Sunday.

Everybody that is not done cutting wheat and has wheat to cut, is at it with might and main. The crop here will be about an average.

James Grant and Boss Ackmeyer had a fistic interview a few days since in which it is said the old gentleman got the best of the argument.

Eight acre fields is the way tomatoes are raised here for the Petersburg cannery. There is an acre field of tomatoes on T. G. Willis' farm, but it is the crop of three men.

Farmer Jones spent the fourth in Cincinnati, he and Geo. Pfalzgraf going up together in a buggy. Mr. Pfalzgraf went to the ball game and returned by car by way of Lawrenceburg. Mr. Jones returning alone.

Teacher Bondurant, of Petersburg, passed through from Bullittsville, Friday, where he had been to see about teaching the school, but didn't get any satisfaction in regard to the matter. He stopped and we had a pleasant half hour's chat.

Mrs. Jones, wife of Rev. Jones, of Bloomington, Ill., arrived at her father's Monday. She was to have been here Saturday. Mr. Willis went to the city after her and found her at a hotel sick and was unable to come down until Monday. She was taken sick on the train.

Stephen Burns and wife, of Petersburg, were Saturday night and Sunday guests of his brother, Cecil Burns and wife. He didn't find Cecil in the weeds as he expected. The people here don't set on the fence and cry weeds, weeds, but are out in the fields going after them for all there is in it.

The kind hearted Josh Masters, of Bullittsville, went down on Ashby Saturday evening and took T. C. Masters' kids up to see the fire works and then took them home Sunday evening. It was difficult to tell which was the most pleased, Uncle Josh or the kids. Uncle Josh said, "I was a kid once."

The subject of this sketch, James Corcoran, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, in the year 1836, and died at his home near Bullittsville on July 2d, 1909, of heart failure, aged 73 years. Mr. Corcoran came to the United States with his parents in 1848, and to Boone county, Ky., in the fall of 1859, and has been a resident of the county ever since, except about three years spent in the Michigan pineries. None more accommodating and kind as a neighbor is the compliment his neighbors pay him. His remains were taken to Petersburg, Monday, and interred. We extend to the relatives our sympathy.

Farmer Jones reports having made a wonderful discovery. He went to his hen house a short time since with a lighted lantern and left it hanging there all night—by neglect, of course. The next morning there was an egg for every hen in the nests, something that hadn't happened for a whole month before. Farmer thought the lighted lantern had something to do with the industry of his hens. He tried the lantern the next night, and got another batch of eggs. Then he omitted it one night and there wasn't a blessed egg. Then he left them a lighted lantern again and got more eggs. The Farmer says he is getting eggs now to burn.

GUNPOWDER.

Albert Underhill had the misfortune to lose his old family horse a few days since. It got in a sink-hole, and in struggling to get out his strength was so completely exhausted it died in a short while after it was taken out.

Steve Robbins came very near having a big blaze, one day last week. His house caught fire, but, fortunately, Mrs. Robbins discovered it before it got under much headway, and gave the alarm and several of the neighbors responded immediately and soon had the fire under control. It did slight damage. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

The Middoma, a strong team from Aurora, played the locals at the park here Saturday, and it was as nice a game as has been seen on the local lot this summer. The game by innings: 1.—Thompson fanned, Conner got Volt's easy roller to third, Riggs got first on bad heave by shortstop, Stevens' long fly was nabbed by Wingate. McCarty fanned, Wingate out on a pop fly to third. Smith sent a fly to right field that was copped by Riggs. 2.—Everett was hit by pitcher but was out trying to steal second, Kaiser out short to first, Page's foul fly was captured by McCarty. Conner hit safe and got second on error by catcher, Rogers sent one straight up that was easy for catcher, Sandford rolled an easy one to pitcher, who threw him out at first, Conner taking third on the play, Stucky sent a hot one thru the box and Conner scored, Presser fanned. 3.—McMannan easy out on a grounder to first, Norris fanned, Thompson reached first on error by shortstop, Volt fanned. Clore's grounder was fumbled by first baseman, McCarty fanned. Clore out trying to pilfer second, Wingate hit to center for two bases but died there as Smith's fly was caught by first baseman. 4.—Riggs sent one skyward that was easy for Clore, Stevens out short to first, Everett got a nice single, but Kaiser rolled to pitcher for the third out. Conner's fly to left field was pulled down, Rogers hit to left and stole second, Sandford out on a slow one to first, Stucky's grounder to second was fielded to first in time for the last out. 5.—Page fanned, Wingate got McMann's fly, Norris bunted to pitcher, out at first. Presser's fly was taken by Everett, Clore sent a high one to center for No. 2, McCarty got first on error and stole second and third, but was thrown out while trying to score on Smith's infield hit. 5.—Thompson dropped one in front of the plate and was out, Volt's fly was taken care of by Wingate, Riggs fanned. Conner hit over short, stole second but was caught between second and third, Rogers was hit by pitcher, and stole second and went to third on Sandford's sacrifice and scored on Stucky's hit over third, Presser's grounder to second made third out. 7.—Stevens and Everett beat the air, and Kaiser's foul fly was caught off third base line by Sandford. Clore out on fly to third, McCarty rolled to pitcher, Wingate sent a pop up to short. 8.—Page singled but was out trying to steal third, McMann fanned, Norris' grounder was handled by Rogers and Clore. Smith's grass cutter was gobbled up by Thompson, Conner rolled to second, Rogers fanned. 9.—Thompson's fly caught by Smith, Volt and Riggs both fanned and the fire was out, the visitors not getting a man as far as third.

Misses Josephine and Gladys Ryle two charming young ladies, and Messrs. Lewis Craig, Robt. Hodges and Joe Hodges, were pleasantly entertained by Bluford Kirtley and wife, at their beautiful home, Sunday. Bluie and his wife know how to make a day enjoyable for young people.

The young folks of this community had quite an outing Monday on Gunpowder creek near Robt. Allen's. When they reached the creek they found another happy crowd out for an all day outing. They did not catch very many large fish but the day was an enjoyable one to all and will be one long remembered.

HEBRON.

Charles Cleek and wife, of Erlanger, spent last Friday at Martin Aylor's.

Miss Grace Tanner, of Dayton, O., is visiting Mrs. Doc Mannin, of near Hebron.

Misses Eva and Alma Gedker entertained the C. E. social last Saturday night.

Miss Kate Ashbrook, of Covington, is spending a few weeks with Mrs. Lillie Conner.

Edgar Graves and wife and Wilford Bullock and wife were Sunday guests at Joseph Bullock's.

Robert Bradford, traveling salesman for the Heinz Co., was here several days the past week visiting his mother.

Dr. Frank Jackson and wife, of Camden, Onio, were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bullock, several days last week.

GASBURG.

The blackberry harvest is on, and the crop is the best ever.

A machine was threshing across the river all of last week.

Miss Bessie Webber, of Aurora, visited at your reporter's Sunday.

Where gardens were properly cultivated the vegetables are of extra quality and abundance.

No tomatoes are being raised here for the canneries, only for the Aurora and Lawrenceburg markets.

The melon and sweet potato crops are making fine progress and will be on the market about the usual time.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, the Irish potato crop is the best for years, both in yield and quality.

Eugene Witham's father and mother from Philadelphia, Penn., and his brother, William, of Indianapolis, Ind., are visiting him.

The sugar corn crop here is the largest ever planted. Eugene Witham has six acres alone, various others from one to three acres.

Ezra Aylor's horse that was so badly shot by some fiend is improving rapidly. It was shot by a large bullet in the left shoulder and ranged into the right one.

RICHWOOD.

Mrs. Thomas Rice is improving slowly.

Mrs. M. Grubbs is gradually growing worse.

Cary Carpenter and family Sundayed at Cove Carpenter's.

Mrs. Raymond Snow, of Dry Ridge, and James and Mrs. Fannie Snow, of Covington, and Mrs. Dora Glacken, of Erlanger, were here last week the guests of relatives.

Walter Wolf's two mules and his family horse strayed on to the railroad, where they were frightened by a train and ran on to the trestle near Mrs. Ingram's toll gate. They fell off of the trestle, and the mare and one mule were so badly crippled that they had to be killed, while the other mule is badly hurt.

Thomas Carpenter and Miss Willis Powers quietly plied themselves to Rev. McMiller's, last Wednesday afternoon and were married. Walter Robinson and Miss Beulah Surface, Stanley Aylor and Miss Gladys Carpenter were the attendants. After a bridal supper at the home of parents of the bride, the party went to Jerry Carpenter's where a bridal hop was given in honor of the bride and groom. We wish Tom and his wife a prosperous and happy voyage on the sea of life.

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick, of Danforth, Me. "Although past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at Beutler's Drug Store, Erlanger.

Life 100,000 Years Ago.

Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men, who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was in constant danger from wild beasts. Today the danger as shown by A. W. Brown, of Alexander, Me., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Lungs, Colds, obstinate Coughs, and prevent Pneumonia, it's the best medicine on earth. 50c and $1. Guaranteed by Beutler's Drug Store, Erlanger. Trial bottle free.

For Sale—500 Stock Ewes from one to three years old. Will sell for cash or on time. Apply to V. W. Gaines, near Bullittsburg Baptist church. Phone 251 Burlington. tf.

The hay harvest is on. There are many nice fields of grass, but very few that have no weeds.

WESTON'S Coast-to-Coast TRAMP

By Willard W. Garrison

EDWARD PAYSON WESTON, aged 72 years, is the youngest old man in the world. Not satisfied with a mere statement of this fact, Weston has proven it by walking from New York to San Francisco, a distance of 4,600 miles, in 100 days, Sundays excluded.

His arrival in 'Frisco just the other day is proof enough that there is only one Weston. It was one of the greatest walks ever undertaken by any pedestrian.

With the chilly March winds making walking a difficulty along Broadway, New York, Weston on the fifteenth of the month started his long, tedious, coast-to-coast lope and the biggest pleasure of his life came when the cool afternoon breeze, as if in greeting, seemed to rise out of Golden Gate, San Francisco and make the home stretch to the 'Frisco city hall more pleasant.

Greeted by the people of San Francisco with even more hospitality than he had experienced along the route, if such a condition were possible, this interesting old man was indeed at the height of his glory.

Think of it—you who brag about a ten-mile feat of pedestrianism—this 72-year-old New Englander during his years of walking, has traversed more than 25,000 miles, which is the distance around the world, land and water included.

His latest achievement was accomplished at a rate of 46 miles each day, a hard proposition in consideration of the fact that Weston returned the public's little courtesies by addressing his admirers along the route.

Some days over level country where fast time was possible, he would negotiate 50 and 60 miles. The record was set when on his walk from Portland, Me., to Chicago a year ago, he accomplished a stretch of 90 miles in a day. Then, however, he walked almost the entire 24 hours.

Always carrying a regulation breakfast food smile this quaint old character, who, by the way, can address an audience as well as he can walk long distances, never lost sight of the optimistic side of his venture. Happy, hale, hearty and a picture of color, he laughed gayly at mention of the vicissitudes which he was compelled to undergo in making good in his determination to span the continent afoot.

Facing the sun-baked western deserts, he wore the same typical Yankee smile. Only once did the relentless heat of the sands cause him to falter. That was, when in crossing the Great Salt Lake desert on the twenty-second of June he was forced to stop and rest almost two hours at Lemay, Utah. He rested almost against his will, but he realized that the little snatch of sleep at Lemay was for the best.

Leaving Hogup, Utah, at 6:30 that morning, he started his desert tramp. That night he was at Lucin, 41 miles away. At four o'clock the next morning he saw dawn break over the town of Lucin, and he was several miles to the west, walking with the same steady stride which marked his progress along better roads in the east.

He suffered a slight injury from a fall in the west, and this hurt augmented by the effects of the heat, promised to make his daily walks shorter. Sheer persistence kept him at his task, and his will power overcame his ailments. Consequently, when he crossed the west state line of Utah, he was in splendid physical condition.

All was not milk and honey for the pedestrian. At Laramie, Wyoming, his manager forced him to stay indoors for an entire half day in order to conserve his energy.

Perhaps the states east of Illinois which greeted Weston a year ago when he made his memorable trip from Portland, Me., to Chicago, were not quite as enthusiastic over the aged pedestrian as they were in 1908, but if such was the case young Mr. Weston failed to see the lack of hospitality.

One of the speediest "laps" which the walker accomplished before entering California, was that from Ogden to Hogup, Utah. Leaving Ogden one hour after midnight he reached the smaller city late in the afternoon of the same day. It was a tramp of 61 miles, and he declared it was the best time he had made during the trip.

To every one along his route of travel, who saw him appear on the horizon to the east and then vanish again toward the setting sun he was the same cheery, hale, hearty, happy old gentleman. His feet might be clogged with mud, if the weather happened to be inclement, his clothes rain, or dew soaked. It made no difference with the Weston smile, however. It shone no matter what the conditions.

Smiling upon everyone in general, bowing to the matrons, throwing kisses to the misses, his whole being reflected the power of the good nature which his manager declared assisted him in his difficult task.

Treading the slope of the Rockies several days behind time, he only saw the silver lining in the clouds that threatened to blast his hopes of reaching the Pacific coast at 4 p. m., on the 8th of July.

At his journey's end the whole city of San Francisco abandoned its last hour of the business day in the hope of making the pedestrian's welcome a warm one. Just as other western cities had turned out to wave a cheery hello and good-by to Weston, big, rejuvenated 'Frisco was proportionately hospitable to this remarkable character.

With the eastern slope of the Rockies traversed there were some who questioned the possibility of the pedestrian's safe arrival at the Golden Gate on the day set for his welcome.

"I am still a young old man," he said laughingly, "and I have shown the pedestrian youngsters of 55 and 60 years that my heyday is not on the wane.

"There have been plenty of obstacles to overcome, but with a path to tread and a will behind me, nothing is insurmountable."

Fairly swimming through a sea of mud was one of the everyday happenings with the walker.

"I agreed to walk from ocean to ocean, but I had no idea I would be compelled to swim part of the way," he said. "But that is just what I had to do in Colorado. My walk into Denver was over roads which were terrible. I carried tons of mud on my feet, it seemed to me, and it was a supreme effort to lift the dirt itself with taking a step which carried my own body besides."

It took Pedestrian Weston just 73 days to reach Denver from New York, leaving him 27 days for the trip from the Colorado metropolis to the Golden Gate.

Even when Weston had so nearly completed his journey as to safely traverse the Great Salt Lake desert there were some people in the great cities who were skeptical as to the walker's ability to reach his destination.

"Can't reach 'Frisco, eh?" queried Weston with an arching of the eyebrows which seemed to echo itself all over his wrinkled visage. "Why, I'll reach the coast with time to spare." And the square Weston jaw seemed to augur well for the success of his resolve.

In every big city through which the New Englander passed en route to the Pacific ocean, police protection from the over-enthusiastic public was necessary, and he declared that of all the friends he made the city minions were heartier in their wishes for his ultimate success than the thousands and thousands who were interested in his long tramp.

MAKING A SPEECH.

NEAR THE END OF HIS JOURNEY.

His loss of time which amounted to five days as he started to ascend the western slope of the mighty Rockies, was occasioned chiefly by his desire to please the admirers of the country through which he had journeyed.

Weston and Dan O'Leary were youngsters as well as pioneers in the business of pedestrianism years ago. Then the O'Leary "walk" was a distinct rival of the Weston "walk." Their feats on the thoroughfares of the country attracted far more attention than they do in these busy days, and people were getting up early in the morning to tear off a journey of from 15 to 20 miles before breakfast, using the stride of their favorite walker.

The O'Leary stride then, consisted of executing motions with the hips, shoulders, as well as limbs, along with a good deal of arm swinging, while the New Englander's style consisted of a straight, swinging step, with the head, shoulders and hips moving in harmony with the lower limbs.

"What does he get out of it? What good does it do him?" the practical matter-of-fact twentieth century man will ask.

In answer, Weston's friends declare that in the first place every man has some hobby or other. Weston's hobby is long distance walking. In the second place it may turn itself into a financial venture some day. Weston is a good orator, and on his tours is always in demand as a lecturer.

But at the same time the pedestrian is said to be comparatively a poor man. On his walk in 1908 from Portland to Chicago, he entered the Windy City with the expectation of lecturing. He did a little speaking, but not to any great extent.

To show his absolute integrity is an offer which was made to him, and rejected by him almost immediately, of a firm manufacturing a shoe device. He could have turned his signature to the company's testimonial into several thousand dollars on the spot, had he chosen to sign a paper, stating that he had worn the shoe contrivance on his journey and found it satisfactory. He had not worn it, and refused the offer without a second's hesitation.

For him pedestrianism is one great round of pleasure. He likes to walk and the agreement he made to traverse the continent in 100 days simply furnished more than three months of enjoyment.

That was Weston's idea. The agreement was in a sense, a secondary matter. His vigor, vitality and recuperative powers are declared wonderful by physicians who have studied him. He is probably the greatest athlete of the age, everything considered.

By post roads the distance from New York to San Francisco is 4,300 miles, but according to the estimate furnished by Mr. Weston and his manager the distance is 4,600 miles, which being accomplished in 100 days, excluding Sundays, necessitates a tramp averaging 46 miles each day.

Considering the many setbacks which are bound to occur on such a journey as this the progress which Weston made was considered remarkable.

It was declared that the automobile which was following Weston deserted him in the west because that particular make of car failed to get the amount of publicity desired. This was something of a setback for the old man, because the machine carried provisions, refreshments and other necessities.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Camden, N.J.—"It is with pleasure that I add my testimonial to your already long list—hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of this valuable medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from terrible headaches, pain in my back and right side, was tired and nervous, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health and made me feel like a new person, and it shall always have my praise."—Mrs. W. P. VALENTINE, 903 Lincoln Avenue, Camden, N. J.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 99, Gardiner Me.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

HEROES OF HISTORY—II

Jesus, Son of Strach, Extoleth Them.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1902, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Based on the Apocryphal Book of Ecclesiasticus.

A Prologue to the Book of Ecclesiasticus.—This Jesus was the son of Strach, and grandchild to Jesus of the same name with him. This man therefore, lived in the latter times, after the people had been led away captive, and called home again, and almost after all the prophets. Now his grandfather Jesus, as himself witnesseth, was a man of great diligence and wisdom among the Hebrews, who did not only gather the grave and short sentences of wise men, that had been before him, but himself also uttered some of his own, full of understanding and wisdom. When therefore the first Jesus died, leaving this book almost perfected, Strach his son receiving it after him, left it to his own son Jesus, who having gotten it into his hands compiled it all orderly into one volume, and called it Wisdom, entitling it by both his own name, his father's name and his grandfather's. It containeth wise sayings, dark sayings, dark sentences and parables, and certain particular ancient godly stories of men that pleased God; also his prayer and song. This Jesus did imitate Solomon, and was no less famous for wisdom and learning, both, being indeed a man of great learning and so reputed also.

GEMS FROM THE BOOK.

If thou hast understanding, answer thy neighbor; if not, lay thy hand upon thy mouth.

Be not called a whisperer, and lie not in wait with thy tongue.

Pride is the beginning of sin.

Bear not hatred to thy neighbor for every wrong; and do nothing at all by injurious practices.

He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith; and he that hath fellowship with a proud man shall be like unto him.

A fool will upbraid churlishly, and a gift of the envious consumeth the eyes.

Learn before thou speakest. Go not after thy lusts, but refrain thyself from thine appetites.

He that is hasty to give credit is light-minded.

He that can rule his tongue shall live without strife.

As an arrow that sticketh in a man's thigh, so is a word within a fool's belly.

A man's attire, an excessive laughter, and gait, show what he is.

Wisdom that is hid and treasures that is hoarded up, what profit is in them both?

Better is he that hideth his folly than a man that hideth his wisdom.

A wise man will hold his tongue till he see opportunity; but a babbler and a fool will regard no time.

A tale out of season is as music in mourning; but stripes and correction of wisdom are never out of time.

THE STORY.

THE interest which Lycius had manifested in the great men of Israel had stirred the heart of Jesus the son of Strach, and during the days which followed their conference in the garden he had given himself up to much thought and research, digging up the dusty old scrolls of the history of his people and running through them with new interest and eagerness.

"I believe Lycius was right when he said that it was wrong not to give these records to the people. What if the most of them then would be unmoved by them, there are still a few who would be helped and inspired by the memory of those who had wrought splendidly with God."

He had been busy writing and had let his stylus fall from his hand while speaking to himself. Then, picking it up and placing it with the parchment he had been working upon, he arose with an air of determination as though some new purpose had come to him and walked with strong even strides back towards the city.

He sought out the governor and told him all that was in his heart, and as he was leaving he asked:

"And thou wilt be there?"

"Yea, and others of the household with me."

The steps of the scribe were now directed towards the market-place of the city, whither the people were wont to gather when any matter of special importance was to be discussed.

"I will go and see that the place is in readiness against the gathering of the people this evening. And we will give the people a message that perhaps will stir them to better living. But I must find Lycius," he said, suddenly remembering that he had not seen him all day. He was about to turn back in the direction of his home, when voices from the direction of the market place drew his attention.

"I will go first and see what there is that is going on there, and will then find Lycius, for he would be greatly cheered to know that his suggestion of a few days ago is being acted upon," he said to himself as he walked along.

By this time he had reached the outskirts of the crowd which he found assembled in the market place, and with wonder and surprise he pressed his way through to the spot where a man stood reading.

"What! You, Lycius?" he exclaimed in amazement. "How came you here? And what art thou doing?"

"Listen, and thou shalt hear," replied the man, enthusiastically, as he again took up the scroll and pointed out over the eager, upturned faces before him.

"Ah, I see. Thou hast cleverly stolen a march on me," replied Jesus, not at all displeased. "I have just come from the house of the governor and had asked him to arrange for a gathering of the people in the market place that we might do the very thing which you are now doing with such good results."

"Yea, I could not let the stories of the heroes of Israel go unused. See how the people enjoy them," and beginning at the point where the interruption had come he continued to finish the scroll which a few days before he had written.

"And is that all?" they asked, as he finished reading.

Lycius turned inquiringly towards Jesus, and noting by his nod that he would not disappoint the people, he lifted his voice and spoke to the assembly, saying:

"It is all I have, but Jesus the son of Strach is here and will tell thee more concerning the heroes of Israel."

"Who was the successor of Moses?" began Jesus, reading from the scroll he had taken from his bosom. "Was it not Jesus the son of Nave, who was valiant in wars. How great glory gat he, when he lifted up his hands, and stretched out his sword against the cities! Did not the sun go back by his means? and was not one day as long as two? The Lord gave strength also unto Caleb, which remained with him to his old age, so that he entered upon the high places of the land, and his seed obtained it for an inheritance. And concerning the judges every one by name, whose hearts departed not from the Lord, let their memory be blessed. Samuel, the prophet of the Lord, beloved of the Lord, established a kingdom, and anointed princes over his people. And after him rose up Nathan to prophecy in the time of David. As is the fat taken away from the peace offering, so was David chosen out of the children of Israel. He played with lions as with kids, and with bears as with lambs. Slew he not a giant, when he was yet young? And did he not take away reproach from the people, when he lifted up his hand with the stone in the sling, and beat down the boasting Goliath? For he called upon the most high Lord; and he gave him strength in his right hand to slay the mighty warrior, and set up the horn of his people."

A shout went up from the people as he spoke of David. It was one of the favorite stories with them.

"Yea, we know him," they cried.

"And dost thou know his son?"

"Solomon? Solomon!" they cried.

"Yea, and he was a wise son, and reigned in a peaceable time, and was honored by God, for he made all quiet around him, that he might build an house in his name, and prepare his sanctuary for ever. And the countries marveled at him for the songs and proverbs and parables, and interpretations, but he did stain his honor and pollute his seed so that his sin brought the wrath of the Lord upon the children of Israel. And the kingdom was divided. And—"

The voice of Jesus the son of Strach broke. Sadness filled his heart as he realized the decline of the once favored nation.

"Yea, and though the people sinned God did send his prophets to turn them back to him. He sent Elias, the prophet who came as a fire, his word burned as a lamp. Elias it was who was covered with a whirlwind and Eliseus was filled with his spirit. Whilst he lived he was not moved with the presence of any prince, neither could any bring him into subjection. But for all this the people repented not, neither departed they from their sins. And we have fallen upon evil days," concluded Jesus. "Oh that these examples of old might turn your hearts to God and make thee realize that trouble and affliction come in the wake of wrong doing."

"Amen and amen," exclaimed Lycius.

And as he and Jesus walked homeward after the great meeting, the former said:

"I am glad I came and have heard of the heroes of thy history. Now do I know that there is blessing in following the Lord."

"Yea, I am glad, too, and that thou hast encouraged the gathering of the people. May it be for their good."

New Russian Temperance Law.

Russia will have a temperance measure well worth while, if the proposal now under discussion passes the douma, says the Home Herald. Its purpose is to restrict the consumption of intoxicating liquors by increasing the capacity of the smallest measure which can be sold to one-fortieth of a kilderkin (about one-half gallon) and reducing the number of places where liquor can be bought. The inhabitants of villages are also given the privilege to close existing public houses and to prohibit the opening of new ones, while the local councils may restrict the hours of sale. It is not known as yet how the douma will line up on the proposition, but the friends of the measure are cheered by the fact that the council of state has decided in its favor.

THE BROKERS ON THE CURB.

As Jonas Sees Them and Carefully Explains to His Little Friend Rollo.

"Look, Jonas! What are those men doing? Are they crazy?"

"Not legally so, Rollo. They are curb brokers."

"And what is a curb broker?"

"He is one, Rollo, who sells something he hasn't got to some one who doesn't really buy it."

"Why, that is like the men in the building across the street."

"Yes; the difference is only about $75,000."

"See that man with the red cap, Jonas. He is waving his hands. There! That other man in the third story window has waved back. What is that for?"

"That means that the man in the red cap has sold 12,000 shares of Dewdrop."

"That must be a great deal of money."

"Yes. That is almost seven dollars, at the present price of Dewdrop. The firm will soon be able to pay its rent for last October."

"They seem to be a healthy looking bunch, Jonas."

"So they are. Most have taken their basketball degree at Yarvard."

"And is this their life work?"

"Well, Rollo, most of them could qualify as motormen, if it were not for the keen competition of the immigrant class."—Puck.

Chinese Dramatic Crudities.

Here is a sample of one of the naive bits of Chinese stagecraft. Hom Ling, leading tragedian, playing the part of the younger son, renders a solo which means that the widow and orphans are going to the temple to celebrate funeral rites. The property man sets on the stage a little box for an altar and throws over the widow's head a white veil, symbol of mourning. Then Hom Ling, as the younger son, waves his hands and kicks his foot like a man punting a football. This signifies that the rest of the family is out of his sphere of action. The scene has officially changed from a house to a temple. So, while the rest of the family kneels before the altar, Hom Ling strolls over and chats with one of the musicians who happens to be resting.—Will Irwin in Everybody's.

The Joy of Work.

Helen McGraw Longyear is the daughter of a man in Brookline, Mass., whose wealth is estimated at something like $50,000,000. But Miss Longyear says the joy of living is the joy of work, and hence she has just taken a degree at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has a practical knowledge of architecture that would make it possible for her to earn her own living if necessary. Her sister, Abby Beecher Longyear, has a finished education in music and could make it the vehicle for earning her own living. Miss Helen is president of the woman's society of the "Tech" and the art editor of the year book.

Fine Collection of Dolls.

The Countess de Blonay is said to have the best collection of dolls in the world. Her collection has just been on exhibition in Brussels for the benefit of the Calvary guild. The oldest dolls came from the ruins of Nineveh and were presented to the countesses' great grandmother by Queen Marie Antoinette. The most striking dolls in the collection are said to be the Fingo dolls from South Africa.

A Doctor's Blunder.

It is occasionally well for the medical man to heed what his patients say. After choking at the dinner table, and saying that he had a bone in his throat, a three-year-old boy was declared by doctors to have diphtheria; he was treated for that disease in St. Pancras hospital, but died, and a post-mortem showed that the little fellow had been right—there was a piece of bone in the larynx and no diphtheria at all. Of course these were London doctors, but they err the same way in our hospitals.—Springfield Republican.

President Taft is fond of children, with whom he is a favorite. A charming story on this head comes from Cincinnati.

Once, when a pretty Cincinnati girl was a child of six or seven, Mr. Taft, calling at her house, found nobody home excepting herself. She entertained him a little while, and when he rose to go, he stooped down and kissed her.

"Here's one," he said, "for the baby. Here is another for little Jim. And here is a third for Billie-boy."

The little girl, drawing herself up, said haughtily—she had been reading a novel:

"Mr Taft, you forget yourself!"

He bent down again.

"So I did," he laughed. "Well, here's one for myself!"

DREADFUL DANDRUFF.

Girl's Head Encrusted—Feared Loss of All Her Hair—Baby Had Milk-Crust—Missionary's Wife Made Two Perfect Cures by Cuticura.

"For several years my husband was a missionary in the Southwest. Every one in that high and dry atmosphere has more or less trouble with dandruff and my daughter's scalp became so encrusted with it that I was alarmed for fear she would lose all her hair. After trying various remedies, in desperation I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. They left the scalp beautifully clean and free from dandruff, and I am happy to say that the Cuticura Remedies were a complete success. I have also used successfully the Cuticura Remedies for so-called 'milk-crust' on baby's head. Cuticura is a blessing. Mrs. J. A. Darling, 310 Fifth St., Carthage, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1905."

Sex in Cromwells.

Of course with the sexes on a footing of equality as regarded opportunity, it would not be long until a female Cromwell made her appearance, and, having made her appearance, was getting her portrait painted.

The painter, once more a fawning, courtly fellow, would have the picture a flattery; but she rebuked him in words that became historic!

"Paint in the hips!" she commanded, sternly, showing that she could be more rigidly devoted to the truth than Oliver himself.—Puck.

Put 'Em Down.

"I think fancy hose should be prohibited because they promote bad manners."

"What's the answer?"

"They encourage the great American habit of sticking feet up on desks, chairs, porch posts, etc."—Kansas City Times.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a meeting of Point Pleasant Grange, June 19th, 1909, the following resolutions were adopted:

Since it has been the will of the Divine Master to call little Lorena Tanner, daughter of Harry and Etta Busby Tanner, therefore be it resolved.

We extend our deepest fraternal sympathy to brother and sister Tanner in this their lonely grief, and point them to the mercy of God as the only solace for such trials.

We pray that the tender memories of this child of their loving care and affection, may draw them near to the feet of Jesus, and that they may become as this little child, fit for the Kingdom of Heaven.

Committee—Mrs. J. P. Tanner, Mrs. R. E. Tanner, Mr. Wallace Tanner.

Whereas, amid the great changing scenes of life Death has again visited our Lodge, and in the short space of two months another brother has been called by the Grand Master from labor to refreshment, and in doing so has removed from our midst Bro. David Beall. Bro. Beall was born in Boone county, Kentucky, October 28th, 1842, and died June 17th, 1909, in the vicinity of his birth. Bro. Beall was made a Master Mason in North Bend Lodge, No. 540, in 1874; was demitted from this Lodge in 1904, and became a charter member of Hebron Lodge No. 574, F. and A. M., to which he belonged at the time of his death.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with his widow and family in their dark hour, and let us trust with them, that he is at rest.

Resolved, That our Lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days; also that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the widow and family, a copy spread on a page of our record book dedicated to his memory, and a copy each to the Masonic Home Journal and Boone County Recorder for publication.

Committee—R. C. McGlasson, G. O. Hafer, Wm. W. Goodridge.

The rain this week has wiped out the dewberries.

This part of the county was swept by a heavy wind and a hard rain between three and four o'clock, last Monday afternoon. The oats, timothy and corn were blown down badly, the damage to the oats crop being very serious. Trees came in for a pretty lively shake up, and many boughs were torn off and hurled in every direction. At Petersburg the storm appears to have been the severest. Besides considerable minor damage 18 squares of metal roofing was torn off of one of the large warehouses at the distillery at that place.

SEALED BIDS.

Sealed bids will be received by the trustees of the Belleview Graded School District for the construction of a brick school building in the town of Belleview. Said building will be two stories in height, and 46 by 90 feet. Plans and specifications can be seen at the Citizens Deposit Bank, Grant, Ky., or copies will be sent on application to the undersigned. All bids to be in by July 24th,

CHARLES MAURER
Chairman Board of Trustees.

Stops Hair Falling

Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will certainly stop falling of the hair. Indeed, we believe it will always do this unless there is some disturbance of the general health. Then, a constitutional medicine may be necessary. Consult your physician about this.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he say

The reason why Ayer's Hair Vigor stops falling hair is because it first destroys the germs which cause this trouble. After this is done, nature soon brings about a full recovery, restoring the hair and scalp to a perfectly healthy condition.

When Sick

Women suffering from headache, backache, pain in side, or nervousness, or any other ailment resulting from female trouble, should get Cardui and use it regularly. Cardui has been found, by thousands of ladies, to relieve female weakness, by restoring to health the weak womanly organs.

Take CARDUI

Mrs. F. S. Mills, Murietta, Calif., tried Cardui and writes: "I don't think anyone can recommend a medicine more highly than I can Cardui. I had a mishap, followed by inflammation. I positively believe I would have died, had it not been for Cardui. When I began taking it, I could not stand on my feet. After taking two bottles, I was cured, and I now weigh 165 pounds." Try Cardui—it will help you. Sold everywhere.

Roads should be worked now.

The weather is very uncertain.

This is a critical time with the hay and oats crops.

The Hebron gas fields have disappeared from public consideration.

Brooks & Snelling, of Petersburg, started their threshing machine yesterday.

Hewitt Bros. have rented and will operate Baldon's saw mill on Middle creek.

The gasoline boats on the river could be heard plainly in Burlington last Sunday evening.

The hay fever period draws nigh, and there are several about here who are living in dread of its arrival.

Mrs. Ben Miller, who resided near the Boone and Gallatin line, died last Saturday and was buried, Sunday.

Splendid weather the latter part of last week for farm work, and advantage was taken of it in every direction.

The open date in the local league schedule, last Saturday, came just to suit the players who were engaged harvesting.

Some of the patrons on rural route No. 2 got no mail yesterday as the carrier could not cross Gunpowder creek at the first ford.

R. W. Clark is somewhat of a potato raiser, and has a crop that is turning out tubers that weigh a pound each. Not so many of that size to the hill, but there are several good sized potatoes clustered about each of the pounders.

Some of the Covington Republicans are trying to get undertaker John Allison to become a candidate for the nomination for sheriff of Kenton county, but so far he continues to say "no" to everyone who approaches him on that subject.

The acreage of growing corn is not near so large as it would have been had the season been favorable to getting the crop out. Many acres of land that were intended for corn lie idle, in some instances a portion having been broken, and the work abandoned.

The hoe has been called into use more than common this year in the crops, the increased demand for that implement being caused by the long period of wet weather in the spring. The farmer can get after the weeds with a hoe when no other tool is at all usable.

There are quite a number of schools in the county that have not been supplied with teachers for the approaching session, at which the pay will be better than heretofore. The county can furnish its own teachers if the young men and women who are qualified to teach a public school will enter the field. Ther is no occasion for a scarcity of teachers.

Frankfort, July 1.—June 1 ended the State's fiscal year, and on that date the Commonwealth of Kentucky owed in exact figures the sum of $194,806 21 more than it has the wherewithal to liquidate. The ledger of the treasury department showed cash balance on hand on that date of $385,733 29, but there were warrants drawn by the auditor for legitimate debts outstanding to the amount of $550,539.50 which, if paid would wipe out the cash balance.

A Correction.

In its reference to the Peter Bimm murder trial, this paper said in one place, last week, that it was 49 years ago, but the date of the occurrence corrected that statement, showing that it was 39 years ago.

Double Catching.

Roberts & Kelly, local merchants, have been suffering considerably of late from the depredations of rats; and to get rid of these pests they have located so many steel traps on their premises that frequently two traps catch the same rat.

The Percapita.

To County Superintendents:

The State School Fund (estimated) distributed for the payment of teachers for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, amounts to $2,975,632.

The per capita is declared $4. The per capita last year was $3.60; this year is an increase of 40 cents, hence this per capita for the years 1909-1910 is the largest in the history of the State.

Pupils in counties	591,679.
Pupils in cities	152,229.

The school census last year was 738,021 pupils. This year the increase is 5,887 pupils.

I congratulate the teachers of the State. On July 22, 1908, in declaring the per capita last year, I said: "We are inaugurating here and now the biggest forward movement of the schools in Kentucky since the past forty or fifty years," and to-day I repeat it. We are inaugurating here and now the biggest forward movement of the schools in Kentucky since the past forty or fifty years. You will see this sentence again. Better help now. Respectfully submitted,

J. G. CRABBE, Supt.

Sheep Killing Dogs.

There is no subject in connection with sheep raising of more moment than this one, not only in actual loss sustained on account of the canine family but many times the flock master is called to care for a mangled flock that perhaps he has been for years trying to improve and breed up to a high standard. Now as a general rule a man that keeps a dog (let it be a cur or well bred one, and all are liable to become night wanderers) is the hardest to make believe that he owns a sheep killing dog, and this fact makes it more difficult to meet the case and not make trouble with a neighbor as you are liable to have and while there are many ways of doing so the best plan is to confine the flock at night in a barn or a lot enclosed by a high woven wire fence and when there is any assurance of curs prowling around just bait them with flesh seasoned with strychnine, and the work is done, and it is hard to tell how. Another way is by a pen built after the plan of a quail trap with an opening in top for dog to get in for the bait if you dislike to put out poison.

The Farmers Joys.

Now doth the farmer arise before the dawn, and call the hired men and boys before he gets his breeches on. And as they gallop to the barn and throw the horses feed, he shines around the stove and fires her up full speed. And when the last flap jack is down, they start up on the run, and then old Fan and Charlie hike down the rows of corn. Oh, these are jolly days out on the farm; there's not a blamed thing doing from sun up all day long. Not much except to plow, make hay, yank weeds, and fight the festive tater bugs and cut the wheat and fix the fence and hoe and tug and tear your pants and scratch your neck and teach the calves to drink and ring the pigs and milk the cows and think. And cut the hedge and lick the mules and dodge the rain so wet; and watch your life blood ebb away in every drop of sweat.—Ex.

Plenty of Money in Grant.

Grant county farmers are strictly in it this year. Only two or three weeks ago the Burley Tobacco Society paid them over $400,000, as the first installment on their 1907 pooled tobacco, and will shortly, or during the summer, pay them in the neighborhood of $250,000 or more. They have just marketed about 100,000 pounds of wool for nearly $35,000 and the lambs which are beginning to go off it is estimated will bring them in another cool $100,000.—Williamstown Courier.

A Self-computer.

Grocer C. M. Baldon has purchased a gasoline tank which will perform almost any stunt connected with the trade in that article except produce gasoline. While measuring the gasoline it keeps tab, and when the desired quantity has been delivered it has the calculation made and states the amount of money necessary to liquidate the purchase. A very convenient fixture to have.

A Night Rider's Raid.

The funeral of Mrs. Susan Acra, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Clore, several months since, will be preached next Sunday at the Methodist church by the pastor, Rev. S. J. Bradley.

A Fine Pup.

J. F. Blyth purchased of W. Lee Gaines, of Walton, a Pointer pup for $5, and which he considers a fine prospect for the champion bird dog of the county. It is a very smart animal, and catches on to instructions very quick.

Rusticating in the Country.

Master Joe Revill Furnish, of Covington, came out last week to spend his summer's vacation with J. C. Revill and wife. During his stay his principal amusement will be looking after the poultry, keeping the weeds out of the garden, paling the cows and assisting to save the crop of hay.

Tobacco Crop Uneaven.

There are many acres of very fine tobacco in this county, but very few fields are even as they should be. The uneaveness in the growth of the plants is attributed to the continued wet weather which is said came near drowning many of the plants, resulting in a very slow growth up to this time.

High Vine Premiums.

The High Vine Livestock Company, at Walton, will give a first and second premium of the 1908 get of the fine saddle stallion, High Vine. The show will be made at the Florence fair on Friday, and will be one of the best rings during the four days exhibition. Get your colt ready to exhibit.

Plenty of Blackberries.

This part of the country is threatened with a pretty good blackberry crop, which will help out considerably in the absence of apples and other fruits that are used for canning, preserving, &c. The blackberry crop is self-producing, and asks no favors of any except the weather clerk.

Infallible for Piles, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Boils, Fever-Sores, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Corns. 25. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Marriage Aannounced.

Mrs. M. L. Lapthorn has announced the marriage of her daughter Pearl M. to Earl L. Whiting. The wedding took place June 20th, at the home of the bride. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Chas. Sumner Brown. The bride's brother, Walter, and cousin, Annabelle Lapthorn, stood up with the couple. About thirty-five guests attended. They will reside at 5150 Harvard Ave., East Walnut Hills, Cincinnati.

Card of Thanks.

Through the columns of the RECORDER I want to thank each and every one who so kindly contributed to the fund to erect a monument at the grave of my husband, T. L. Utz. This came as a surprise to me, but words fail me when I try to express my gratitude and appreciation to the many friends who have shown such great respect to our departed loved one and such kind consideration of his family.

A Series of Mishaps.

Since the first of this month there have been a series of mishaps in and around Burlington, none of them so bad, however, that there have not been worse.

The first to be overtaken by misfortune was Earl Smith, who got a bone in one arm broken while playing base ball. To pair this accident, Master David Castleman was run over by a horse the same day and one of his arms was disabled. In a day or two after the above occurrences, the residents in the neighborhood of Judge Cason's were startled by a crash that frightened him and his wife and brought the neighbors to their doors to see if his domicile had been dynamited. An investigation as to the cause of the supposed explosion was inaugurated, and it was soon discovered that several feet of the flue on the Judge's kitchen had taken a tumble, a large portion of the lime between the layers of bricks having been removed by the pestiferous little English sparrows, which are so constructed as to make to them employment necessary even unto the destruction of the habitations of man.

The town had not more than got settled down after the above events, until along came the Boone County Deposit Bank with a lockout. Men from the city were called to open the safe, which they accomplished after about 40 hours' labor. But before the safe in the bank permitted a look-in, the RECORDER office was on the list of unfortunates, in that when the press was started to print last week's edition, about half a dozen papers had gone through, when the felt roller was stripped and all was off until the core could be taken to the city and repaired, which was done and the press started again about 3 p. m., about ten hours late. Everything was quiet about the office until the rural mail carriers began making their delivery, and subscribers visiting their boxes and finding no RECORDER's the telephones got busy at once asking, "What's the matter with the RECORDER's?" Last Wednesday's was the worst piece of luck this office has had to deal with for some time.

On Thursday J. F. Blyth took his place in the procession, the team of mules he was driving running off with him twice. Once they showed a disposition to enter Dr. Peddicord's residence and the next time they went through a barbed wire fence and did not lose a hair. The excitement caused by Mr. Blyth and his mules had about subsided, when a hurry call came over the telephone from James E. Smith's, out in the country. The message announced that a horse attached to Mr. Smith's mowing machine was down and he could not get it up. A relief squad was organized instantur, and a quick run was made to Smith's, where the horse was found as reported. After using the knife on the harness and performing a few other stunts the horse was released.

Thursday evening a horse driven by a young lady, who was visiting Rev. Edgar Riley and wife, got its hind foot over the halter with which it was tied in the stable, and, in all probability, the animal would have been killed had it not have been for the timely discovery of its condition by Howard Kirkpatrick, an employe of this office, who assisted by Rev. Riley, rescued the horse from its perilous condition.

Thomas Rice found one of his horses badly snagged in one shoulder and was in town Friday evening hunting the veterinary to relieve him.

A good horse belonging to Wm. Kirkpatrick had been going lame for several days, and last Sunday he discovered an ugly nail was the cause of the trouble. The nail was removed, but he fears the worst.

Geo. E. Baker.

Geo. E. Baker, a son of the late William Baker, of Big Bone, this county, has been deposed as official photographer for the St. Louis Police Department after a service of thirteen years. He had photographed over 5,000 criminals during his service, among them some of the worst this country ever produced. He was an expert at his work, and his work can be found in all parts of the world.

Toe Mashed Off.

One day last week while Harvey McGlasson, of Hebron neighborhood, was spraying one of his horses with a preparation to prevent the flys from annoying it, the animal stepped on one of his toes, mashing the end it of off.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY.

NEW ENGLAND'S VITALITY.

One of the striking features of the revival of business is the great industrial activity in New England. The number of new mills, building or planned, the additions to old mills and factories which are being made, and the general increase in productive resources afford evidence of expanding traffic and greatly augmented wealth. This industrial growth is on a larger scale than it has been for a long time. It is abundant proof that New England is full of vital force, in business and in all productive activities. The greatest gain in the number and capacity of mills is in the textile industry, the field the best part of which superficial observers of business conditions and changes have said the south was fast capturing, says the Cleveland Leader. Southern cotton mills have indeed multiplied rapidly and prospered greatly, but they have merely taken a part of the increase in the vast industry built upon the fiber of the cotton plant. They have not cut down New England's output of cotton goods. They have not even prevented its strong and almost constant expansion. Yankee skill and capital, the experience of New England manufacturers, the prestige of their products and the machinery of distribution in their hands, all unite to defend the cotton industry of that section from injury by competition in the region where the raw material is grown.

Once upon a time, the seasoned gossips of Washington say, you could spot a United States senator at sight. But now, they declare, it is hard to tell a solon of the upper house from a stock broker. It is all in the matter of clothes, says the New York World. The long frock coat, the expansive shirt front and the big, soft black hat of old have yielded to modern business attire. We mention these things because a Washington dispatch stating that 55 members of the house appeared on Monday in wholly new raiment suggests a general thought of the clothes of congress. A British M. P. who visited this country a few years ago remarked that our national legislators did not know how to dress. To which a traveler from home rejoined promptly that they were lucky if they did not know how to dress like members of the house of commons. Be that as it may, what meager particulars we have of the new suits of various representatives indicate that the increased salaries of congress have fallen amid exponents of sartorial progress and good taste. It is likely that all 55 of the freshly clad would pass muster on brightest Fifth avenue.

Sir Robert Bond, former premier of Newfoundland, who has been conspicuous for many years as an opponent of American fishermen who ply their calling in Newfoundland waters, and who has been largely instrumental in inflating the fishing imbroglio to proportions which compelled international consideration and submission to The Hague conference, was badly beaten in the election which took place in Newfoundland. This fact will be accepted as evidence that Newfoundianders are not opposed to American fishermen, and that they find in the presence of the Americans an element of business which makes for the prosperity of the coast fishermen, who not only work for the American fishing vessels, but also dispose of their fish in a legal manner, under the limitations of the law.

Here is one point on which the immigration laws might easily be strengthened. American citizenship is not a right, but a privilege, and it should be so construed, says the New York Tribune. If the country offers exceptional opportunities to the strong and intelligent of other countries, it is worth their while to prove that they are entitled to share in these opportunities. No one can find any legitimate fault with this procedure, except the criminal and the incompetent, and the American people need consult their wishes only in so far as it may be desirable to find out what they would prefer and then act to the contrary.

That wife who made her husband account for every cent she gave him was only getting back at some husbands.

A young woman in the metropolis was saved from serious danger in an accident by her peach-basket hat. But this is a doubtful good, as far as society is concerned. Nothing which tends to make the present millinery monstrosities popular is a thing to be welcomed.

There is no immediate demand for the annexation of Cuba, but there may come a time when it will be necessary for this government to take over that fertile but troubled isle.

TOWNS HARD HIT

BY TORNADOES AND CYCLONES WHICH PASSED THROUGH SEVERAL WESTERN STATES.

20 PERSONS REPORTED KILLED

Path of Wind Through Pana Three Blocks Wide—Buildings Wrecked and Telephone and Telegraph Poles Blown Down.

St. Louis, Mo., July 12.—Tornadoes and waterspouts Sunday and Sunday night added to the immense amount of damage done throughout the west by floods.

Among the cities struck by tornadoes Sunday night were Xenia and Pana, in Central Illinois. The former was hardest hit, and a number of its citizens were fatally injured.

The path of the wind through Pana was three blocks wide. A number of business houses, mills and grain elevators at Abilene, Kan., were totally wrecked Sunday morning by a tornado.

It is reported that the storm cost the lives of 20 persons in various parts of Kansas and Illinois.

The tornado which struck Xenia, Ill., Sunday evening injured and demolished more than a score of dwelling houses. No lives were lost there, owing to the fact that the storm came up at an hour on Sunday when people were at home.

The storm came from the northwest and passed through the center of the city. It lasted but 30 seconds and was followed by a cloudburst. It left many homeless, and timber and debris of homes is so thick over the town that people had difficulty in finding missing members of their families.

The residence of Robert Holman and Edward Davis, and the barns of Frederick Holman and Emmet Colcasure, were blown entirely out of town. Robert Holman was seriously injured internally and his arm was broken.

Mrs. Edgar Tapis and her little daughter also were injured. Many of the best houses here were completely wrecked, including those of Robert Fleming, Emmett Colcasure, Henry Howland, T. B. Howland, J. B. Tully and H. L. Elliott. Mrs. Tully was severely cut by broken glass. All electric light, telephone and telegraph poles were leveled and the city is in darkness.

The home and all buildings on Mr. Tully's farm, one mile from here, were demolished. Other farm buildings and timbers were blown down for many miles around Xenia. Railroad cars were blown from the tracks there. Relief committees have been organized.

No business houses were seriously damaged. The Baptist church steeple was blown off and the building otherwise damaged. The large fruit evaporator was entirely destroyed.

Ortonville, Minn., July 12.—One of the worst tornadoes ever experienced in West Minnesota struck Ortonville Sunday afternoon, coming from the southwest across Big Stone lake and hitting the eastern part of the city. It spent its force on a number of box cars standing on a side track and filled with 26 Italian laborers, three of whom were killed and 19 probably fatally injured. Cars were blown from the track into a nearby building, wrecking it. Several buildings were also blown to bief committees have been organized.

BOMB EXPLODED

At the Belated Fireworks Display of Italian Catholic Church—Three Persons Killed.

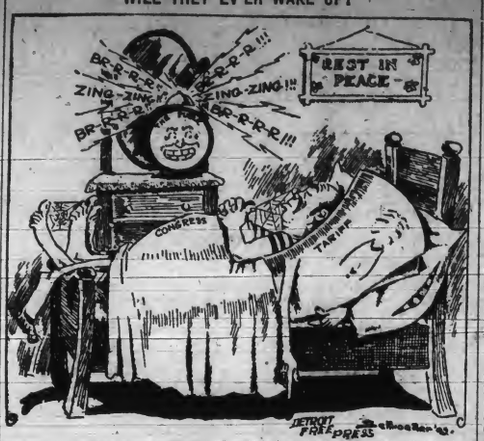
Kansas City, July 12.—Three people were instantly killed by the explosion of a bomb at a postponed celebration of St. John's day by the parishioners of the Holy Rosary Roman Catholic church here Sunday night.

Two policemen were knocked down and stunned. Another man sitting in a window several hundred feet away was so badly injured that he is not expected to recover. Many others received minor injuries from flying fragments of the bomb.

The explosion followed a day of festivity. The fireworks in the early part of the program had been displayed without mishap, and almost every Italian in the city was in or about the lot.

Horror Follows Gas Explosion.

Nezovka, Russia, July 12.—An explosion occurred Sunday in the Makewska mine in the Don district. One hundred and fifty miners were working in the pit at the time. Rescuing parties, after difficult and dangerous work, succeeded in bringing most of the imprisoned men to the surface alive. One of the rescuers was overcome by gas fumes and 24 of the miners were dead when found.



Handcar Struck By Freight Train.

Baileys, Col., July 12.—Nineteen persons riding on a handcar were struck on a curve in Platte canyon, on the Colorado & Southern railroad, Sunday night by a freight train. Two persons were killed, two perhaps fatally injured and 11 seriously hurt.

Shook the Antipodes.

VICTORY FOR THE BOOK TRUST

JOYNER'S ELECTION SO REGARDED BY EDUCATORS.

Freedom for Porto Rico and Philippines and Suffrage for Women Advocated by Delegates.

Denver, Col. — The election of James Yadkin Joyner, superintendent of public instruction of North Carolina, as president of the National Education association is regarded by his supporters as a victory in their fight against any regulation of the prices of school text books. Mr. Joyner was elected over Ben Blewitt, head of the St. Louis schools, and Dr. J. H. Phillips of Birmingham, Ala.

Among the other things done by the association were:

Went on record against the existence of fraternities in high schools in a resolution which condemned such organizations to be opposed to the spirit of democracy.

Decided to "investigate" the feasibility of simplified spelling, but took no decided stand either for or against. In the regular sessions, Edwin G. Dexter, commissioner of education for Porto Rico, offered a resolution urging that congress be asked to confer citizenship on the people of Porto Rico.

Immediately a member from Alabama arose and proposed to tack on a little suggestion about freedom for the Filipinos. He said they had been nurtured by the eagle of freedom going on ten years now and thus far the only civilizing influence they had felt was the water cure.

Miss Mary Shirley of California then declared:

"Now if there is going to be any freedom advocated here, I want to make another amendment. If the savages of Porto Rico and of the Philippines are going to get support here, I want the voice of this association to be raised in behalf of those who deserve it most—the women of the United States."

Irwin Shepherd of Winona, Minn., was re-elected secretary; A. H. Chamberlain of California, was re-elected treasurer.

FLOOD DANGER IS OVER.

Conditions in Missouri and Kansas Improve as the Waters Recede —Damage $1,500,000.

Kansas City, Mo. — The flood situation in Missouri and Kansas is gradually improving. At Kansas City the Kansas and Missouri rivers both were still rising, but the prediction is that they will begin falling to-day without causing damage here.

Springfield, Mo., on the Jordan river, and Ottawa, Kan., on the Marais des Cygnes river, were the points where most suffering was experienced yesterday. The streets were buried under ten to fifteen feet of water.

The body of R. A. Dameron of Colfax, Ill., who was drowned at Springfield, Mo., on Tuesday, has not been recovered. Eight have been drowned and the damage is estimated at $1,500,000.

Tuberculosis from Milk.

Stockholm. — American investigations of the responsibility for the persistent spread of the disease among human beings, particularly children, were officially reported Thursday to the eighth international tuberculosis conference, in session here, by Nathan Straus.

The paper by the New York philanthropist was presented by Dr. Arthur Randolph Green, medical director of the Straus pasteurized milk work, and one of the American delegates. It disclosed for the first time the overwhelming evidence gathered by the American investigators to show the responsibility of milk from tuberculous cows for the infection of human beings with tuberculosis.

Trying to Avert Mine Strike.

St. Louis.—T. L. Lewis, president, and the officers of three southwestern districts, representing Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas of the United Mine Workers of America are in session with the executive board of the Kansas coal mine operators in an effort to avert a strike of 32,000 miners. W. D. Ryan of Kansas City, commissioner of the operators, gave the operators' side of the dispute, which was caused by a walkout of 100 miners in Osage county, Kansas.

Can't Be Used But May Aid Prosecution—Some Are from Mrs. McNamara.

Bloomington, Ill.—That Col. Snell neglected to destroy letters that he received from women has developed in the announcement by lawyers for the disinherited son that a large number of spicy missives were located in an unused closet in the old mansion located in the northern section of Clinton.

The old man doubtless received these letters while he was an occupant of the homestead a few years before his death. The letters will be examined by the lawyers for the contestant but it is feared that they will not be of any value due to the decision of the supreme court when the case was sent back for another trial.

The upper court took occasion to declare such letters inadmissible, particularly to those credited to Mabel Snell McNamara and to the wife of Rev. Hamilton. It was held that letters received by the old man could not be construed as affecting his mentality.

Some of the newly-discovered letters are in the handwriting of Mabel Snell McNamara upon whom the millionaire lavished thousands of dollars.

REBELLION IN COLOMBIA..

Opponents of President Reyes, Who is in London, Proclaim a New Ruler.

Bogota, Colombia.—A portion of the army stationed at Barranquilla took arms on Sunday last against the Colombian government, made prisoners of the municipal authorities and proclaimed Gonzalez Valencia as president.

Gen. Jorge Holguin, who is acting president in the absence of Gen. Rafael Reyes, was strongly denounced and the gendarmerie were driven out of the city, later arriving at Cartagena. The revolutionists took possession of the town and several steamers on Magdalena river.

Gen. Holguin has declared martial law throughout the country. Gonzalez Valencia has disavowed the rising and is coming to Bogota.

Gen. Perdomo left Honda with six steamers having on board 3,000 men and 20 pieces of artillery. The objective point of the troops is Barranquilla.

THAW NEARER FREEDOM.

Decision of Justice Gaynor May Mean the Elimination of Jerome from the Case.

New York.—Harry K. Thaw and his attorneys won a second victory in his fight for freedom Friday when Supreme Court Justice Gaynor denied the motion recently made before him for the removal of the Thaw insanity hearing from Westchester county to New York county.

The decision gives special satisfaction to Thaw and his lawyers, for it is taken to mean the elimination from the case of District Attorney Jerome, who originally prosecuted Thaw so vigorously. Mr. Jerome recently withdrew from the hearing at White Plains.

Fine Miss Lonsdorf $2,000.

Trenton, N. J.—Miss Camille Lonstorf was fined $2,000 by Judge Cross in the United States district court here, after she had pleaded non vult to the charge of smuggling.

Miss Lonstorf was represented by a lawyer, and her fine was immediately paid. The young woman with her mother and sister had been abroad and brought into this country about $2,500 worth of furs.

Her defense was that she did not know that the furs were dutiable.

Immediately after paying the fine they left Trenton.

Woman Poisoned and Shot.

PASS TARIFF BILL

ALDRICH—PAYNE MEASURE IS ADOPTED BY THE SENATE.

FINAL VOTE IS 45 TO 34

Senator Beveridge in Closing Debate Declares Republican Party Has Not Kept Promise of Downward Revision—Disputed by Aldrich.

Washington.—By a vote of 45 to 34 the senate Thursday night passed the Aldrich-Payne tariff bill.

President Taft arrived in Washington Friday and at once began a conference with leaders to rush the measure through.

The vote on the bill was:

Yeas—Aldrich, Borah, Bourne, Bradley, Brandegee, Briggs, Bulkley, Burnham, Burrows, Burton, Carter, Clark (Wyo.), Crane, Depew, Dick, Dixon, Dupont, Elkins, Flint, Frye, Gallinger, Gamble, Guggenheim, Hale, Heyburn, Johnson (N. D.), Kean, Lorimer, Jones, McCumber, McEnery, Nixon, Oliver, Page, Penrose, Perkins, Piles, Scott, Smith (Mich.), Smoot, Stephenson, Sutherland, Warner, Warren, Wetmore —45.

Nays—Bacon, Bailey, Bankhead, Beveridge, Bristow, Brown, Burkett, Chamberlain, Clapp, Crawford, Culberson, Cummins, Daniel, Dolliver, Fletcher, Foster, Frazier, Gore, Hughes, Johnston (Ala.), La Follette, McLaurin, Martin, Money, Nelson, Newlands, Overman, Owen, Shively, Simmons, Smith (S. D.), Stone, Taliaferro, Taylor—34.

The failure of the senate to keep the promise made to the people by the Republican party respecting a revision of the tariff downward was the theme of Senator Beveridge as the debate was drawing to a close.

"Our votes," he said, "shall be cast in harmony with our party's pledges as voiced by our party's leader and the nation's president."

Senator Beveridge was answered by Senator Aldrich, who said he had often seen men interpret their own judgment as the judgment of their party.

"The Republican party is a party of majorities," he added, "and the views of the majority in matters of legislation control party policies. The senator from Indiana does not speak for the Republican party. He has no right to call here the name of the president of the United States in support of any suggestion which he has made."

Senator Aldrich declared that the pending bill was a fulfillment of the party's pledge. If senators wished to vote against the bill, he said, they should not attempt to speak for their party.

As it passed the senate the bill contains almost 400 paragraphs. The senate made 840 amendments to the house provisions, many of which were added Thursday when the senate sat continuously from ten o'clock in the morning until 11:18 at night, stopping neither for luncheon nor dinner.

The most interesting occurrences of the sitting were the adoption of amendments by Senator Bradley of Kentucky and Senator Curtis of Kansas, the former exempting tobacco "in the hand" from the internal revenue tax of six cents a pound, and the latter placing a countervailing duty on crude petroleum shipped from countries which impose duty on oil importations from the United States. The action on tobacco was a real surprise as the senate has frequently refused to remove the tax.

Senator La Follette's tariff commission amendment was rejected by a viva voce vote. Asking that they be considered as a single amendment, Senator La Follettee offered a large number of changes in the woolen schedule, substituting ad valorem duties for specific rates. They were voted down.

Upon motion of Senator Aldrich, the vice-president announced the senate conferees as follows: Senators Aldrich, Burrows, Penrose, Hale, Cullom, Republicans, and Daniel, Money and Bailey, Democrats.

Elks Throng Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Members of the Order of Elks from every state in the union have arrived in Los Angeles for the convention of the grand lodge, which opens Sunday and continues for a week. Every train brings more delegates and visitors and they are met and cared for by former residents of their state or city. To entertain guests from Illinois 5,000 former residents of that state have formed the Illinois Association of Southern California.

Sues Harriman for Finger.

New York. — Willis Gillow, a carpenter, has brought suit for $10,000 against E. H. Harriman for the loss of his little finger while working at the latter's house at Turners, Orange county. He sues on the ground that Harriman did not provide a safe place for work.

700,000 Children to Help.

New York.—Seven hundred thousand New York school children, although 4,000 miles from San Francisco, will assist in the opening exercises of the Portala historic festival to be held there beginning October 19.

TIRED ALL THE TIME.

Languor, listlessness, dullness of spirits are often due to kidney disorders. Pain and weakness in the back, sides and hips, headaches, dizziness, urinary disorders are sure signs that the kidneys need immediate attention.

Delay is dangerous. Alonso Adams, Osceola, Iowa, says: "My kidneys failed me. I suffered awful pain and was so weak I could not work, and often had to take to bed. I was dull and exhausted nearly all the time. I consulted doctors and used medicines, but only Doan's Kidney Pills helped me. Soon I was permanently cured."

Doctor—Yes, I believe so.

Old Maid (resignedly)—O, then, doctor, you needn't call again.

Mother Bird Drove Boy Away.

People on Main street, Dallastown, Pa., witnessed an amusing sight the other morning, when a curious small boy who climbed into a maple tree for a closer inspection of a nest of young robins was put to flight by an angry mother bird. Discovered by the old bird after he had clambered into the tree the youngster was savagely attacked. The bird pecked viciously at his bare hands and face, causing him to retreat to the ground, and then driving him home.

Next Be...

A certain young minister in Philadelphia, recently ordained, is still very nervous and sometimes his remarks do not convey exactly the meaning he intended. A few Sundays ago he rose, fumbled with the papers on his desk, blushed, and then said:

"My Friends: I—I am sorry to say that I have lost the notes for my sermon, and I therefore cannot deliver it. I will have to do the next best thing, therefore, and read a few chapters from the Bible!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Hospitals a Benefit to Property.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has recently concluded an investigation, which shows that 67.5 per cent. of the tuberculosis sanatoria and hospitals of the United States have been a benefit to the property and health of the communities in which they are located. In the case of more than 62 per cent. of the sanatoria the presence of the institutions has helped to increase the assessed value of surrounding property.

Burning String in the Sick-Room.

Months spent in a sick room have taught me many things for the comfort of an invalid, one of the simplest and most effective of which is burning a string to purify the atmosphere.

Take a soft string and stick it with a pin to the back of a chair; after lighting, blow it out gently, leaving the tiny spark, which will create smoke enough to make a decided difference in the atmosphere.—Harper's Bazar.

ORIGIN

Of a Famous Human Food.

The story of the great discoveries or inventions is always of interest.

An active brain worker who found himself hampered by lack of bodily strength and vigor and could not carry out the plans and enterprises he knew how to conduct, was led to study various foods and their effects upon the human system. In other words, before he could carry out his plans he had to find a food that would carry him along and renew his physical and mental strength.

He knew that a food which was a brain and nerve builder (rather than a mere fat maker) was universally needed. He knew that meat with the average man does not accomplish the desired results. He knew that the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centers is made from Albumen and Phosphate of Potash obtained from food. Then he started to solve the problem.

Careful and extensive experiments evolved Grape-Nuts, the now famous food. It contains the brain and nerve building food elements in condition for easy digestion.

The result of eating Grape-Nuts daily is easily seen in a marked sturdiness and marked activity of the brain and nervous system, making it a pleasure for one to carry on the daily duties without fatigue or exhaustion.

Grape-Nuts food is in no sense a stimulant but is simply food which renews and replaces the daily waste of brain and nerves.

Its flavour is charming and being fully and thoroughly cooked at the factory it is served instantly with cream.

The signature of the brain worker spoken of, C. W. Post, is to be seen on each genuine package of Grape-Nuts.

Summary of Matters of Special Interest to Our Readers

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Covington Council, After Much Controversy, Decides to Annex Latonia, Which Will Give Greater Covington a Population of 70,000.

Covington, Ky.—Council committee of the whole of Covington decided, after much controversy and by a vote of 10 to 6, to annex Latonia. The city solicitor was instructed to prepare an ordinance providing for the annexation, which will go to the aldermen and then to the mayor. When that official approves it the annexation will have been consummated and Greater Covington will spring into being. The population of the city will then be 70,000 in round numbers and its tax duplicate will have materially increased. In territory the city will be twice as great as it is at present. Mr. Webner of the auditing company which has examined the books of Latonia under direction of the Covington council, was present and went over his report in detail. It shows a bonded indebtedness of $308,500, exclusive of the school bonds, amounting to $19,500. A floating indebtedness of $63,000 was reported.

BITTER WAR TO BE WAGED

By State Board of Health Against Distribution of Tuberculin Milk.

Louisville, Ky.—Under the terms of a proclamation issued by the state board of health bitter war will be waged against distribution of tuberculin milk in the state of Kentucky. The edict is state-wide in its scope, and provides that all of the cows in the state shall be put to the tuberculin test. It is further provided that all cows brought into the state shall be admitted only when a certificate is shown from the health officer of the territory from which the cattle are imported, stating that the cattle had been tuberculin tested and found to be free from all germs. The edict also states that these cattle are liable to inspection at any time by local health officers and inspectors of the bureau of animal industry. Provision is also made for the destroying of all cattle found to be infected.

NIGHT RIDERS THREATEN

Tobacco Growers in Hopkins County Who Keep Out of the Association.

Madisonville, Ky.—The Madisonville Journal is in receipt of a letter addressed from a camp of night riders at Princeton, threatening tobacco growers in Hopkins county if they keep out of the association. It says "Every man who stays out of the association in Hopkins county may depend upon getting his back skinned and fire stuck to his barn. We want to say to any man that intends to buy tobacco in Hopkins county that we have got plenty of hemp rope and bullets, and you may depend on having it used on you.—Night Riders, 300 Strong."

BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

Adopts Resolution Condemning Postal Savings Bank System.

Maysville, Ky.—The convention of the Ninth district group of the Kentucky Bankers' association was held here, and 50 delegates from all over the state were in attendance. The meeting was important in many ways, but especially in that it is the first time in Kentucky that a concerted movement has been made by bankers in opposition to the postal savings bank system. A resolution was unanimously adopted opposing the movement, and condemning it in severe terms.

Paducah, Ky.—With the election of officers the Kentucky State Bar association adjourned to meet next year at a place to be selected later by the executive committee. Officers elected: President, Charles W. Metcalf; secretary, R. A. McDowell; treasurer, John K. Todd; vice presidents, E. Newton, W. Utely; Clarence W. Finn, James Garnet, Van B. Norman, D. Gray Falconer, T. P. Carothers, H. H. Tye.

Covington, Ky.—Mrs. Sarah Devou, 81, one of the wealthiest women in this part of the country, died at her country place, Devou Hill, west of Covington. She was the relict of William Ogden Devou, who, at the time of his death six years ago, conducted a large wholesale millinery business in Cincinnati.

Lexington, Ky.—Rev. E. G. B. Mann, of the First Methodist Episcopal Church South, of this city, is now the sole owner of the Central Methodist Advocate, having purchased the interest of Rev. J. Q. Wreslend, of Louisville. The paper is to be published from this city.

Louisville, Ky.—Ceremonies unsurpassed in solemnity took place before a large audience in the Sacred Heart academy, when 16 young women, ranging in age from 18 years to 23, renounced the world and took the veil.

A Day's Doings in Kentucky

Lexington, Ky.—The stables of J. P. Ross, John Rodegap and J. L. Beesom have returned to the Kentucky association course from Latonia.

Louisville, Ky.—Frank Fehr, the millionaire brewer, was fined $10 and costs in police court for violation of the speed laws regulating automobiles.

Sharpsburg, Ky.—After a courtship of 50 years Brum Barnes and Miss Brach Crouch were married here at the home of the bridegroom. The bride is an accomplished woman and wealthy.

Paducah, Ky.—Federal Judge Walter Evans made an order perpetuating the injunction of the East Telephone Co. against the city of Paducah, restraining the latter from interfering with the operation of the company.

Louisville, Ky.—Thirty thousand dollars in premiums will be distributed by the Kentucky State Fair association at its next show, according to the announcement made by the state board of agriculture following its meeting.

Louisville, Ky.—With the announced intention of "bucking the Ice Trust" the City Ice Co. filed articles of incorporation with a capitalization of $100,000. The incorporators are Harry M. Brennan, Charles J. O'Connor and John Meyer.

Louisville, Ky.—Dr. William B. Doherty, of this city, was appointed a member of the board of trustees of the Louisville free public library to succeed Arthur Granville Langham, who died after a surgical operation in Seymour, Ind., July 4.

Lexington, Ky.—J. C. Norwood, director of the state geological survey, is preparing to send out several squads to points in eastern and western portions of Kentucky to do investigating and research work, and to make topographical maps in the coal fields.

Lexington, Ky.—Benjamin Simcox, 77, veteran of the Crimean war and the civil war, died at his home here. As a member of the 47th Crown regiment he was in several of the noted engagements of the Crimean war, among them the famous charge at Balaklava.

Louisville, Ky.—After nine years' work, interrupted periodically by false announcements that the big plant was ready to be put in operation, the Louisville Water Co. began its preliminary preparation for turning on the water for the first time in the new $5,000,000 filter plant.

Frankfort, Ky.—The will of the late Mrs. Lena B. McQuown, wife of Judge Lewis McQuown, was filed for probate in the county court here. All of the property is left to Judge McQuown for his life and it is to be divided equally between her nieces, Lena E. Smoot and Mary E. Lucas.

Louisville, Ky.—"It's all over; I cannot stand it," was the moaning cry of Walter J. Honaker, member of a big Fourth avenue shoe firm, as the body of his wife, found floating in the river, was borne into an undertaking establishment. Honaker fired a bullet into his heart and fell dead.

Lexington, Ky.—C. O. Lecompt, of Eminence, Ky., won the trophy for the high general average in the Fayette Gun club's tournament, 336 out of 400. R. W. Clancy, of Chicago, stood second, with 371. Woolfolk Henderson, of this city, and Homer Clark, of Upper Alton, Ill., led the amateurs, with 378 each.

Louisville, Ky.—Ossification of the arteries caused the death here of Col. Attilla Cox, president of the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railroad, director of the Louisville & Nashville, chairman of the board of directors of the Columbia Finance and Trust Co. and one of the most widely-known financiers of the state.

Louisville, Ky.—For the purpose of making extensive tests of milk, containing tubercular bacilli, which is said to be served to customers in this city, the local health department established a "stable of guinea pigs, rabbits and pigeons," on which tests will be made.

Lexington, Ky.—Prof. J. J. Hooper, of the agricultural department of the State university, will send 20 students to the State fair at Louisville, to compete for the $50 prize offered by Commissioner of Agriculture M. C. Rankin for the best judges of live stock. The prize will be equally divided by the four students ranking best, and these four will be sent to the Live Stock Exposition in Chicago in December, as a team from the state university, to compete with the teams from the universities of Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Canadian institutions in live stock judging.

Lexington, Ky.—During the past four years a number of persons charged with illegal registration and voting at local elections were indicted at the behest of the republican organization. All such cases remaining on the circuit court docket were dismissed or filed away.

Covington, Ky.—The police here were notified to be on the lookout for four boys who escaped from the Greendale (Ky.) reformatory, near Lexington. One of the boys, Theodore Parks, lived in Covington.

THE JOY RIDERS.

TWO SETS OF LAWS

ROOSEVELT IDEA OF "RUDE AND PRIMITIVE JUSTICE."

Immunity for the Sugar Trust with Its Millions—Unlawful Imprisonment for Small Malefactors Pronounced Innocent.

"No criminal, high or low, whom we can reach, will receive immunity," shrieked Mr. Roosevelt in his Memorial day speech at Indianapolis in 1907.

"As a matter of course we shall punish any criminal whom we can convict under the law."

"Wherever evil-doers can be, they shall be brought to justice."

"The power of the nation must be exerted to stop crimes of cunning no less than crimes of violence."

At the time Mr. Roosevelt uttered these inspiring sentiments the sugar trust was guilty of violating the interstate commerce law and the Sherman anti-trust law and was stealing money with both hands from the United States government.

George H. Earle, receiver for the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company, complained to Mr. Roosevelt and to his attorney-general of the violation of the anti-trust law, and although "no criminal, high or low, whom we can reach, will receive immunity," the administration refused to take any action in regard to Mr. Earle's complaint. Mr. Bonaparte now explains the Roosevelt policy on the ground that the complainant had failed to do the government's work in clinching the proof. "Had Mr. Earle offered me any evidence that involved the public interest, I should have acted," he says; yet the sugar trust comes into court and settles for millions in a private suit brought under the Sherman law rather than allow the trial to proceed. The testimony that forced the settlement was the very testimony that Mr. Earle offered to the Roosevelt administration.

What a different picture of Roosevelitan methods presented itself when the United States supreme court decided that confederate notes were not counterfeit money! In spite of this decision and of the protests of Attorney-General Knox, Mr. Roosevelt refused to release from prison a man who had been convicted without due process of law, boasting that he was administering "rude and primitive justice," and that regardless of the court this man was "undoubtedly a scoundrel and morally a criminal."

There was plenty of Roosevelitan justice for the man that passed confederate notes, but none for the criminal sugar trust with its millions of capital and assets.

For Cheaper Raw Materials.

It is a mistake to assume that American consumers are the only clamorers for lower duties in certain tariff schedules. Manufacturers, giving allegiance to both political parties have joined in the demand in order to increase the export market.

Herein we have one of the main reasons for lower duties on certain raw materials in the Payne bill. Manufacturers, with market conditions at their fingers' ends, know that cheaper raw materials will enable a further invasion of foreign markets.

"And don't forget, either," cautions a Kansas paper, "that it was the Republican party that said the tariff must be revised by its friends." If the Republican party said that it seems to be making good with one campaign pledge, at least.—Kansas City Star.

No Inquisition!

We do not believe the country will continue long to look with favor upon these efforts to increase the power of the general government over private business. There is no doubt that what we need is not a commissioner of corporations, poring over the records of private business and inserting his interfering figure wherever he sees a chance, but laws, known to all men, the violation of which can pretty generally be punished without searching the books of the companies for evidence.—Philadelphia Record.

WEST MUST THROW OFF YOKE.

Time to End the Domination of the New England Representatives at Washington.

The total area of the six New England states is less than 70,000 square miles and the total population is about 5,000,000. Six western states—Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Indiana—have more than 350,000 square miles and a population of 18,500,000. How does the influence of these six western states compare with the New England influence in framing the present tariff law?

Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana have Cummins, Dolliver, La Follette and Beveridge on guard. But what is their influence compared with that of the New England group? These western senators are voicing the sentiments of the really representative American states. But what headway are they making?

The great west and middle west could put New England in an obscure corner, geographically, and still have an American empire left. Yet New England continues to assume that all real statecraft, all tariff wisdom, all loyalty to American ideals are vested in its senatorial representatives.

When will the west throw off the New England yoke?

Unappreciated Warnings.

Warnings of political retribution such as Senator Cummins addressed to Aldrich and the other members of the tariff "hog combine" slide easily off the backs of senators who have their local machines under good control and their legislatures in their breeches pocket. Fancy frightening Hale or Lodge in that way! It is in the doubtful states, and particularly those of the west which are so filled with disgust at the threatened betrayal of tariff revision, that the prophecies of the Iowa senator will come true, if at all. But this prospect does not in the least disturb the over-lords of the senate. They have much tariff goods laid up for many years, and are saying to their souls, "Eat, drink and be merry." Aldrich indignantly said: "I am responsible to my constituents alone." He need have no concern for the welfare of the party at large. Provided Rhode Island stays Republican, what matters it if Illinois or Iowa be lost? Aldrich is not asking either of the latter states to keep him in the senate. But there is one man who is bound to take notice that the country is somewhat larger than Rhode Island, and whose duty is to consider the interests of the whole people. He is the president of the United States.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Policy of Deceit.

The Republicans have made a spectacular show of changing the old law here and there, but in nearly every essential item the return always is to Dingley. In response to a great outcry against the Payne increase of the tax on such necessaries as gloves and hosiery, the senate graciously proposes to retain the highly protective Dingley rates. Payne kept the Dingley rates on wines and liquors. The senate appeals to a popular sentiment by raising them. The proposed increase from $8 a dozen on champagne to $9.60 will certainly cause no grumbling among the champagne makers of New York state.

A Makeshift Revision.

It is evident that such tariff revision as we are to get from the present extraordinary session of congress will be a temporary makeshift, satisfactory to nobody but its direct beneficiaries, who are a small minority of the people of the United States.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

We were told that the trusts must be slain or that they would rule the government. What we see is that the trusts are stronger than when they were attacked, and that the law is in the mire. It has been perverted from the regulation of morals and the protection of liberty to an entanglement with the intricacies of economic competitions, which it is not fitted to control. It has been a bitter and bumiliating experience, and the profits of it are all to be reaped. Thus far the dividends have been solely of disaster and disgrace.—Exchange.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Shinkle and daughter, Miss Lydia, of Covington, arrived here last week to spend the summer months, and will be guests of Mrs. Alice Booth.

Walton is having a chataugua. The meeting began Tuesday night and will continue until Saturday night, with afternoon and night sessions. First-class lecturers are on the program.

Dr. H. C. Black purchased a fine horse in Cincinnati the first part of last week. It is one of the fastest horses in this vicinity, and it will take a good one to throw dust in the doctor's face now.

G. W. Kipp, of Cincinnati, was here the first part of last week, the guest of his father, Jacob Kipp. He has a good position with the W. T. Johnson Supply House, where he has been for several years.

George Hughes and daughter, Miss Sarah, of Hume, Illinois, and Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Shaw, of Cincinnati, were here last week, attending the funeral of their relative, Mrs. Amanda Hughes, who died at her home at Richwood.

The members of the Walton Baptist Sunday School enjoyed the pleasures of a delightful picnic at the Florence fair grounds, last Saturday, in which the Sunday Schools of Erlanger, Union and some other places participated.

Chas. Chambers, who is professor of penmanship in the public schools of Covington, is taking a summer course in a Chicago college in stenography, with a view to perfecting himself in short hand, and he writes his parents, Theodore F. Chambers and wife, that he is well pleased with the progress he is making.

Miss Helen Furquarson, of Erlanger, was the guest of friends here last week, coming up to attend the tenth birthday anniversary of Miss Edna White, who entertained a host of her little friends with a jolly party in honor of the occasion. Miss Edna received many presents from friends in token of their love for her, and to commemorate the happy occasion.

Married—Robt. E. Boyer and Miss Lillian K. Conner, a young couple of Florence, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, last Friday morning, at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. J. B. Harris. The young couple were accompanied by the young lady's father and after congratulations the young couple returned to their home at Florence where they were given a warm reception by their many friends.

The proposed purchase of the undertaking and livery establishment of C. Scott Ghambers by Stanley Crouch, of Petersburg, and Walter Lancaster, of Grant county, was declared off last week, owing to some disagreement on some of the details. Mr. Chambers was not anxious to sell, but the young men wanted to purchase the business and were willing to give the price, but some of the other matters could not be agreed upon.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church spent a delightful day at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Hopkins in Kenton county, last Saturday where they are annually entertained in July. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins always make their guests at home in such a delightful manner that a visit to their hospitable home is an event long to be pleasantly remembered. The guests on Saturday had full possession of the beautiful home, and a most appetizing dinner was spread at the noon hour.

The young folks who have been enjoying the pleasures of the art of terpsichore at the opera house during the past several months, have disbanded for the season. They had been holding weekly meetings and the music was furnished by a pianola. They had a delightful time because the participants were composed of excellent ladies and gentlemen, who know how to make each other happy by pleasant deportment toward each other. The closing meeting was celebrated by a most enjoyable lunch.

The Kenton county pooled wool was received and paid for at Walton, last Thursday. Sabiel & Co., of Louisville, were the purchasers at 30½ and 24½ cents per pound, and it averaged about 28 cents. O. S. Watts, of Walton, and W. B. Dale, of Louisville, received the wool and made the shipment. The price at which the Huntington Produce Co., was to have taken the wool was 34½ cents a pound, and the $1,000 paid on the wool by them will be subjected by the pool to make up the discrepency in the selling price as far as it will go.

Geo. B. Powers, one of our prominent farmers, has been named as the Pooling Officer of the Society of Equity, and will shortly make a canvass of the tobacco growers with a view to get them to pool the growing crop of tobacco on the terms set forth by the State Board of Control. The results of the pool have been eminently satisfactory to our tobacco growers, and the proposition to pool the present crop is meeting with very favorable consideration. Mr. Powers is an excellent man for the position of Pooling Agent, and he will do his best to make the movement a success.

Walton Lodge of Odd Fellows held a most enjoyable public meeting last Saturday night, the object being a public installation of officers elect for the ensuing term. Elegant refreshments of all kinds were served in abundance, and the attendance was very large. Officers were installed as follows: Ed Fullilove, N. G.; W. C. Moxley, V. G.; H. C. Diers, Treas.; S. L. Edwards, Sect.; Taylor Grubbs, R. S. N. G.; N. W. Welsh, L. S. N. G.; S. W. Beverly, Conductor; John Allen, Warden; W. H. Tillman, R. S. V. G.; Charles McCarty, L. S. V. G.; Ernest McElroy, I. G.; John Florence, R. S. S.; Arthur Smith, L. S. S.; Jas. Bolington, H. and C. The lodge is in fine working order and a prosperous condition.

The Union League of Christian Endeavor will hold its usual monthly meeting at the Christian Church, Friday evening, July 23d. The following program will be rendered: Song. Subject, "Why some men and women do not succeed in life," Josh. 1:1-9; leader—Mamie Northcutt; Song; Invocation; Song; Essay or Talk, Chas. Jones; Subject, "Idle Habits"; Essay or Talk, Miss Katie Bentz, subject, "Faithfulness"; Solo Miss Queen Tillman; Talk by Rev. J. B. Harris, subject, "Injustice"; Talk or Essay by J. W. Cross, subject, "What is Success?" Solo, Mary Jane Houston; Talk or Essay by Wayne D. Byland, subject, "Lack of Perseverance;" Duett, Myrtle Murphy and George Grubbs; Business; Song; Benediction.

Everett T. Gatchell, who, many years ago, taught school in this locality, committed suicide at Washington, D. C., June 27th, by drowning himself in a bath crib, his body with a heavy stone tied to his neck, being found at the bottom of the crib. The deceased was a colonel in the Kentucky militia, and was appointed to the pension office from Walton. He left a note to a companion in which he said: "I am tired of life. Am worn and weary, and old and poor; thank you for your attentive kindness. Don't believe my arm will ever get well. You are truly one of God's annointed. Wish I had been such a man." Mr. Gatchell is well remembered by our older citizens, and had quite a number of friends here. He made himself famous by a humorous report of the Democratic Congressional convention held at the Walton Baptist church in 1871, when the convention broke up in a row and pistols were drawn, and it looked as if there would be bloodshed, but an adjournment prevented any serious difficulties. Mr. Gatchell reported the affair to a Cincinnati paper under the head of "Headquarters of Rebeldom, which is Walton, the Cross Roads of Kentucky." The article, about two columns, was extensively copied in the press of the country. The convention was afterwards convened at Covington, and Thomas Lovely Jones was made the nominee for Congress.

Sale of School Bonds.

Bids will be received by me for the sale of $4,000.00 worth of Graded Common School Bonds, issued by the Board of Trustees of the Bellevue Graded Common School District. Said Bonds are in denominations of $100.00 each payable on or before 20 years from date, and draw 6 per cent interest. All bids must be in by July 24th, 1909.

CHAS. MAURER,
Chairman Board of Trustees.
Grant, Ky., July 12, 1909.

To The Public.

The people of Boone-co. are hereby informed that since the verdict in the Boone County Court by which my wife was found to be of sound mind, she has been driven from one place to another and turned out of house after house, and has continuously shown her irresponsibility. In two trials at Burlington, when trying to do the best I could for her I was turned down; so were my attorneys; so were the good people of Walton who testified as to her condition, notwithstanding I had had her in care of various sanitariums, doctors and nurses for two years and had otherwise done everything possible for her, notwithstanding all her neighbors and friends in Walton and the jury her condition, notwithstanding Dr. Furnish, Dr. Bagby and Dr. Jones told the jury she was uncurrably insane the jury found otherwise. Her two brothers, free from any of the great care and suffering which I had undergone for more than three years because of her condition, appeared in the trial and as far as possible interfered in the proceeding. From their conduct and from statements made by her attorneys to the jury, which were permitted, the jury was doubtless led to believe that they would see after her. Next morning after the trial, by six o'clock they left Burlington and left her and she has been practically without their help in any way since that time. Excepting a few weeks that she stayed in Burlington, she has been a wanderer in Erlanger and other cities. At no time has she stayed more than a week or ten days in a place. She has gone in and to places not suitable and to which she would not go if responsible. What desperate efforts have been made to conceal the facts and her true condition from the public will never be known. Co-operating with the trustee, T. J. Grifith, and his attorneys, I have tried to protect her from harm; but as her insanity has from the first developed an aversion to both myself and her children, it has been impossible to do much. On Wednesday, June 23d, she went to the Longview Asylum Annex by herself with practically no clothing, where she has since been and now is. She has been provided with considerably more than One Hundred Dollars per month. She has not been allowed a drop of liquor in the Annex, and is in good mental condition that the attendants and inmates will not tolerate her longer, and the authorities this day gave me notice that they would give her over to the police at 12 o'clock today. I caused this notice to be taken to her two brothers, and they declined to go to her rescue or relief. I have sent Mr. Vest there, but he (or any of us) is powerless to do anything, in view of the verdict. I have tried not to complain, but I feel that great injustice has been done me and her. I was and am willing to do all I can to care for her, but it must be as an insane woman. Under the circumstances it is up to the County Officials and the public to institute another inquest. I positively will not do it. After going through what I have, I will not have my motives further questioned. I publish this in order that the public may have some correct idea of the facts as they really exist.

C. L. GRIFFITH.

TAYLOR-GLORE.

On Wednesday evening, July 7th, at 7:30 p. m., Rev. C. J. Casey pronounced the words that united Mr. Elmer Taylor and Miss Ollve Glore in the holy bonds of matrimony, at the home of the groom's father, Mr. Henry Taylor, who is well known in Boone county. The rooms were beautifully decorated with sweet peas, daisies nasturtiums and asparagus. An elgant lunch of ice cream, cake and nuts was served. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white net over silk, decorated with crochet Irish lace in filet design inserted between rows of Valenciennes and Point DeSplain lace. She wore a tiara of sweet peas with a spray of forget-me-nots with veil, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. The groom wore black with white tie and waistcoat. Miss Ida Graham, of Alden Bridge, La., who gave the bride away, wore a white net waist trimmed with Valenciennes lace with white linen skirt, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The sister of the groom, Miss Madge Taylor, wore a gown of pink silk mull with simple decorations of lace. The bride is a beautiful young lady, of Louisville, Kentucky, and the groom is one of the best young men in Dearborn county, Indiana. They will be at home to their many friends after July 15th, at their home 127 E. Brandies street, Louisville, where Mr. Taylor has a lucrative position as an electrician. Only the immediate family and a few of the very intimate friends were present at the marriage. A number of beautiful and useful presents were received. We join with the host of friends in wishing them a long and pleasant voyage on the matrimonial sea. C. W. SHANKS.

Bargains in Wire Fencing, Sewer Pipe and Portland Cement.

We have just received a car load of the American Wire Fencing, the best in use for all uses on the farm, including poultry fencing. Also a car load of Sewer Pipe and Portland Cement. These goods were bought before the rise in price, and we can sell them cheaper than ever sold in Walton. If you need any of these goods it will pay you to write us or telephone us, and we will give you full information, and quote you prices that cannot be duplicated elsewhere.

EDWARDS BROS., Walton, Ky.

Clarence Rector, who lives a mile south west of Burlington, was standing in his door at the beginning of the electrical storm, last Monday afternoon. About the time the storm was at its worst he closed the door and went back in the house, where he had been only a few minutes when lightning struck the door just below the knob he held. No serious damage was done, but the family was frightened badly for a few minutes.

HEADACHE AND EYESTRAIN

About one-half the cases who have called on me the past two weeks came because of headache. Although their vision was fairly good, they felt that eyestrain must be at the bottom of the trouble, and came to have the cause removed. GLASSES WILL POSITIVELY CURE HEADACHES, even when long standing, is positively proven by us every day.

HATHAWAY.

The blackberry crop is short.
Some tobacco has been topped.
Hay harvest is in full blast.
The oats crop was harvested in good shape, last week.
Wilton Adams, of Cincinnati, was here several days last week, guest of his mother.
Mrs. Sarah White spent last Thursday with W. T. Ryle and family, near Commissary.
R. Lee Huey was around, last week, gathering up lambs for the Cincinnati market.
Mrs. Pearl Dolan and little daughter returned to their home in Hinton, West Virginia, last Friday.
We have seen grain in a similar condition in wet weather, but never heard of the bands or strings getting tighter.
B. H. Stephens had a valuable horse to get cut so badly in a mowing machine, last Friday, that it had to be killed.
Mr. George Crane, district deputy for the Modern Woodmen of America, is at work on a camp for Crane Hall, between here and Union. We hope he will succeed.
P. A. Weaver and John Elstun had such an immense oats crop this season that they figured on several plans for saving it. They were so heavy headed that bundles were set up against an old house to keep them from falling down.
We sometimes fail to send in a communication to the RECORDER and feel ashamed to it some how, although the paper comes just the same each week. So if each correspondent would make it a point to send in some news each week it would make the editor feel much better in getting up his edition.

IDLEWILD.

July 16.—How time flies! We can almost hear his wings as he sweeps upon his rapid flight.
Why do most of the people in China have to walk? Because there is only one Cochin China.

As we can't get out to pick any berries we think each of our neighbors and friends elsewhere ought to make us a glass of jelly, the kind Mrs. Clinton Gaines gave us—not a glass but a great big quart of preserves without being asked. Many thanks kind lady. Now we will see how neighborly our neighbors are and how many friends we have and who they are.
The All-Kentuckians, the Idlewild ball team, went to Lawrenceburg Sunday, going by way of Garrison and from there down on a gasoline boat and crossed bats with the Lawrenceburg sluggers. The game was said to be the most exciting of any played in Lawrenceburg this season. The good playing of McGuire and Lonlaker won the game. Score 3 to 4 in favor of All Kentucklans. Allen McCool did some fine field work. Every ball that came his way he got either in his hands or his mouth.

Little Nellie Lucille Cook was buried in the Belleview cemetery Tuesday evening July 13, 1909. She was born June 28th, 1908, and died July 13, 1909, after an illness of three weeks, aged 1 year and 14 days, being the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Cook. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of their many friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Cook desire to extend a card of thanks to friends and neighbors who tendered their much and needed help during their days of trial. It was my sad lot to officiate at the burial service. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." May her short stay on earth help us to live better lives and glorify the One who said "suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

READY FOR WORK.

The Boone County Board of Control Meets and Discusses Matters of Interest to The Tobacco Growers.

Accepts The Pooling Contract and Appoints Pooling Officers.

The Boone County Board of Control of the Burley Tobacco Society met at the court house in Burlington last Monday, with the President, J. C. Hughes, of Richwhood, presiding, and the following members present: John L. Jones, of Hamilton; W. M. Whitson, of Verona; R. C. Green, of Walton; W. B. Arnold, of Belleview; L. T. Clore, of Burlington; J. W. Kennedy, of Union, and Secretary T. F. Carley, of Walton.
Various matters of interest to tobacco growers were discussed during the meeting, among them the contract adopted by the State Board. The contract was accepted, and the following pooling officers were appointed:
G. B. Powers, Walton;
E. P. Farrell, Verona;
B. H. Berkshire, Petersburg;
John Jones, Hamilton;
Joe W. Cleek, Verona;
L. T. Clore, Burlington.
The above officers will go to work at once to get tobacco sized up.
The meeting not being able to dispose of the large amount of business before it, adjourned to meet again at Richwood next Monday, July 26th, when a good attendance is very much desired.

Personal Mention.

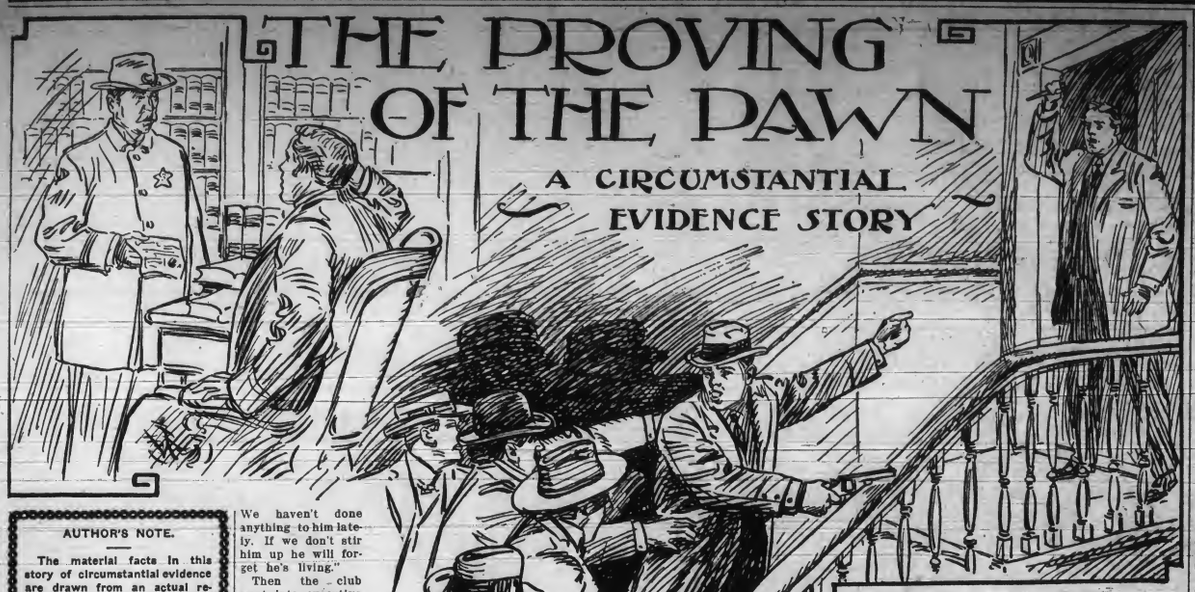
Miss Jennie Lee Castleman went to Shelby county, last week, to visit relatives. While gone she will be one of a party who will spend ten days on the upper Kentucky river, enjoying Kentucky scenery that rivals that of Italy.
Joseph Birkie and wife, of Bullittsville, were Sunday guests of their son, Charles and wife, near Burlington. Mr. Birkie is the only blacksmith in his town, having recently bought out Sam Houston, who held the fort there for many years.

William Clore.

William Clore was born near Pt. Pleasant, this county, on December 17th, 1823, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. S. Baisly, at Bullittsville, July 18th, 1909. He was married in 1856 to Virginia L. Crisler, daughter of Jonas and Elizabeth Crisler, of this county. To this union were born two children: the late Dr. W. A. Clore and Mrs. C. S. Baisly, who, with the widow, mourn the loss of father and husband. Mr. Clore suffered a stroke of paralysis about nine years ago. Three weeks to the day before he died he suffered a third stroke, from which he never rallied. Another of Boone county's good, substantial, old citizens has gone. He was laid to rest in the Bullittsburg cemetery, Monday, July 19th, after a brief service at the house by Rev. Edgar Riley.

Life 100,000 Years Ago.



Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men, who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was in constant danger from wild beasts. Today the danger as shown by A. W. Brown, of Alexander, Mo., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Lungs, Colds, obstinate Coughs, and prevent Pneumonia, it's the best medine on earth. 50c and $1. Guaranteed by Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger. Trial bottle free.

J. Stephens, of Gunpowder, is visiting her son, Cage, on Woolper.—Miss Nora Mae Mullins, of Gunpowder highlands, entertained with a play party last Saturday night.

THE PROVING OF THE PAWN

A CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE STORY

AUTHOR'S NOTE.

The material facts in this story of circumstantial evidence are drawn from an actual recorded case, only such change of names and local color being made as to remove them from the classification of legal reports to that of fiction. All the essential points of evidence, however, are retained.

THE Calf Skin club expected a good story from Judge Adams, and when his turn came upon the list, every member was in his seat around the long table. It was with further satisfaction that they watched him take from his pocket a manuscript. That meant careful preparation and that full justice would be done to the story. When the pipes were all going well Judge Adams arose in his place and took up the sheets before him; and here is what they contained:

The tale that I shall tell you this evening is one that occurred in my own experience. For reasons that will appear, it never became a cause celebre, yet I think it offers sufficient of the unusual to be entitled to a place among these records of the club.

As did many of our members I made my first acquaintance with the law in a small town. Almost every member of the company of young men with which I was raised was either a lawyer, the son of a lawyer or a student of the law. Our loafing place in the day time and our meeting place in the evening was always some one or the other of the many law offices. We grew up in fact amid an atmosphere of law calf and briefs.

It was a fantastic crowd, full of quaint conceits and odd fancies. One of these resulted in the formation of an organization the like of which I have not known before or since. They called it "The Gentleman's Club," but had it been named the "Practical Joker's Club" the title would have been more fitting. Its members—well, to enumerate them by their bizaare titles will give you the best idea of the vagaries of our idle brains. There was the Governor of the Cigar Islands in the person of Davies, a brilliant student who had already made his mark as a stump speaker. There was Garrity, otherwise the Duke of Vermillion, who could cite by section and chapter a parallel to any case you might mention in the Illinois reports up to the one hundred and thirty-fourth volume; he quit at Vol. 134 and went back to Blackstone. There was little Tom Childress, dignified by the title of Lord Mayor of Conlogue, who used to amuse himself by turning Cooley's Constitutional Law into Latin blank verse. And there was Diaz, a ranting Irishman with a Spanish name, who claimed to be the sole surviving member of the Patrinic Order of Sons of Shay's Rebellion, who loved a joke as he did the smoky distillations of his ancestors' native isle and who gloried in the title of Lord High Admiral of the Boyne, which, all history to the contrary, he declared to be the scene of a great Irish victory.

There were lesser lights with lesser titles and lastly there was "The Pawn." "The Pawn" was too handsome to be popular. He was also too quiet. He certainly thought a great deal, but he seldom said anything. He was admitted to the club only on sufferance and only in the capacity of a pawn. His two consuming ambitions were to try a case before a jury and to be a full fledged member of the "Gentleman's Club," with a title. If England's queen had offered him the ribbon of the bath he would have declined it for these. His name, which is unimportant, as he was never known otherwise than as "The Pawn," was Chester Easter.

The club was in session in the office of Diaz. "The Pawn" was not present.

"I think," said Diaz, solemnly, "it is about time 'The Pawn' was initiated. We haven't done anything to him lately. If we don't stir him up he will forget he's living."

Then the club went into executive session and plotted the undoing of "The Pawn."

"The Pawn" at this time was giving little thought to anything save the whims and caprices of black-eyed Mary Ashton. Mary was the soul of fickleness, and having broken every youthful heart in the town except that of "The Pawn," she bethought herself of him and she found in him a willing, yet a determined subject. "The Pawn" loved deeply as he could hate deeply. He was not one who would give up easily an object he had set out to win, especially if that object had flashing black eyes, shining jet hair and cheeks and lips that would set the blood coursing through colder veins than his.

To accomplish the plan which the "Gentleman's Club" had fixed upon it was necessary that "The Pawn" should be enticed to one of the nightly meetings. This at last was brought about by Diaz, arch diplomat of the crowd. The club was gathered in the paternal Diaz' law office when "The Pawn" slipped in, took his seat and sat in discreet silence.

"I see," said Davies, addressing Tom Childress, "that you and Mary Ashton have made it up.

"The Pawn" shifted uneasily in his chair and his cheeks flamed. His persecutors had no idea of the consuming jealousy of Childress that had long obsessed him.

Before he could decide which course to pursue a diversion occurred. Garrity jumped to his feet, strode over to Childress, and shaking his fist in his face shouted:

"Tom Childress, you're an infernal liar. I'm going to that dance with Mary Ashton. She promised me this afternoon."

"I'm a liar, am I," said Childress, slowly rising to the full limit of his five feet five and squaring off for battle. "You've got to prove those words, Garrity."

"I'll prove them on you, you lying pup," shouted Garrity. "You can't come up here and talk lightly of the girl I love. There, take that—!"

The blow fell and instantly was returned. Then somebody put out the light. In the fitful light from the windows the room seethed with the confusion of crashing chairs, the thud thud of rapidly exchanged blows and the labored breathing of the combatants. Then the door opened letting in a flood of cool air. There was a rush of struggling bodies and, "The Pawn," still clasping an open knife, felt himself borne along with the crowd.

Childress was in the fore and under the rays of the electric light on the corner his face showed red and bloody. He seemed to be dripping with gore. He was. It took a whole bottle of red ink.

He saw "The Pawn" and started up the stairway shouting:

"There he is! He cut me! See, fellows; he's got a knife!"

The conspirators slipped quietly away while Diaz went back to lock up the office and, perchance, manufacture additional evidence.

When he entered "The Pawn" was still standing in the middle of the floor with his knife gripped tightly.

"Come, come, Chess," said Diaz, "you'd better quiet down. You've done enough for to-night. Childress is cut pretty bad, I guess. The boys are taking him home. What possessed you to butt in, anyway?"

"Look here, Diaz," said "The Pawn," "you're a friend of mine. Now I didn't cut Childress, but I wish I had. I'd like to kill him. I'm afraid that's all true that he said about Mary."

"Well, what if it is? She's not worth fighting for," answered Diaz. "Come on, you'd better go home and in the morning it won't bother you a bit."

In the meantime the further details of the plot were worked out over a table in the back end of "The Gold Eagle Exchange," where other conspirators were waiting.

When they reached McCurdy's office the "court" was already in session. Had "The Pawn's" mind been capable of connected thought he would have observed that the court, the attorneys and the spectators, all were members of the "Gentleman's Club."

"The Pawn" was led to a chair in front of the magistrate's desk. McCurdy read several docketed entries and each case was continued at the request of some one of the young attorneys present until he reached the entry:

"The People of the State of Illinois against Chester Easter; Assault with Intent to Kill."

"Is the state's attorney present?" inquired the magistrate.

"If the court please," said Davies, "the state's attorney has deputized me to try this case, as he is out of town and it seems to be the wish of all the parties to avoid publicity as much as possible."

"Who is for the defense?" inquired McCurdy.

Walter Linton, a brilliant young attorney, went over to "The Pawn" and held a whispered conversation. Then he announced that he would defend the prisoner.

"Will the defendant have a jury?" "We elect to try the case before the court," said Linton.

Davies opened for the state and in words of fire he painted the awful treachery of "The Pawn" who, too cowardly to battle in his own behalf, had waited until his rival was engaged in a "friendly scuffle" with another and then had slipped in and delivered the poltroon's blow. He trusted that the real cause of the rivalry might not be made apparent. It was no wish of the state to drag in the mire the name of one of its most lovely daughters if the ends of justice could be subserved without it. But the state would be able to show a motive, a powerful, compelling motive. While he was a friend of the accused he had still his duty to perform, and he felt that he must put friendship out of his heart and do that duty with all the power that lay within him.

And where was Tom Childress? Why was he not there to ask the vengeance of the law upon his assailant? The state would seek to show why. If the accused had any special knowledge of the whereabouts of his victim the state would be very likely to discover it. But he had no charges to make; the present charge was serious enough, said he was willing to let what might come out in the evidence.

Linton then outlined the defense and said he would seek to show that pot Chester Easter but Tom Garrity had struck the blow.

But this hope for "The Pawn" was dashed when Garrity went on the stand and swore that he had no knife, and was fully corroborated by all the rest. They swore with equal positiveness that "The Pawn" did have a knife. All had seen it as he stood brandishing it at the top of the stairway. Diaz had seen it when he returned to the office. Diaz also heard the threat against the life of Childress. He did not know what had become of Childress. He lived near him, and his family knew nothing of his whereabouts. He believed that Easter could tell where he was if he wanted to. This objected to by defendant's counsel, and objection sustained.

Through it all "The Pawn" sat with bloodless face and with eyes far, far away. He seemed to take no interest in the proceedings until Linton said:

"I will now put the defendant on the stand in his own behalf. Be sworn, Mr. Easter."

McCurdy mumbled the oath: "Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth concerning the matters and facts pertaining to this case which shall be asked of you by counsel, so help you, and so forth?"

"The Pawn" took the stand like an automaton. If the object of the conspiracy was to daze him nothing could have succeeded better. The mystery is how they kept their faces straight. Several of the less experienced at the noble art of practical joking had to leave the room to indulge in smothered shouts of laughter.

"Now, Chester, tell your version of this affair," said Linton.

"I will tell it all," began "The Pawn" in a voice choking with emotion. "I will tell everything. I can't keep it back any longer. Tom Childress' face is with me day and night. I wake up and see it in the dead of night. If I sleep it is with me in my dreams. O, great God, if only I could shut that terrible vision from my mind!" He rose and, throwing up his hands, wildly clutched his hair and shouted:

"You want to know where Tom Childress is. You'll never know where he is if I don't tell. But I'm going to tell. I'm not going to keep that vision with me any longer. Tom Childress is at the bottom of the water works well. I killed him."

The conspirators started back in amazement. It almost sounded like the truth, so well was it done.

"Magnificent," returned Linton. "He's done us. I didn't think he had it in him. But let's carry it out. Go on, Chester; tell the whole story."

"The Pawn" had sunk down in his chair and buried his face in his hands.

"Yes, I'll feel better to tell it all," he continued. "I made up my mind to kill him when I left the office. I waited for him in the alley and when he passed on his way home I followed him. When we got to the dark place by the water works well I caught up with him. We had some words. I dared him to throw away the gun I had seen him flash and fight me fair. All the time I had the knife in my sleeve. Then he struck me and I let him have it. He dropped. I bent over him and he was dead. Then I found a heavy rock and a rope and I tied the rock to him and dropped him over into the well. There's wasn't much blood and what there was I washed away with the hose they sprinkle the flower beds with. I saw nothing of the watchman and I thought I was safe. I didn't know what a terribly relentless accuser conscience is. I wish the court to bind me over without bail."

"The decision of this court," he said, "is that the prisoner at the bar has played his part nobly, and that he be elected to full membership in the 'Gentlemen's Club'," and his face broke into a broad smile.

There came a loud knocking at the door and excited voices demanding admission. It was opened and the chief of police rushed in.

"Tom Childress has been murdered!" he shouted. "His body has just been found in the water works well. Do any of you know how he came there?"

The smile died from McCurdy's lips. "There is your man," he said, pointing to "The Pawn." "He has just confessed it all to us."

With eyes that looked neither to the right or the left "The Pawn" placed his arm in that of the chief and walked out and to the jail. Already the news was on the streets, how it had been found necessary to drain the well, how the body of Childress, dead from a knife wound and weighted down with a stone, had been found at the bottom. It was all too horribly true.

A scared and horror-stricken band of conspirators filed out of McCurdy's office and gathered the news from excited groups. While the first shock was still tingling in the nerves of the public a second one ran like electricity through the town. A terrible sequel to the tragedy had been recorded. Chester Easter had committed suicide immediately on being placed in a cell. The provincial search had failed to discover in his shoe the very knife that slew Tom Childress.

The last meeting of the "Gentleman's Club" took place that afternoon in the back end of the "Gold Eagle Exchange," when the members with sad and troubled faces took a solemn oath never to disclose the true facts of the proving of "The Pawn."

No Place for the Artist.

It may be regrettable, but the artist to-day lives more apart from the generality of men than in almost any other age, and the reason is plain—it is because he has no definite place in the present economy. Neither can a place be established for him by confederations of artists and such like nonsense. Solemn humbug of this sort is of use only for the glorification of a set of professional men of taste, from whose tyranny good Lord deliver us.—New York Evening Sun.

WHY PEOPLE SUFFER.

Too often the kidneys are the cause and the sufferer is not aware of it. Sick kidneys bring backache and side pains, lameness and stiffness, dizziness, headaches, tired feeling, urinary troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills cure the cause. Mrs. N. E. Graves, Villisca, Iowa, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble for years. The secretions were disordered, there were pains in my back and swellings of the ankles. Often I had smothering spells. I had to be helped about. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me five years ago and I have been well since. They saved my life."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A NEW "FEAT."

"Mummy! Mummy! look, here's baby walking on his hind legs."

According to Taste.

Discussing missionary work, Mme. Helene Vincente, the well-known Congo missionary, said at a dinner in Cleveland:

"A Chinese heaven strikes you as ludicrous. Yet here in your own country you are careful to fit heaven and the—er—other place to your people's dislikes.

"Thus, on my recent southern trip, I heard a Georgia negro divine describe hades as ice cold, a place where the wicked shiver and freeze through all eternity. I asked the divine why the altered in that radical manner the usual description of hades, and he replied:

"'Ah don' darst tell mah people nuffin' 'bout warm. Why, it Ah sed hades wuz wahm, some o' dese ole rheumatic breddern an' sistern o' mine would be wantin' ter staht right down dah come fust frost.'"

For the Unmarried Daughter.

There will be a very unique social affair in Atchison early in July. A certain girl has never married, and as all her sisters married and enjoyed pretty clothes and wedding presents her father announces that he wants to do as well by her and will give her a mock wedding.

She will have as much money to spend on clothes as if she were to be a bride, and after she has them all made her father will give her a party and notify all the kin that they must carry presents as if to a bride. Then he will send the girl on a trip to the seacoast, where she can wear her new clothes and have more fun than if there were a man tagging along.—Atchison Globe.

A Gentle Aspersion.

Among the prisoners brought before a Chicago police magistrate one Monday morning was one, a beggar, whose face was by no means an unfamiliar one to the judge.

"I am informed that you have again been found begging in the public streets," said his Honor, sternly, "and yet you carried in your pocket over ten dollars in currency."

"Yes, your Honor," proudly returned the mendicant. "I may not be as industrious as some, but sir, I am no spendthrift."—Harper's Weekly.

HOME TESTING
A Sure and Easy Test on Coffee.

To decide the all important question of coffee, whether or not it is really the hidden cause of physical ills and approaching fixed diseases, one should make a test of ten days by leaving off coffee entirely and using well-made Postum.

If relief follows you may know to a certainty that coffee has been your vicious enemy. Of course you can take it back to your heart again, if you like to keep sick.

A lady says: "I had suffered with stomach trouble, nervousness and terrible sick headaches ever since I was a little child, for my people were always great coffee drinkers and let us children have all we wanted. I got so I thought I could not live without coffee, but I would not acknowledge that it caused my suffering.

"Then I read so many articles about Postum that I decided to give it a fair trial. I had not used it two weeks in place of coffee until I began to feel like a different person. The headache and nervousness disappeared and whereas I used to be sick two or three days out of a week while drinking coffee I am now well and strong and sturdy seven days a week, thanks to Postum.

"I had been using Postum three months and had never been sick a day when I thought I would experiment and see if it really was coffee that caused the trouble, so I began to drink coffee again and inside of a week I had a sick spell. I was so ill I was soon convinced that coffee was the cause of all my misery and I went back to Postum with the result that I was soon well and strong again and determined to stick to Postum and leave coffee alone in the future."

BARUCH

Story of the Message He Sent to Jerusalem

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. B. Ridgen.)

Based on Apocryphal Book of Baruch.

Baruch and His Book.—This book is the eighth of the Apocrypha and is remarkable as being the only book in the collection which is formed on the model of the prophets. Though it is wanting in originality, it presents a vivid reflection of the ancient prophetic fire. The date of the book is uncertain, but it is probable that some one thoroughly conversant with the Alexandrine translation of Jeremiah found the Hebrew fragment which forms the basis of the book already attached to the writings of that prophet and wrought it up in its present form, the date being probably B. C. 160. The book may be divided into two main parts, as follows: Part 1.—Chapters 1-3.8. Part 2.—Chapters 3.9 to end. The assumed author is undoubtedly the companion of Jeremiah, but the details of the book are inconsistent with this assumption. It exhibits not only historical inaccuracies, but also evident traces of a later date than the beginning of the captivity. The book was held in little esteem among the Jews; although it is stated in the Greek text of the Apostolical Constitutions, that it was read, together with the Lamentations, "on the tenth day of the month Gorpiaeus" (i. e. the Day of Atonement).

A GEM FROM THE BOOK.

The one bright hope of the Jews during all the dark portions of their history, and even to to-day among the faithful, was the thought of the ultimate glory and exaltation of their beloved Jerusalem.

There is such a triumphant note of joy in this book, and it may well be a subject of contemplation by those of us to-day as pointing to a dispensation yet to come.

Put off, O Jerusalem, the garment of thy mourning and affliction and put on the comeliness of the glory that cometh from God forever.

Cast about thee a double garment of the righteousness which cometh from God; and set a diadem on thine head of the glory of the everlasting.

For God will show thy brightness unto every country under heaven.

For thy name shall be called of God forever, the peace of the righteous, and the glory of God's worship.

Arise, O Jerusalem, and stand on high, and look about towards the east, and behold thy children gathered from the west unto the east by the word of the holy one, rejoicing in the remembrance of God.

For they departed from thee on foot, and were led away of their enemies; but God bringeth them unto thee exalted with glory, as children of the kingdom.

For God hath appointed that every high hill, and banks of long continuance, should be cast down, and valleys filled up, to make even the ground, that Israel may go safely in the glory of God.

Moreover ven the woods and every sweet-smelling tree shall overshadow Israel by the commandment of God.

For God shall lead Israel with joy in the light of his glory with the mercy and righteousness that cometh from him.

THE STORY.

FIVE years," sighed Baruch. "It does seem almost a lifetime." And again the man lapsed into a long silence.

Day and night the condition of his people Israel weighed upon his mind and heart. Day and night he had thought of the Jerusalem he had seen spoiled and ruined by the cruel hand of the nation which had taken them captive. How he had striven to bring the rulers of Jerusalem to the point of submission to the king of Babylon, but they would not, and at last the king had sent and razed the city and dragged all the principal people to the far off Babylon, he among them. And it had been five years now since that bitter trial, and during those years he had pondered over the condition of his nation and mourned for the beloved Jerusalem.

He had striven to keep before the minds of the captives the thought of God, and that even during their sojourn in a strange land and with a strange people they could be loyal to him and obey his law. He tried to point out and make plain that it was their sin and the sins of their fathers which had brought upon the nation so great humiliation and suffering, and that it was only as now they bowed to the conditions and turned and served the Lord to the best of their ability that they could find deliverance.

One year, two years, three years, four years, and then five years had dragged out their weary lengths and still the brightening day of deliverance did not seem any nearer than that first day when they had reached the strange land and had set to work to make them homes down along the river bank in the section which had been set apart by the king for their dwelling place.

That day Baruch had gone out to his accustomed nook for meditation and as he had repeated over perhaps for the fiftieth time, "Five years, and still nothing is done," a sudden inspiration came to him and he exclaimed.

"I will! I will set it down in a book, and it shall be not only for our people here but for those who are living amidst the ruins of our beloved Jerusalem. We must keep before the people that it is only as we turn to God and serve him that blessing can come and deliverance be wrought."

With this new resolve burning in his heart he returned home and the days which followed found him busy over his parchment. Instead of his former goings and comings among his people he shut himself in to his task, and they, noting his absence began to question among themselves as to what it could mean. Some said he was writing out a plea to the king of Babylon in behalf of his people, while others said, "Nay, he is giving himself to visions and dreams and no good will come of it to him or his people."

Still others, who were among the faithful, contended that he was undoubtedly engaged in the work of the Lord and would in good time give them the benefit of any message which the Lord might have for them. And this suggestion on the part of the few caused their hearts to become troubled, for said they:

"We do need to remember that we are in sore straits because of our sins and the sins of our fathers, and we must no longer be stubborn of heart, but must be penitent before God and be ready to hear his message."

So they talked thus among themselves and their hearts became tender, and they repented of the evil which they had done, and again their hearts began to turn in longing towards Jerusalem.

Then one day the message went forth among the Jews who dwelt at Babylon asking that they assemble themselves by the river side, for Baruch had somewhat to say unto them. So it was that on the following day when they were all gathered together that Baruch came with his great scroll in his hand. And the people all crowded around to hear, and Baruch did read the words of the scroll which he had written therein. And as he unfolded the sad history of Israel's waywardness and sin throughout the long years, and how in mercy and love God had dealt with them and had at last permitted the mighty king of Babylon to come in and utterly destroy and scatter the nation, the people fell upon their faces and wept. Then they lifted up their voices and cried:

"O Lord Almighty, God of Israel, the soul in anguish, the troubled spirit crieth unto thee. Hear, O Lord, and have mercy; for thou art merciful. Have pity on us, because we have sinned before thee. For thou endurest forever and we perish utterly. Remember not the iniquities of our forefathers, but think upon thy power and thy name, and praise thee in our captivity. For we have called to mind all the iniquity of our forefathers that sinned before thee. Behold, we are yet this day in our captivity, where thou hast scattered us, for a reproach and a curse, and to be subject to tribute, according to all the iniquities of our fathers, which departed from the Lord our God."

And as they prayed thus, Baruch's heart was made glad, and he said to himself: "Now will they listen to my pleadings for the desolate Jerusalem and will send succor back to those who are in sore stress amidst the ruins."

And when the voices of the people had ceased Baruch spoke to them of Jerusalem and her departed glory and of their brethren the poor and despised whom the king of Babylon had left amidst the ruins of the beautiful city.

"Here, we have plenty. Back there there is great want. Let us send to them."

"Yea, we will! We will!" shouted the people and they at once made a collection of money according to every man's power, and they made up an offering and sent it unto Jerusalem, unto Joachim the high priest, and they sent word, saying:

"Behold, we have sent you money to buy you burnt offerings, and sin offerings and incense, and prepare ye manna and offer upon the altar of the Lord our God. And ye shall read this book, which Baruch is sending unto you, and ye shall say, 'To the Lord our God belongeth righteousness, but unto us the confusion of faces.' And now, O Lord our God, we have sinned, we have done ungodly, we have dealt unrighteously in all thine ordinances, let thy wrath turn from us; for we are but a few left among the heathen, where thou has scattered us. Hear our prayers, O Lord!"

The Higher Path.

Some Christians travel their way by the valley road, and miss the joys and privileges of the few who journey on the crest of the hills. We may tread the path where the mists of doubt and unbelief linger, and be weighed down by the "dont's" and exactions. But there is a place, if we will but climb to it, where we may walk so close to the Master's side that the clouds of unbelief lie far below our feet. We can no longer doubt, because we "know wherein we have believed." We have no longer a sense of self-denial over the little things we have not to do, because we desire only to know his will and to please him. It is the people of the hills of privilege who enter into the heritage, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you."

ALWAYS AHEAD OF THE GAME.

Cleveland Sportsman Gets Fever Earlier Than Any of His Friends and Is Lonely.

Long before other fishermen have any more than realized that the opening of the fishing season is close at hand, A. N. Wirls of East Cleveland has his rod, lines, hooks and sinkers all gathered together ready for the spring opening.

When it comes to things piscatorial, he invariably finds himself each spring three or four laps ahead of the procession. The other day, having everything in readiness, Wirls desired to go a-fishing. He started in to call up his friends, one by one, and proposed that they go out to see how the fish were biting.

But everybody he called was down with a previous engagement, or was tied up with sordid business problems that prevented.

After he'd called pretty much every fisherman on his entire list of acquaintances, Wirls gave it up. There's no fun going fishing alone, and nobody else seemed to have appreciated that it's time for men to be up and angling. He went down to a fish market and bought a mess of bullheads to take home for supper, that he might croon over them and imagine he'd spent the afternoon sitting on a pier or out in a boat.

Wirls has the same trouble in hunting season. He catches the fever early and then has three or four relapses.

"Let's go coon hunting," he'll propose. But its 'too early for any of his friends to be in the notion. So it goes. Throughout the year he's kept busy hunting for people to go with him.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Beautifying Cities.

The cost of a city beautiful is something enormous, but aside from the education and inspiration it affords its residents, Paris has demonstrated that it pays. How much the public improvements in Paris had cost up to the time of the second empire no one knows, but it was many millions. Under Baron Eugene Haussmann's direction Napoleon III. spent $500,000,000 to make Paris the most beautiful city in the world, and to-day expenditures have been made on no mean scale ever since. Now it is proposed to spend $135,000,000 more in carrying out a systematic plan of beautification, the municipal council having already approved the plans and appropriated the money.

Under Boss Shepherd millions were expended to make Washington beautiful and symmetrical, and it is now far in advance of other American cities. New York has expended enormous sums for municipal beautification, but its business district is so out of harmony that it cannot be compared to Paris and Berlin in this respect. Our new and growing cities of the west can hardly afford to spend such vast sums for beautification, but they certainly can avoid the mistakes in city-making which render beautification in the future either impossible or excessively costly.—Omaha Bee.

Fastidious Freddy.

Pearl—I hear that Freddy Van Pickel resigned from the volunteer fire company in his home town.

Ruby—Yes, indeed; there was an argument about the hose.

Pearl—The hose?

Ruby—Yes, Freddie wanted to wear drop-stitch lisle when he went to a fire and the captain said drop-stitch and high boots didn't go, so the dear boy resigned.

A New Society Every Day.

Every day a new society for the betterment of something or other is born in New York. Nobody has ever yet listed or classified all these societies, and most of them are never heard of. Born dead, they keep on being dead, though each thinks it lives, is very much in existence and greatly in the public eye.—New York Press.

The Mean Things.

A good many married men would regard a tax on bachelors as a tax on intelligence.

SURPRISED AT THE SCHEDULE.

Colored Man Felt He Was Being Railroaded Into the Class of "High Financiers."

A colored man was tried the other day before a Charlestown court for stealing some clothing from a young white man. A pretty clear case was made out against the colored man and he confessed.

"I reckon I ain't got nothin' to say, white folks," he said with humility, "'ceptin' hit's jes laik it is."

"Well, since you admit your guilt," said the judge, "I will try to make it light for you. But first we will have to get an estimate of the value of the clothing. Mr. Plaintiff, what do you value these articles at?"

"The dress suit cost me $80, your honor," replied the young man, "the overcoat $75 and the silk hat $10."

"Mr. Jedge," broke in the accused, "I'd lak ter say des one word befo' you goes any fudder."

"All right; go ahead."

"I submit dat I tuk dem clo'es, boss man, but at no sich prices as dem!"

After Specialist Failed to Cure Her Intense Itching Eczema—Had Been Tortured and Disfigured But

Was Soon Cured of Dread Humor.

"I contracted eczema and suffered intensely for about ten months. At times I thought I would scratch myself to pieces. My face and arms were covered with large red patches, so that I was ashamed to go out. I was advised to go to a doctor who was a specialist in skin diseases, but I received very little relief. I tried every known remedy, with the same results. I thought I would never get better until a friend of mine told me to try the Cuticura Remedies. So I tried them, and after four or five applications of Cuticura Ointment I was relieved of my unbearable itching. I used two sets of the Cuticura Remedies, and I am completely cured. GAMES NEXT SATURDAY:
Hebron at Burlington.
Belleview at Big Bone.

Quite a large crowd assembled at Belleview base ball park, last Saturday afternoon to witness the third contest of this season between the Burlington team and the local club. The Burlington aggregation had only seven of its players on hand and appeared in a badly crippled condition. Elmer Goodridge and Joe Presser, the latter of Belleview, went in to fill the vacancies, and Walton was put on second, and the fun began. For two innings honors were even, except Walton made a safe drive to center. In the third inning White made a hit, which, with a couple of errors, netted Burlington one run. In this inning McCarty, the first Belleview man up, hit to center, and an error and a long fly put him across the plate, and the teams were on even terms again. In the fourth inning Burlington got mean and found Brady for three safe hits, and before he could stop the mad career two had completed the circuit, and the Bellevue rooters began to sniff defeat. 1, 2, 3 and back to the field went Belleview. Fifth inning—1, 2, 3 and noting doing by the visitors. With two men out McCarty made a hit, but Smith fanned and Belleview roots began to admit that Conner and Slayback were invincible. In the sixth Walton and Tolin fanned, but Presser made a three bagger, but Goodridge went out, Brady to Clore. 1, 2, 3 and back to the woods went Belleview. In the seventh inning Brady got into "sho nuf" trouble and the band flew clear off, and every man in the Burlington lineup had a chance at the old fox's twisters and drops, and a merry old inning it was. Clore, first man up, put a safe one out in center, Slayback out third to first, and White second to first, and the country was thought to be saved when Conner ambled up to bat, but he had no trouble in finding the pig skin. Westbay had good luck also, and pushed a safe one over into right field. The proceedings for the last few minutes had been peaches and cream for Burlington but gall and wormwood for Belleview, and it was thought the visitors had certainly done their do, but nay. Walton was at the bat to do or die, and what he did was a plenty. He made a Hans Wagner swing, meeting the sphere squarely, and it flew through space like a meteor, and Walton had circled the bases and was receiving the congratulations of his comrades when the ball was returned. To keep the fun up Tolin pasted one that landed safe in left field. Presser waited and got four bad ones. Goodridge ended the agony by a fly to third. Nothing more in run getting was done during the game. In the ninth inning after two men were down Brady made a hit which the boys dub a consolation package by Conner. Following is the score by innings:

Burlington	0	0	1	2	0	0	4	0	0	—7
Hits	0	0	1	0	1	0	0	0	1	—3

Base hits—Clore 2, White, Conner, Westbay, Walton, Presser, Goodridge, McCarty 2, Brady.
Three base hit—Presser.
Home run—Walton.
Struck out—By Conner 11; by Brady 6.
Base on balls—By Brady 1.
Earned runs—Burlington 4.
Errors—Burlington 4; Belleview 5.
Umpires—Newton Sullivan and Bernard Rogers.

NOTES.

Walton and Presser's batting was terrific.
Burlington has won three straight games from Belleview.
McCarty made Belleview's only run, and made two of the three hits.
These two teams meet only once more this season, and then at Burlington.
Only three measly singles were made off of Conner, who pitched one of the best games of his life.
Slayback, who is recognized as the best catcher in the county, was at his best, and received Conner's hot ones in the best of style.

Hebron	1	4	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	—6

Earned runs—Hebron 3, Big Bone 3.
Base hits—Houston, Vance 2, Bullock, Ewalt, Watts, Black, Cramer, Kite.
Two base hits—Fox, Houston, Garnett, Woods.
Home run—Sprague.
Sacrifice hit—Bentler.
Bases on balls—Woods 1, Shinkle 2
Errors—Hebron 1, Big Bone 3.
Struck out—Shinkle 8, Woods 7.
Batteries—Shinkle and Ernest, Woods and Fields.
Umpires—Jones and Goodridge.

SEALED BIDS.

The Modern Woodmen of America instituted a camp in Burlington, last night, after several weeks earnest work by the organizer, Mr. Crayne.

The first installment of the catalogues for the coming fair at Florence was sent out in the mail last Friday. The fair will begin on Wednesday, August 25th.

The report about the big blackberry crop seems to have been exagerated, as we are informed that there is a scarcity of this luscious fruit.—Williamstown Courier.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Aylor are seriously ill at their home on Charlotte street. Mr. Aylor has consumption and no hopes are entertained for his recovery.—Lawrenceburg Register.

W. T. Snyder, another old and highly respected citizen of Bullittsville neighborhood, died Monday night. He was in his 80th year. Funeral tomorrow at 2 p. m., at Petersburg Christian church.

W. L. H. Baker, an employe in the postoffice at Louisville, is rusticating at his old home, Big Bone Springs. He likes his position at Louisville, and from his appearance the work agrees with him.

The Woodmen's camp at Burlington has been chartered, and will be instituted in the next few days. Mr. Crane, the gentleman who worked it up is now trying to organize a camp in Grange Hall neighborhood.

A tramp preacher struck the town one day last week. He delivered two sermons on the streets while in town that day. He gave his name as Richard DeVan, and claimed to have been born and raised in Louisville.

A. T. Sederberg, of St. Louis, stayed in Burlington Monday night. Born and raised near Taylorsport he knows everybody in this part of the county, and he was a welcome visitor. He is a very successful commercial tourist.

Notwithstanding his age, 84 years, and the excessive heat, this summer, Mr. A. E. Hume, who resides on Mudlick creek, has cultivated his crop of corn, and is none the worse for the labor. He enjoys the amusement that results from looking after crops and livestock.

Geo. Riley, of Bullittsville, came into Burlington on horse back, a few afternoons since, but had not been in town long before he met B. B. Hume, who presented to him the advantages of having a nice, new buggy, and George came down with the lucre and bought the vehicle.

The Petersburg Mill wants to handle your wheat. It will buy and pay you the highest price for it; will exchange with you and give you the best flour, or, you can deposit the wheat, and get the flour later. Just anyway that pleases you best. New management, new machinery added, and now ready for you. A barge of the best lump coal just received. We want your business. Try us this year.

M. Duke & Sons, Petersburg, Ky.

B. L. Rice, of Union, was a caller at this office, one day last week. Mr. Rice is one of the hardest workers in his neighborhood in the interest of the proposed traction road it is desired to build from Covington to Big Bone Springs by the way of Union. He says if the right of way can be secured that there is no doubt but what the road will be built immediately after that. The strip of land that is necessary is 40 feet wide, and so far only a few land owners who have been asked to grant the right of way have hestitated to sign up. He says that a company is ready to capitalize at $250,000 to purchase and improve the Big Bone Springs property the minute it is certain a traction road will reach it from Covington. As time goes by the Union people become more encouraged by the developments in the traction scheme they are pushing, and everybody in that locality is boosting. Mr. Rice asserts that the right of way for the road being secured, it can be financed in a few hours, as capitalists before whom the matter has been laid are ready to put up all the money that is necessary for the construction. The fact that Big Bone Springs will develop into one of the greatest health resorts in this country is a great inducement for the construction of a road that will put it in easy access of one of the country's largest centers of population. It is less than 20 miles from Cincinnati, Covington and Newport, which with their suburbs contain over three quarters of a million people, an advantage enjoyed by no other health resort in the United States. The building of a traction road to Big Bone will be a benefit to the entire county, and especially to the territory through which it will pass. Keep the work going.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

A BILLION-DOLLAR ERA.

The incorporation in the United States during May of railroad, industrial and other companies having a capital stock of $258,459,900 gives an idea of the wonderful commercial expansion of the country, says the New York World. Incidental testimony to the same effect is furnished by the speedy absorption by investors of the $10,000,000 issue of preferred stock put out by a new dry goods combination. E. H. Harriman said to the newspaper men who asked him about the report that he was going abroad to dispose of $150,000,000 of bonds, "I wouldn't have to go out of this house to do that in half an hour." This is truly a billion-dollar era. Where the last generation figured in millions, the common multiple of the present-day business world is $100,000,000. To what lengths is the multiplication of millions to go? Estates of $1,000,000 have dwindled by comparison to modest competencies. At the present rate of increase the "swollen fortunes" of to-day may tomorrow excite no public concern, being dwarfed by the greater hoards heaped up and reduced to negligible consequence in the light of the graver problems in the regulation of capital which may then be expected to demand attention.

Automobile recklessness is getting severely rebuked, as the result of several recent court proceedings indicates. The conviction and sentence of a New York chauffeur of manslaughter in the first degree, with a close call from a verdict of murder, was one impressive lesson. Civil suits are also showing what can be done in the way of holding offenders to accountability. A Dutchess county jury has just given judgment for $20,000 damages to a lady who sued for injuries resulting from being run down by an auto. Perhaps the matter will be fought further and the amount reduced. But it is apparent that the present temper of the public is strong against those who fail to exercise proper precaution in operating the machines, says the Troy Times. The laws seem adequate to reach such cases, and the wise automobilist is the one who keeps within safe speed limits.

It is a significant conclusion and one worthy of thought reached by the American Medical association in its conveniton at Atlantic City that the college influence upon the public schools of the country is urging educational boards to increase studies so as to fit children for the higher institutions in preference to work suited to the pupils' mental abilities and physical requirements. If to this influence is due the overcrowding of children's minds of which so much adverse criticism is now made it is one distinctly detrimental to the individual child and to the nation at large. As comparatively few of the pupils of the public schools reach college, a forcing process which benefits the few only at the expense of the many, is a system of popular education which calls for medical revision as unfitting the majority for the needs of the ordinary and average business life.

Within a few days more than a hundred people have been drowned because they overcrowded the boats or some natural born fool rocked them. The treatment for people who don't know how to behave in a boat is to throw them overboard. Their fate would be charged up to the law of self-protection.

German critics do not like American plays, but the managers produce the plays just the same because they cater to the people who buy tickets at the box office.

Let us explain that the New York woman who nearly sailed away carelessly leaving behind $100,000 worth of real jewels, had been married only a few days before.

Talk about civic loyalty. A Georgia man seeks a divorce from his wife just because she spoke disparagingly of the town. Bet the town is with him.

New York lady knocks her husband baily-west because he denied her statement that Portugal was in South America. What's the higher education good for, anyhow?

One of the advantages of having an account is that it reduces the chances of the early pocket-picker.

A Philadelphia girl has had her heart sewed up. If the operation proves entirely successful, some sort of a surgical sewing machine will have to be invented without delay.

SLOOP OVERTURNED

BY SQUALL IN NEW YORK HARBOR—TEN PERSONS DROWNED.

12 PICKED UP BY TUG'S CREW

Survivors Could Give But Hazy Account of the Accident—Six Swimmers Perish at Beaches About Gotham.

New York, July 19.—A sudden squall in the lower bay Sunday capsized the excursion sloop Roxanna, carrying 22 passengers and crew, and 10 persons, including two little girls, were drowned. Twelve survivors, including the captain, were picked up with great difficulty, on account of the rough sea, by the crew of the tug Lamont.

The Roxanna, with her skipper, Capt. Samuelson, was chartered at Ulmer beach, Brooklyn, Sunday afternoon by a party from Brooklyn for a sail across the bay to Midland beach, Staten Island, and back.

The first leg of the voyage was made without mishap, and all hands piled ashore to make merry. Beer was served, and some of the survivors could give but a hazy account of the accident.

All the afternoon there was a stiff breeze from the southwest, which left a nasty cross sea. Towards 4 o'clock the Roxanna, reeling homeward across the bay under all the sail good judgment would permit to be carried, slipped into a squall.

She lay over until her copper plates glistened in the sun, and as the angle of the deck steepened to the boiling water in her lee the women screamed and scrambled for the upper rail.

The captain struggled to stack away his sheet, but there was no time for measures of relief. In one moment the boat was bottom up and the foam was black with bobbing heads. In another moment the Roxanna had vanished, and one by one the heads began to follow her.

Fortunately the tug Lamont was [illegible] a sharp lookout. Capt. Kries saw the sloop keel over in the gust and fail to come back. Instantly he headed for the spot where the Roxanna had been, but when he reached her 10 of the passengers had gone down.

Life lines and buoys were thrown to those still afloat, and after a few minutes of anxious work all in sight were taken aboard the Lamont.

A rowboat capsized off Norton's Point and one man was drowned.

The auxiliary yacht Francis was put out of commission off Sandy Hook. One was drowned.

In Claremont park a crowd of several hundred took refuge from the rain on the veranda of the old Zabrowski mansion, which collapsed, precipitating 100 into the cellar. Seventy-five were injured, five of them seriously.

Six other drownings took place in the harbor during Sunday, mostly swimming accidents.

PINNED AGAINST FIRE-BOX,

Engineer and Fireman Met Death When Monon Train Jumped the Track.

Chicago, Ill., July 19.—When rounding a curve south of Manchester, Ind., early Sunday passenger train No. 3, south-bound on the Monon railroad, jumped the track. Two trainmen were killed and six passengers were injured.

Seven cars left the track, but only the baggage car and the engine turned over. All the injured passengers were taken to a hotel in Crawfordsville, Ind.

The persons injured in the wreck on the Monon railroad, north of this city, Sunday, were able to proceed to their homes Sunday evening. J. Bernstein, of Louisville, was the most painfully hurt. His body was bruised.

When the wreck of the overturned engine was raised and the bodies of Engineer Burns and Fireman Austin taken out, it was found that both had been scalded to death.

Neither had received in the crash a wound sufficient to cause death, and apparently they were conscious when, pinned against the firebox, they were enveloped in escaping steam and tortured until they died.

Drove Auto Against Telegraph Pole.

Utica, N. Y., July 19.—C. Hill Chappell, aged 68 years, of Oneida, president of the National Casket Co., was killed in an automobile accident about two miles out of Canastota, Sunday night. His wife and two sisters-in-law, who were in the party, received serious injuries. Chappell, in avoiding a collision with a team, steered his car into the ditch and collided with a telegraph pole. He was almost instantly killed.

Automobile Tumbled Down Mountain.

Colorado Springs, Col. July 19.—In a spectacular tumble of an automobile down a mountain near Palmer lake Robert C. Mulnix, jr., son of former State Treasurer Mulnix, was perhaps fatally injured. The other occupants escaped by jumping.

Imbecile Patient Slain.

Staunton, Va., July 19.—Walmer Layne, an insane epileptic patient at the Western State hospital, heretofore regarded as harmless, killed Emmet Hoe, an aged imbecile patient, with a knife.

THE PERMANENT VACATION SEASON.

PAPERS BARE DEATH SECRET

SENSATIONAL DISCLOSURES IN BANKER SAYLER'S DOCUMENTS.

Crescent City, Ill. — Contents of the private packet left by the late Banker J. R. Sayler, opened Thursday, are said to be of a startling nature. According to W. R. Nightingale, who was present when the secret papers were read by brothers of the decedent, the contents, which he refused to divulge, have a direct bearing on the killing of Mr. Sayler by Dr. W. L. Miller last Sunday.

"We can't give what we found to the public, at least not now," said Mr. Nightingale. "I will say, however, that it is evidence which will prove of value to the prosecution of Dr. Miller, who is charged with murder, and of Mrs. Sayler, charged with being an accessory."

As soon as the contents of the packet were learned by Thomas and Willis Sayler, brothers of the late banker, and Mr. Nightingale, State's Attorney Pallissard, at Watseka, was notified by long-distance telephone. He secured a horse and buggy and came at top speed to this village.

The fourth and final bullet fired at Mr. Sayler was found in the dining room of his late home. Three were previously found in the body. The fourth was embedded in the southeast corner of the room.

Watseka, Ill.—The county jail is still under a strong guard to prevent an attack on Dr. William L. Miller, slayer of J. R. Sayler, the Crescent City banker, whose funeral Wednesday was attended by thousands. Miller has written to his wife urging her to come to him at once and she is expected Friday.

A dispatch from Blairsville, Pa., quoting Mrs. Miller as having forgiven her husband and only awaiting his summons to fly to his aid was received simultaneously with a private message from Mrs. Miller to Sheriff Heikes of the same import.

SNELL INSANE, SAYS JURY.

Decides the Clinton Millionaire Was Incompetent to Make a Will—Another Appeal Likely.

Clinton, Ill. — The jury in the contested will case of the late Col. Thomas Snell returned a verdict last night finding that Col. Snell was not competent to make a will. The estate is valued at $1,500,000.

Col. Snell made only a few bequests, leaving the estate in trust until the death of all his children and grandchildren. It then was to be distributed among his great-grandchildren and their heirs. The will was contested by his son, Richard Snell, a banker of Clinton, who was cut off with $50 in the will. The first trial resulted in a disagreement. At the second trial the jury returned a verdict breaking the will, but the supreme court set aside the verdict on the ground that improper evidence was allowed to go to the jury. It is announced that the case will again be appealed to the higher courts.

Quake Kills 300 Persons.

London. — Special dispatches received here from Athens say that 300 persons were killed or injured by the earthquake that occurred in the province of Elis, in southern Greece. The damage to property also was very great. Hot water is flowing from many of the springs in the stricken district, while the water in the rivers and brooks has turned a reddish color.

BATH HISTORICAL PAGEANT.

Great Celebration Is Begun in the Ancient English City—Illinois Girl Taking Part.

Bath, England.—Victoria park, the beauty spot of this ancient city, was a scene of splendor Monday when the great historical pageant was opened. People from all parts of the United Kingdom were present, as well as many from other lands. But the guests who attracted the most attention were the young women who have been sent here from nearly every town in the world that was named Bath after this, the mother city. Among these young women was Miss May Sizson, who represents Bath, Ill., and whose mother was born in Bath, N. Y.

Another American woman taking part is [illegible] Mrs. Spencer Trask of New York city, the author of "King Alfred's Jewel." This dramatic poem was so admired that Mrs. Trask was invited to write verses in honor of the American towns named Bath, and did so, adding a peace hymn for both countries.

The pageant will last six days, and includes eight episodes, from which will be gained an idea of the range of history of the city, extending back to the British King Bladud, who ruled before the Romans established on the Avon river the town they called Aqua Solis, "waters of the sun."

In the pageant the lesser king, Richard Nash, whose management of the bathrooms gave to Bath of the eighteenth century precedence over the other fashionable resorts, Epsom Harrowgate and Scarborough, is not subordinate in interest even to King Bladud, King Edgar, Henry VII., Queen Elizabeth or Queen Charlotte, for the seventh episode is devoted to the "Glorious Time of Beau Nash and Ralph Allen, 1752."

CHINESE MASONS HIDE LING

Empire Approves Protection of Slayer of Elsie Sigel, According to Denver Orientals.

Denver, Col. — That Leon Ling, slayer of Elsie Sigel in New York, never will be found through the assistance of his countrymen or the Chinese government is stated by Chinese here. His protection, it is said, was approved by the empire after the report of the consul at New York had been received.

A Chinese newspaper, having the unofficial sanction of the Chinese government, has reached Denver, in which the report of the Chinese consul in New York is printed in full.

This report followed an investigation made by the consul at the direction of the authorities at Peking. The report after citing the facts of the case as generally known, states that it has been discovered that Elsie Sigel, fearing disgrace, went to Leon Ling's room seeking aid, and in a moment of desperation took her own life by poison. Ling, the report states, was absent at the time and found the dead body of the girl upon the bed upon his return. Frightened by the discovery, he called Chung Sing, says the report, who advised him that, should he tell the truth to the police regarding the finding of the body he would not be believed and probably would be lynched. Frightened by this view of the case, Ling adopted desperate efforts to dispose of the body and conceal his own whereabouts.

NAME A NEW SHAH

SULTAN AHMED MIRZA ASCENDS PERSIAN THRONE WHEN FATHER FLEES.

VICTORY FOR NATIONALISTS

Ruler a Minor and Azad Ul Mulk Is Proclaimed Regent — Dethroned Monarch Refugee in Russian Legation, Protected by Czar's Troops.

Teheran.—The war of the Nationalists for a new rule in Persia was perfected Saturday when the crown prince, Sultan Ahmed Mirza, who was proclaimed shah Friday, was placed on the throne abdicated by Mohamed Ali. It is now believed the fighting will cease.

Mohamed Ali has taken refuge in the Russian summer legation at Zerzende where he is under the protection of detachments of Cossacks and Sepoys, dispatched to Zerzende by the Russian and British diplomatic representatives.

The new shah is yet in his minority, and Azard ul Mulk, head of the Kajar family, has been appointed regent. Sipahdar, one of the most active leaders of the movement, has taken office as minister of war, and governor of Teheran. Gen. Liakhoff, through whose negotiations with the Nationalists the surrender was effected, was escorted by mounted Bakhtiari riflemen to the parliament building and was greeted with loud applause by the people. He was informed that he might remain temporarily in command of the Cossack brigade provided he strictly obeyed the orders of the war minister. This arrangement was communicated to the British and Russian legations.

The shops and private houses occupied by the shah's soldiers have been plundered and the residence of the manager of the Indo-European Telegraph Company has been looted.

St. Petersburg.—The Russian foreign office received a dispatch Friday night from M. Sabelin, charge d'affaires at Teheran, saying the shah had taken refuge at the Russian summer legation at Zerzende. The shah was accompanied by his wife and one of his sons and a small party of loyal adherents, and his action was in accordance with an arrangement previously worked out by the Russian and British legations.

M. Sabelin immediately informed the British diplomatic representative of the shah's arrival and a convoy of Sepoys was forthwith dispatched to Zerzende. During the shah's stay at that place protection will be furnished by a joint detachment of Cossacks and Sepoys.

The full strength of the Russian expedition is now at Kasvin and, if necessary, the cavalry could get to Teheran in two days. The foreign office is under the impression that a detachment probably will be required, not so much to protect the shah or to oppose the Bakhtiari tribesmen as to handle the street mobs and the Teheran rabble, which is bent on pillage. The troops inevitably will be sent in if a single Russian is killed or if a foreign mission requests protection. In this event the role of the troops would be confined to police duties. Both the Russian officers and the officials of the Russian legation at Teheran have been enjoined to remain strictly neutral in internal affairs.

THREE KILLED IN COLLISION

Open Switch Is Responsible for Wreck on C. & E. I. Railroad Near Champaign, Ill.

Champaign, Ill. — Three men were killed and two injured in a head-on collision between south-bound passenger train No. 23 and north-bound train No. 26 on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad at Royal, near here, yesterday.

The dead:

W. E. Barker, engineer, Chicago.

Nelson Paulson, fireman, Villa Grove.

F. H. Hollenbeck, express messenger, Chicago.

An open switch was responsible for the wreck. Passenger train No. 26 was on the siding to permit No. 23 to pass. The latter took the switch traveling at the rate of 50 miles an hour. The impact was terrific. Engine No. 23 was smashed and the front end of the express car was crushed like an eggshell. The damage to the engine of No. 26 was small and the express car on the south-bound train was the only one to leave the track. Aside from a severe shaking up the passengers on both trains escaped without injury.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 1923 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

Big Democratic Barbecue Will Be Held in Louisville, Sept. 25 and 26, and Plans Are Being Made for Record-Breaking Crowd.

Louisville, Ky.—Former Mayor Chas. F. Grainger has accepted the chairmanship of the general committee which will have charge of all the arrangements for the big democratic barbecue to be given here September 25 and 26. Plans are being made for a record-breaking crowd. Marching clubs from Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and other cities will be invited to participate in the parade, which, the promoters say, will be the biggest ever given here.

COMMITTEE SPLITS

On Question as to How County and Judicial Tickets Are to Be Selected.

Alexandria, Ky.—The Campbell county democratic executive committee, in a hot session held there, split badly on the question as to how the county and judicial district tickets are to be selected for the coming fall election. As a result, both a primary and convention were ordered, and the state central committee will have to straighten out the tangle in which the local democratic party finds itself as a result of the inability of the party leaders to agree. The primary adherents fixed August 28 as the time for holding their election, while those favoring a convention decided on July 24. They also decided that the convention should be held at Alexandria.

CINCINNATI MAN OFFERS

To Supply Lexington with Water if City Can Not Arrange with Old Company.

Lexington, Ky.—A new angle in Lexington's water contract problem was opened when George R. Scrugham, of Cincinnati, accompanied by Engineers E. T. Gwynn, of Delaware, O., and T. R. Spencer, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Attorneys Rogers and Kurtz, of Cincinnati, appeared upon the scene with the declaration that he has gilt-edged financial backing and would be glad to cut into the water-supplying business here, if the Lexington Hydraulic and Manufacturing Co. which owns the local reservoirs, pumping station and distributing mains, and the city of Lexington can not come to terms.

AUDITOR WILL DEMAND RETURN

To Treasury of Moneys Paid to Assessors in Excess of Amount Due Them.

Frankfort, Ky.—Acting upon the advice of Assistant Attorney-General John F. Lockett, Auditor Frank P. James will make demands on the assessors of the various counties in Kentucky to return to the Treasury the money that has been paid to them in the past in excess of the amount due them under the statutes. It is said that a test case will be made against the assessor of Fayette county for the years of 1903-1906, inclusive. The amount to be sued for in this case is $1,124.61.

Louisville, Ky.—A "water filter" dinner, to be the biggest banquet ever given in Louisville, is to be arranged in honor of President Sebastian Zorn, of the board of waterworks, and all his fellow officers and engineers, in celebration of the completion of Louisville's big $1,000,000 filter plant.

FIGURES TELL TALE

HERE IS LUCID EXPLANATION OF TARIFF JUGGLERY.

Discussion All Centered on the "Big" Schedules Where Oppressive Indirect Taxation Is Hidden—Trusts in Impregnable Position.

The average tariff taxes collected from American consumers has been about $300,000,000 per year, during the last three years. The largest sum ever collected in one year was $329,000,000 in 1907.

Fully three-fourths of this enormous total is realized on a small group of schedules. Twelve articles, or groups of articles alone paid $260,000,000 tariff taxes in 1907. These were sugar, cotton, tobacco, manufactures of fibers, manufactures of silk, manufactures of wool, raw wool, wines and liquors, iron and steel, china and earthenware, drugs and chemicals, fruits and nuts.

Sugar alone paid $60,000,000 duty in 1908; cotton manufactures, $39,000,000; leaf tobacco, $22,000,000; manufactures of fibers, $22,000,000; manufactures of silk, $20,000,000; manufactures of wool, $20,000,000, and raw wool, $16,500,000. The proportion is about the same each year. Manufactures of iron and steel now average $12,000,000 a year.

In these figures we have a lucid explanation of tariff juggling in both house and senate. All the fierce fighting has been on the "big" schedules. Naturally so, because it is in these schedules that the bulk of oppressive indirect tariff taxation is hidden.

The sugar and tobacco trusts did not even have to put up a serious fight. Their position in the big revenue-producing class shielded them, and they have had a steady buffer against tariff reduction in the demands of native producers. Cottons, fibers, silk and wool have furnished the real battleground.

Iron, steel and lumber are a long way from the top of the list as revenue-producers. That is, artificial taxes in those commodities are less in volume. That may explain why Aldrich and his high tariff lieutenants made a less vigorous fight when those schedules were moderately cut.

The New Customs Court.

Early in the present session of congress Senator Aldrich made an appeal for retrenchment and economy. His presentation of the case for reduction of expenditures was strong and timely, yet the proposed administration customs measure which he is supporting provides for the creation of a new court, to consist of five judges at salaries of $10,000 a year each, to pass upon questions of disputed rates of duty. The annual expenses of such a court would not fall short of $100,000, and its judges would be expected, at least by the standpatters, to fix tariff rates at the highest top notch. One would think that there is ample machinery already in the customs house and treasury department to fix tariff rates, but Senator Aldrich wants more machinery to make sure that none of the sacred maximum duties are sacrificed. For this he would create a $100,000 new court, notwithstanding his desire for economy.

Republican Tariff Plank Is Fraud.

Democrats of the house were only wasting time in trying to get through a resolution calling upon the secretary of state for reports on the cost of manufactured products in foreign countries other than Germany, from which the information has already been obtained. Difference between cost of production at home and abroad being the corner-stone of the Republican tariff platform, this information would have been sought last winter by the house committee on ways and means if the Republican party had had any intention of doing what it promised. At the same time the ways and means committee would have sought the corresponding figures of cost for the United States from the department of commerce and labor. The Republican tariff plank has been a fraud from the time it was written.

Result of New England Energy.

Driven from the ocean, we of New England deserve praise, not blame, that we have turned with undiminished courage to a new scene and won prosperity on the land. Thus, shut out from her natural element, the whole energy of New England went into manufacturing, and we have built up great industries and made populous and thriving states.—Senator Lodge.

Not all the energy of New England went into manufactures. A good deal of it has been devoted to tariff schemes to make the rest of the country pay tribute to the manufactures established.

It is rather strange that no reports have come from Africa telling how many tsetse flies have fallen before Mr. Roosevelt. Are the cables in working order?

Sole leather is sold by weight, and the cost of the raw hide is from 50 to 70 per cent. of the finished or tanned product. When the highbinders increase the duty on hides they add to the cost of every pair of shoes made in the United States.

The causes of mutiny in the Philippines are exactly what the causes of mutiny were in British India—in general, denial of the right of self-rule; in particular, denial of high promotion of native troops. Our "eastern proconsuls" have learned nothing.

NATION TOO LONG ON SPREE.

Surely Time an End Came to the Reckless Extravagance of the Dominant Party.

Jefferson said that the accounts of the United States government should be as simple as those of a well-kept farm. So they are in some respects. For one thing, the income and the outgo, though expressed in terms of hundreds of millions, are as plain as the earnings and expenditures of a clerk or mechanic.

If a clerk or mechanic earned $1,000 a year and spent $1,200 he would soon be forced to discover new sources of income or get into trouble with his creditors. Uncle Sam is in the same predicament. Though his income is in the neighborhood of $600,000,000 per annun, he is spending much more than that, and that is why we are hearing of new taxes at Washington.

Men sometimes become reckless and, going on sprees, indulge in many extravagances from which they must recover by economy. So nations sometimes go to war and draw down their surplus and become involved in debt. If they do not return to the old habits of life they must impose more taxes or suspend payment. The United States government spent more money last year than it did during the year of the Spanish war, and almost as much as the average yearly expenditure during the four years of civil war.

When is the great national spree on which we entered during the Roosevelt administration to come to an end?

The Secret Revealed.

The secret of the Roosevelt administration's attitude toward the sugar trust is finally revealed in an article from the pen of the Hon. Bwana Tumbo himself, printed in the current issue of the Outlook:

"There must be law to control the big men, and therefore especially the big corporations, in the industrial world, in the interest of our industrial democracy of to-day. The law must be efficient, and therefore it must be administered by executive officers, and not by lawsuits in the courts."

This explains everything. In order to proceed against the trust for its wanton violation of the Sherman law it was necessary to have a lawsuit "in the courts." The trust would have had to be tried like any other offender. Punishment could not be administered offhand "by executive officers." Obviously the only thing to do was to ignore Mr. Earle's evidence and give the trust immunity; otherwise the Roosevelt administration would have placed itself in the deplorable position of countenancing due process of law under the constitution.

Fight or Surrender.

The signs and portents are ominous of an accommodation between the president and the standpat leaders in congress under the terms of which he will come out shorn of the honors as well as the spoils of war. There can be no serious claim that the senate project is other than a mockery of what the president has repeatedly insisted that revision must be in order to meet the equities of the case and retain for his party the respect of the country.

So to pretend is to add insult to injury, so far as the public is concerned, but Mr. Taft cannot afford to advance a plea which even Aldrich, Lodge and Penrose are ashamed to hide behind. The issue as presented has been interpreted once and again by the president himself. There is no middle ground for him between a fight on full vindication and total surrender to the extremists.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

Stand Pat Lunacy.

This from the foremost Republican protectionist newspaper—the New York Tribune:

"The restoration by the senate of the duty on hides was to be expected. It is in line with the general policy of the finance committee and its followers to nullify the reductions in rates made in the house bill and to reshape that bill in the exact image of the Dingley law. . . .

"The victory of the finance committee only emphasizes the 'standpat' character of its tariff program. No duty levied by the Dingley law is less defensible on grounds of rational protection than the duty on hides."

If in the light of such protests from their own section of their own party these senators cannot foresee the political results of such a tariff program they must be past praying for.

Are they besotted with self-sufficiency—or do they really want to provide a clamor for Roosevelt in 1912?

Bad Faith Charged.

Mr. Taft is not representing the people or keeping his party faith in his relations with Cannon and Aldrich on the tariff and the other issues involved with it, although this is undoubtedly the chief test of his administration and the one on which he will have to make good his attitude at the next election. He is laying up trouble for himself and is preparing the materials for a reactionary movement of public sentiment which may carry into power some dangerous radical. The country is weary of political and industrial strife and would be glad of a rest, but it will not tolerate a policy that strengthens the power of the narrow and ungenerous bosses who have so long controlled at the capitol.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Senator Carter threatens that if the tariff is taken off hides it must be taken off shoes. Why not? London is full of American shops selling American shoes in competition with English free-trade shoes.

NOTICE—There will be a lecture at Hughes' Chapel at Beaver Lick Wednesday evening, July 28th, for the benefit of the church, an admission of twenty cents being charged. The lecture will be delivered by Rev. B. M. Nelson, who is an orator of the most pleasing type, and he will take as his subject, "The Dream of Life." Those who attend will be grandly entertained with a delightful evening.

Walton Lodge, No. 106, Knights of Pythias, elected officers for the ensuing term last Thursday night as follows: Chancellor Commander, Everett McElroy, Vice Chancellor, Thos. F. Curley; Prelate, W. D. Kennedy; Master of Arms, Wm. C. Moxley; Master of Work, John M. Stamler; Inner Guard, W. O. Rouse; Outer Guard, Len J. Stephenson. The installation of officers takes place Thursday, July 22d, at 8 o'clock p. m.

J. Waite Cross, who has been given a position with The Cape Well Horse Nail Co., of Hartford, Conn., as traveling salesman at a good salary, left Monday for St. Louis, Mo., to assume the duties of his position. Mr. Cross was in the blacksmith business here with his father, Jas. Cross, and is a young man of many good qualities, and his many friends extend to him their best wishes for success in his new position.

C. Presley Adams, who has been in the office of Attorney J. G. Tomlin and John L. Vest, resigned his position and left for Cincinnati Monday, to accept a position as clerk in the Gibson House. Mr. Adams is a fine young gentleman and was greatly appreciated by his employers, but it was a matter of a more lucrative position, and his employers cheerfully gave their consent because they wanted him to have every opportunity toward a successful future.

The teachers for the Walton High School have been elected for the ensuing term and are as follows: H. C. Wayman, principal; C. O. Morgan, assistant principal; Misses Nannie Chambers, Helen Dickey, of Union; Anna Hudson, Jean Chambers. The prospects are for a very successful term as all of the teachers are thoroughly enlisted in their work. The only change made was the election of Miss Helen Dickey to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. Mary Rouse Harris.

E. M. Johnson, who resides in Kenton county, near Walton, had a sample of his growing tobacco crop here last Thursday, consisting of a leaf that had become accidentally broken off that was 20x34 inches. Mr. Johnson has seven acres of tobacco, and his tenant Frank Preston, has about three acres, and all of it is of uniform size, and four acres of the crop has already been topped. The tobacco is of the yellow twist bud type, and the sample of leaf exhibited by Mr. Johnson is very fine in texture and has a small fibre, and his crop ought to be a premium one in price.

The Consolidated Telephone Company now has splendid service on the long distance line to Cincinnati, the Bell Telephone Company having put in a complete copper wire circuit, at a heavy expense, but the service is simply perfect. Wm. T. Black, the superintendent of the Consolidated Telephone Company, who looks after the territory in this quarter, and its president, N. E. Riddell, who has headquarters at Burlington, are constantly on the alert for the best improvements so as to give their patrons first-class service in every way, and the Consolidated has the reputation of being the best local line in Kentucky.

Thomas Martin, who has charge of the interests of the Cincinnati Suburban Telephone Company, and R. R. Gleason, who has control of a department of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company, both with headquarters at Cincinnati, spent last Friday here perfecting their system at Walton, and they have their service here now up to the highest standard. Both are very pleasant gentlemen, and are "top-notchers" in their profession, and through them much of the good service of the country district is being enjoyed by the citizens, and their visits was a pleasure to those who met them.

Dr. T. M. Baker, of Louisville, was here, Saturday, enroute to Big Bone Springs to spend a couple of days with his wife, who has been the guest of friends and relatives there for several weeks. Dr. Baker was born and raised at Big Bone Springs, and everybody there loves him for his genial, kindly nature, and his broad, manly instincts. Dr. Baker is the chairman of the Board of Health in Louisville, and while he has a fight on hand to improve the conditions of that city for the preservation of the health of its citizens, he is doing a heroic work for the people, and, besides having their hearty approval, he is recognized as being the best health officer the Falls City has ever had.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Walton Christian church, had a most enjoyable outing last Thursday afternoon at the home of Misses Alicia and Lillie Neumeister in Kenton county, about two miles from Walton. The crowd was taken to the grounds in the Walton band wagon by A. M. Edwards, and the trip both ways was most enjoyable because of the jolly people associated together. The afternoon was one round of pleasure, made so by the charming manner in which the Misses Neumeister entertained their guests. Appetizing refreshments were served in abundance, and the afternoon passed all too quickly with its pleasures and enjoyments, and all were loth to return home as the evening shades fell. The Society feels more than grateful to the Misses Neumeister for the very happy afternoon spent at their home.

E. C. Smith, of Carrollton, was here Monday of last week representing the Huntington Produce Company in their suit against the Kenton Pool Committee on the wool, which the Huntington Produce Co. bought and never received or paid for, excepting about $1,050 which the committee held and refused to give up when the Produce Company failed to qualify in the final transaction. The wool was finally sold to Sable & Co., of Louisville at a reduced price, but with the $1,000 from the Produce Company the wool growers will realize what the Huntington Produce Company had agreed to pay, 34½ cents per pound. The Huntington Company has brought suit for the money they paid and E. C. Smith and Geo. Winslow, of Carrollton, are their attorneys, while J. G. Tomlin and Jno. L. Vest, of Walton, represent the farmers' interests. To an observer it looks like the Produce Company took the wool growers for a lot of "easy marks," but they missed it greatly in this instance as the wool growers were most ably represented by their committee E. L. Mann, L. C. Northcutt, Joseph B. Coleman, and Joseph Kaub, and but for their intelligence and prompt action the wool growers would have been losers all along the line.

Rev. Bradley conducted religious services at the county infirmary last Sunday afternoon, for the benfit of the inmates.

HEADACHE AND EYESTRAIN

About one-half the cases who have called on me the past two weeks came located of headache. Although their vision was fairly good, they felt that eyestrain must be at the bottom of the trouble, and came with the cause removed. GLASSES even when long standing, POSITIVELY proven by us every day.

Fletcher Clore and Dr. Hays attended the big fish fry at Union Wednesday. When Mr. Clore returned in the evening he reported a big time and never saw so much to eat in all his life.

The men that drilled the Hebron well and moved their drilling machinery to R. C. Gaines' a short time since, were down and drilled his well this week. They went to the depth of 65 feet and got a good supply of water.

W. B. Graves, of Bullittsville, commenced, Monday morning, painting the barn of R. C. Gaines that the carpenter has completed. Mr. Hossman has the second barn done, except putting up the stalls, making and hanging doors.

Great attraction up on the flats. Blackberries are there. Some have come out from Petersburg to pick. If I owned the farms I would not allow pickers from a distance. There isn't as many as the people here need, and they are the ones entitled to them.

John Cropper just informed us that at a depth of 25 feet the drillers struck rock. The last day's drilling he heard them say "the rock was getting softer." He didn't know whether they got through the rock. There is now 40 feet of water.

Carl Price's father, of Erlanger, came down Friday and stopped for a few minutes' chat as he passed. He said, "when I get the RECORDER the first read is Idlewild for two reasons —I know nearly all in the neighborhood, and your items are spicy and interesting besides."

A little girl here, who is of a studious turn of mind, and has continued her studies since the close of school, said a few days since, "Mamma, I am learning to punctuate." "How is it done?" asked her mamma. "Well, when you write scat or shoofly, you put a stick pin after it but when you ask a question you put a button hook after it," said the little girl.

"Good oats of P. A. Weaver and John Elstun," that Hathaway tells us about, but nothing to brag on. Pshaw! Fletcher Clore had a piece as heavy that 17 mules were set up against an old house, oats and house would have gone down together. It took two men to handle a bundle. Had to commence shocking on the outside of the field to find room enough.

UNION.

R. B. Huey, agent for the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company, is recovering from a badly sprained ankle. During the rush in his hay harvest the boys would take him to the meadow in the morning, and put him on the machine, which he would continue to drive until they saw proper to take him off.

Lee Rice, of Idlewild, and Ed Botts, of Plattsburg, passed through Burlington early last Wednesday morning in the latter's new runabout and behind one of his steppers, enroute to the doctors' fish fry at Uunion. They were on the scence early and stayed late, and occupied a position among the head of the class of the most liberal consumers of fish.

Everett Walton, who lives two miles west of Burlington, was a caller at this office, yesterday. He and his neighbor, W. I. Rouse, were the original investers in the wonderful Wonderberry, in this part of the county. They supplied their neighbors, Edgar Berkshire, Irvin Rue and others with stock, and they have devoted much time and labor to the propagation of the berry, and this fact is enjoyed by Mr. Walton, who says the Wonderberry is nothing on earth but the nightshade that can be found growing most anywhere.

Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was in constant danger from wild beasts. Today the danger as shown by A. W. Brown, of Alexander, Mo., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Lungs, Colds, obstinate Coughs, and prevent Pneumonia, it's the best medine on earth. 50c and $1. Guaranteed by Bradler's Drug Store, Erlanger. Trial bottle free.

Esquire Solon Early Dead.

Esquire Solon Early died at his home in Petersburg, about 9 o'clock last Sunday night, after an illness of several months. He was in his 58th year, and had been a member of the Boone County Fiscal Court for a long time. Mr. Early up to the time his health failed him, was the most prominent business man in Petersburg, and liberally contributed liberally towards the success of every enterprise inaugurated there in the last thirty years. He was also prominent in fraternity circles being a Mason, Odd-Fellow and a Knight of Pythias, and took active interest in each order. After a short service at the house by Revs. Carter and Bradley, local ministers, at 10 a. m., yesterday, the Odd-Fellows and Knights of Pythias, took charge of the remains, and interred them according to their beautiful and impressive ceremenies in Petersburg cemetery. In the death of Mr. Early the county has lost a useful citizen, whose place in public affairs it will be hard to fill.

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick, of Danforth, Me. "Although past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger

Favored State Wide Prohibition.

Just before the adjournment of the recent Chatauqua at Walton, ringing resolutions were adopted indorsing State Wide Prohibition and taking to task the Louisville Commercial Club for its activity in opposition to that proposition. THE NATION'S TRIBUTE TO ITS WARRIORS

By EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT 1909 BY W.A. PATTERSON

WASHINGTON.—In the fall the Grant monument in the Botanical garden of Washington will be unveiled and dedicated. It is to be the most imposing statue in the capital city, it, it is said, to do full justice to the memory of the foremost soldier who fought on the side of the Union.

The pedestal for the Grant memorial is already in place and is nearing completion. Its base is a huge square of stone with smaller stones superimposed to that the ascent to the statue proper will be by a succession of steps, though it is perhaps needless to say that the pedestal will not be given over to the uses of a stairway. At each corner of the base there is a lion couchant. The beasts have been shrouded to keep their bronze beauty hidden from the eyes of the multitude until the day comes to show the memorial in its completion.

The union general will be shown mounted on one of his favorite horses. It is said that the model of the horse shows lines that are as near perfection as art can make them. If the general's mount is as spirited and effective as the bronze horse shown in the memorial to Gen. Thomas on Thomas circle in this city it will leave nothing to be desired. The horse of Gen. Thomas is said to be the most perfect creature ever cast in metal.

The commission which had in charge the memorial to Gen. Grant had many difficulties to overcome before a site was selected. There was great objection to the placing of the statue in the Botanical garden, which is directly across the street from the grounds of the capitol at the Pennsylvania avenue corner where the peace monument stands. The Washington people, like the people in many other cities of the country, do not take kindly to the erection of stone and bronze memorials in what may be called the public pleasure grounds. They want them all to be placed in the little circles and squares at the intersections of the streets and avenues of the city.

After many meetings and after listening to many protests, the site in the Botanical garden was chosen and approved. In order to make room for the statue two magnificent elms had to be removed. The people mourned the loss of the elms, or rather mourned their prospective loss, for it was decided to transplant the trees, a tremendous undertaking, but one that finally was accomplished. It is too early yet to tell whether the transplanted elms will live or die in their new beds.

It has often been a source of wonder that no statue of Gen. Grant appears in the Memorial hall of the capitol, where each state has memorials of two of its representative sons, or it ought to be said daughters, for one woman appears in Memorial hall in marble.

Grant was born in Ohio, but he went to the war from Galena, Ill., and his first command during the early days of civil strife was an Illinois regiment. Lincoln is also claimed by Illinois, but the legislature of the state in selecting persons to be honored in Memorial hall at the capitol chose Gen. James A. Shields and Miss Willard, who was the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

In a short time Virginia will place in Memorial hall a statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee. There have been those who have thought and said that both Lee and Grant, the two great commanders in the civil war, should have places in Memorial hall, but as neither Ohio, the place of Grant's birth, nor Illinois, the place of his adoption, has seen fit to honor him the chances are that his statue never will find a place in the hall, which once was used as the assembly place of the representatives of congress and which is now given over to the purposes of remembrance of the nation's great.

The statue of Gen. Sherman, an equestrian memorial, was unveiled five years ago. It faces the Treasury building from the south and it is one of the most notable public memorials in the city of Washington, although it is true that fault has been found with a few minor details of the execution.

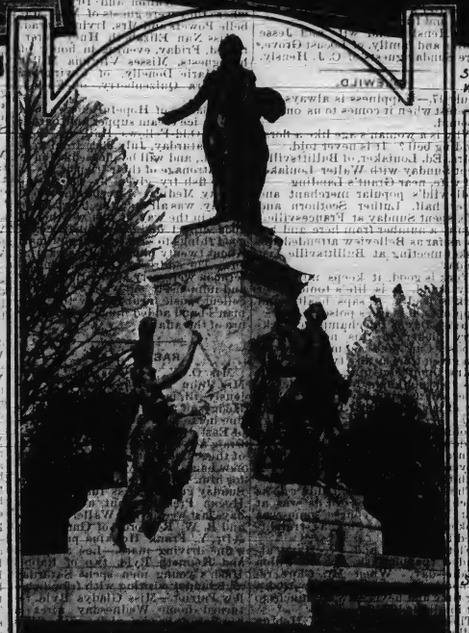
Sheridan's statue, representing "Little Phil" as he appeared at the battle of Winchester when rallying his troops to turn again to the attack, stands in a little green circle on Massachusetts avenue. The Sheridan memorial has been in place less than a year. The widow of the Shenandoah campaigner lives in a house the windows of which overlook the memorial of her husband.

It is curious perhaps that the memorials to the three greatest generals of the civil war who fought on the side of the north were not erected until many years after soldiers of less fame had been remembered. The statue of Gen. McPherson has stood for years in the public square named for this soldier who was killed in the battle of Atlanta. Gen. Thomas, "the rock of Chickamauga," was remembered in bronze nearly 30 years ago. Admirals Farragut and Dupont have represented the sea service of their country in memorial form in Washington for years. The statue of John A. Logan, the civilian soldier, has had a place in the nation's capital for a long time. Hancock was not forgotten and neither were some eight or ten other officers whose fame was bright, but which never shone with the extraordinary luster of that of Grant or Sherman.

There are scores of memorials of various kinds in Washington. Foreign nations are represented. In Lafayette square are the statues of the Frenchmen Lafayette and Rochambeau, who came to the aid of the colonies in their struggle against Great Britain.

Before long there will be two other statues in the square, one to the honor of Pulaski, and another to Steuben. When these memorials are in place Lafayette square will contain five bronze figures, Lafayette, Rochambeau, Pulaski, Steuben and Andrew Jackson. The Jackson statue stands in the center of the park, while each of the Frenchmen has a corner to himself. The other corners will be coupled by the Pole and the German.

Emperor William about six years ago presented to the United States a statue of Frederick the Great. It was dedicated with impressive ceremonies Nov. 19, 1904. It was unveiled by the Baroness Speck von Sternberg, wife of the German ambassador, and was presented on behalf of the emperor by his personal envoy, Prince Hatzfeldt, German ambassador. President Roosevelt made the principal address of the day, accepting the bronze figure on behalf of the American public. Other addresses were made by Lieut. Gen. Chaffee, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Gillespie, of the general staff and master of ceremonies, and by Lieut. Gen. von Loewenfeld, one of the special commissioners sent to the unveiling by the kaiser. An address was also made by Charlemagne Tower, American ambassador to Germany.



Seldom has the national capital witnessed a more brilliant and distinguished assembly than that which gathered on the esplanade of the army war college around the pedestal of Emperor William's gift. On the president's stand were seated the president and the members of his cabinet, the German ambassador and Baroness Speck von Sternberg and other distinguished persons. On the stand to the right and left of the statue were the officers of the army and navy in full dress uniform, members of the supreme court, members of congress and a number of distinguished invited guests.

Germany's gift created considerable unfavorable comment throughout the country on the part of the foreign population with no particular love for the emperor. The Poles were especially critical and Polish societies throughout the country met to protest against the United States accepting the present from royalty. The local Polish societies joined in the protest. There were many others who wondered what Emperor William was aiming at by his favor [illegible] except in a few instances in a form of good-natured [illegible] resentment.

On the afternoon of January 10, 1906, an attempt was made to blow up the statue of Frederick the Great. No serious damage resulted and a third [illegible] who thought that a practical joker had been at work, but the force of the explosion was such as to show that the joke, if joke it were, was a decidedly serious matter. Threats had been made from time to time by anonymous letter writers to blow up the statue, but little attention was paid to them. The tenor of the written threats was to the effect that no monarch ought to be remembered in the [illegible]

WOMAN WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Troubles

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and a broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women, I felt sure it would help me and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Jos. C. Morgan, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 30 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate, write at once.

"A Cheap Skate."

"Joel Chandler Harris," said an Atlanta, used to write comic newspaper editorials. Sometimes he made fun of other editors in them, too.

"Simon Simpson, a rival editor in Mobile, having been made fun of, wrote angrily in his rage:

"'Joel Harris has been getting off some cheap wit at our expense.'

"Joel, on reading this, grabbed his pen and dashed off, quick as a flash, for next day's issue:

"'It must have been cheap, Simon, to be at your expense.'"

The Thrifty Scot.

A Scotsman and his wife were coming from Leith to London by boat. When off the Yorkshire coast a great storm arose and the vessel had several narrow escapes from foundering.

"Oh, Sandy," moaned his wife, "I'm na feard o' deein', but I dinna care to dee at sea."

"Dinna, think o' deein', noo," answered Sandy; "but when ye do, ye'd better be dreaded at sea than anywhere else."

"An' why, Sandy," asked his wife.

"Why?" exclaimed Sandy. "Because ye wouldn't cost sae muckle to bury."

Privilege of English Husband.

A wife who complained at the Marylebone police court in London the other day that her husband used abusive language to her was informed by Mr. Plowden that this was one of a husband's privileges.

"You must put up with it," the magistrate told her. "Better an abusive husband than no husband at all."

"But I have had so many years of this kind of thing," she protested.

"I cannot give you any redress," Mr. Plowden replied. "You must expect a certain amount of abuse in this world."

Doctor's Test of Food.

A doctor in Kansas experimented with his boy in a test of food and gives the particulars. He says:

"I naturally watch the effect of different foods on patients. My own little son, a lad of four, had been ill with pneumonia and during his convalescence did not seem to care for any kind of food.

"I knew something of Grape-Nuts and its rather fascinating flavor, and particularly of its nourishing and nerve-building powers, so I started the boy on Grape-Nuts and found from the first dish that he liked it.

"His mother gave it to him steadily and he began to improve at once. In less than a month he had gained about eight pounds and soon became so well and strong we had no further anxiety about him.

"An old patient of mine, 73 years old, came down with serious stomach trouble and before I was called had got so weak he could eat almost nothing and was in a terrible condition. He had tried almost every kind of food for the sick without avail.

"I immediately put him on Grape-Nuts with good, rich milk and just a little pinch of sugar. He exclaimed when I came next day 'Why doctor I never ate anything so good or that made me feel so much stronger.'

"I am pleased to say that he got well on Grape-Nuts, but he had to stick to it for two or three weeks, then he began to branch out a little with rice or an egg or two. He got entirely well in spite of his almost hopeless condition. He gained 22 pounds in two months which at his age is remarkable.

"I could quote a list of cases where Grape-Nuts has worked wonders."

THE FIERY TRIAL

Story of the Three Holy Children and Their Song

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyrighted, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Egner.)

Based on the Apocryphal Book of the Song of the Three Holy Children

The Book as Part of Daniel.—The Greek translations of Daniel, like that of Esther, contain several pieces which are not found in the original text. The most important of these additions are contained in the Apocrypha of the English Bible under the titles of "The Song of the Three Holy Children," "The History of Susanna," and the "History of Bel and the Dragon." The first of these pieces is incorporated in the canonical book of Daniel. After the three confessors [illegible] the furnace (Dan. 3:24) they are represented as praying to God and singing the [illegible] which we have in the Song of the Three Children (3:26-45), which is interrupted [illegible] "with one mouth," raise a triumphant song of praise, which in other parts (3:46) has been used as a hymn in the Christian church since the fourth century. The additions are found in both the Greek text of the LXX and Theodotion, in the Old Latin and Vulgate, and in the existing Syriac and Arabic versions. On the other hand there is no evidence that they ever formed part of the Hebrew text, and they were originally wanting in the Septuagint codex Vaticanus. Nor is there any other reason to suppose that they were ever part of the Aramaic original, but the character of the fragments themselves points rather the hand of an Alexandrine writer; and it is not unlikely that the [illegible] name of Daniel wrought up traditions which were already current and adapted them to his work.

PART OF THE SONG.

(Used as Song in Christian Church Since Fourth Century.)

O let the earth bless the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye mountains and hills, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O all ye things that grow on the earth, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye fountains, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye seas and rivers, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye whales and all that move in the waters, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O all ye fowls of the air, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O all ye beasts and cattle, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O Israel, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye priests of the Lord, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye servants of the Lord, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye spirits and souls of the righteous, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O ye holy and humble men of heart, bless ye the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever.

O give thanks unto the Lord, because he is gracious: for his mercy endureth for ever.

O all ye that worship the Lord, bless the God of gods: praise him and give him thanks: for his mercy endureth for ever.

THE STORY.

BLESSED are the ministry and discipline of the trials and afflictions of life for out of them is born faith's song of hope and trust.

So is the child of God able to declare in all ages of the world's history.

Centuries ago when Babylon was in the height of her power, and she had stretched out her mighty arm and had crushed the fair Jerusalem and had taken her people and placed them as captives in the province to the east, there were three of those Jews in the service of the king named Ananias, Azarias and Misael, according to the name given them by the king and recorded in the Book of Daniel: Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego.

Now it came to pass that the mighty king, Nebuchadnessar, had caused to be made a great image of gold with head of fine gold and set it up in the great plain before the city. And when he had gathered all the people in that place, having arranged a great feast in honor of the image, he commanded that the people should bow down before the image and pay it reverence as the true god.

So it was that as the sounds of the music all the people threw themselves prostrate before the great image which sparkled and glittered with superb glory in the brilliancy of the noonday sun.

And in accordance with the command all the people were there bowed down, and as the sound of the music burst forth every one in that vast throng fell to the ground in worship.

But there were three who refused to bow down to the image and worship it should be cast into a fiery furnace, and when it had been reported to him that these three Jews had refused to pay homage to the splendid image, his wrath was kindled mightily and he commanded that the furnace be heated seven times as hot as was its wont, and that if these Jews refused to bow when the music again sounded, that they should be thrown therein.

Again the great silence as the multitude waited the incantation. Again the burst of music, again the prostration before the image, and again the three erect forms in the midst of that great concourse of people.

With fierce haste did the great warlords of the king who had been assigned the task descend upon these men, and having bound them securely proceeded to the mouth of the furnace from which in plain view of all the people could be seen the leaping flames waiting to devour the luckless Jews who had dared to disobey the king.

"One last chance," came the word from the king but before they were cast within the flame. "Bow down or not bow down to the image and thus escape an awful death."

"Nay!" replied Ananias, Azarias and Misael, as with one voice, "we dare bow down and worship none save the God of Heaven. We will worship only him. He is able to deliver us from the hand of the king and from the flames of the furnace, but if not, be it known that we will not bow down worship the image of the king, and if we perish, we perish."

Having said this the servants of the king, being men of great stature and mighty in strength, seized the three men, and raising them far above their heads they ran with great speed toward the furnace, and then with one mighty effort tossed them into the very midst of the flames, which with fiendish eagerness, seemed to leap forth to receive them.

The eyes of the people were intent upon watching the Jews which were cast into the furnace and for the moment those who had cast them therein were forgotten, but now a cry of horror arose from the throng as the scorched and blackened forms of the men were seen lying before the furnace. And while panic seized the people at the sight of the work of the flames, the three men which had been cast into the furnace walked in the midst of the fire, praising God and blessing his name, for they were not touched by the flames.

Then Azarias stood up and prayed: "Blessed art thou, O Lord God of our fathers; thy name is worthy to be praised and glorified for evermore. For thou art righteous in all things that thou hast done to us; yea, true are all thy works, thy ways are right and all thy judgments true. Truth in all things which thou hast brought upon us, and upon the holy city of our fathers, even Jerusalem, thou hast executed true judgment; for, according to truth and judgment didst thou bring all these things upon us because of our sins. And now didst deliver us into the hands of the lawless enemies, and now we cannot open our mouths. We are become a shame and reproach to thy servants, and to them that worship thee. Yet deliver us not up wholly, for thy name's sake, neither disannual thou thy covenant. Put us not to shame but deal with us after thy loving kindness, and according to the multitude of thy mercies. Deliver us also according to thy marvelous works, and give glory to thy name, O Lord; and let all them that do thy servants hurt be ashamed. And let them be confounded in all their power and might, and let their strength be broken; and let them know that thou are Lord, the only God, glorious over all the world."

Now it came to pass that while Azarias prayed that the flames in the furnace burned with increased fury and leaping forth in great forking tongues of liquid fire, so that those standing nearest to the furnace like the three men who had cast the Jews into the furnace were stricken to the ground and consumed.

But the angel of the Lord came down into the oven together with Azarias, and his fellows, and smote the flame of the fire out of the oven, and made the midst of the oven as a had been a moist, whistling wind, so that the fire touched them not at all, neither did it hurt nor trouble them.

Then the three, as out of one mouth, praised, glorified and blessed God in the furnace, saying:

"Blessed art thou, O Lord God of our fathers, and to be praised and exalted above all for ever."

Working in the Kingdom.

"Through many tribulations," said the apostle missionaries to their Galatian converts, "we must enter into the kingdom of God." It was at the cost of bitter persecution that these Christians won from amongst the heathen in those days of beginnings, held fast to their new faith. But how glorious was the result of such suffering bravely endured, in the lives strong and noble which it produced!

We live in times as different from those as the modern threshing machine is from the rude tribulum. People do not, in our land, suffer for their religion in the same way as did the first followers of Christ. But through tribulation, sometimes sharp and severe, do human lives become worthy of the kingdom of God. There may be much in our present lot that is sad and saddening, but in the outcome of all God's chastening love, and amazing wisdom and power in Christ Jesus, it is all working together for good to those who love him.

URGES MEN IN THE KITCHEN.

Writer More Than Hints That as Cooks They Would Excel Fair Sex.

People who are rich enough to live at restaurants and grand hotels need little sympathy if they have poorly prepared foods. They are able to do better, but I am speaking of those who for economy and other reasons are led to seek the humblest places of abode and live at a much less expense. It may be that one reason for the lack of advance in cooking in this country is because it is supposed to be, at least in small families and hotels, exclusively the work of women.

There is no reason in the world why a woman should not be a good cook, and there is every reason in the world why she should be. But the sterner sex must not be debarred from this artistic employment. In France the number of men cooks is perhaps larger in proportion to the whole number than that of any other country in the world. I would not venture to offend the women readers of this article by suggesting that this, perhaps, may be the cause of the superior excellence of the French cooking. At any rate the masculine mind seems to be better adapted to attain the sublime heights of cookery than the feminine.

In this country, though, we must expect for many, many years to come that the principal part of the cooking in the household and in the small hotel and restaurant will be done by the women, and hence it is to this class that we must look for immediate and proper reform. When this profession is regarded with the same honor in this country as in France we may look to see a complete reform in the whole art of cooking and in the attitude of the people relating thereto.—Good Housekeeping.

Rats in Manitoba.

Consul-general John Edward Jones reports that Winnipeg is preparing for an active campaign against rats, which have already invaded Manitoba from the south, and are described as "marching on Winnipeg." Mr. Jones adds: "The people look with serious concern upon the subject. Recently the matter was taken before the board of control of Winnipeg with a view of devising ways and means to check the rodent advance. It was stated that the rats had appeared in the towns of Emerson and Gretna, Manitoba, a few miles north of the international boundary, and were trekking northward. All of the municipalities along the boundary are taking up the subject and some general plan will be devised to meet the situation. Western Canada, especially the grain belt, has ever been free from rats, and the farmers are much perturbed over their appearance and the threatened destruction of their harvested grain."

Footing It.

Two sad, dejected looking strangers met on the dusty road.

"Where are you going, friend?" asked one.

"Walking home," sighed the other.

"Where are you going?"

"Walking home."

There was a short silence.

"It seems that I am always walking home," said the first.

"Same here," complained the second.

"H'm! You are an actor, too, stranger?"

"No. I own a touring automobile that breaks down when you least expect it."

The Ultimate Consumer.

"Now, here," said the man in authority at the public library, "is a rare old book that cost us $250, and we mean to get it even at that."

"Lads of John Gutenberg!" exclaimed the frequent visitor. "Does anybody ever want to look at it?"

"No."

"Then, what satisfaction is there in having it on hand?"

"Why, you'll find in a hundred years from this that Librarian will find it here and will be half tickled to death to look it over."

CALLING DOWN THE BOASTER

Good Little Story Told by William Penn Nichols Will Strike a Spread-Eagleism.

"It was William Dean Howells," said a Chicago editor, "who first rebuked us Americans for our spread-eagleism, for our foolish boasting. I see that Mr. Howells has just joined a men's society for the promotion of woman suffrage. Trust him to be in the forefront always.

"I once heard Mr. Howells deliver a fourth of July oration in Maine. The orator positively boasted a good deal. He showed that some of our men boasters were even impious.

"He said that these spread-eagle boasters deserved the rebuke that the little child administered to the cackling hen that had just laid an egg. The child, angered by the hen's continuous cawk-cawk-cawk, cawk-cawk-cawk-cawk, shook his little finger at her and said:

"'You fink you're smart. But Dod made idder ess. You couldn't lay it.'"

SKIN ERUPTION CURED.

Was So Severe, Irritating and Painful That Little Sufferer Could Not Sleep—Scratched Constantly.

Cuticura Efficacy Clearly Proven.

"When about two and a half years old my daughter broke out on her hips and the upper parts of her legs with a very irritating and painful eruption. It began in October, the first I noticed was a little red surface and a constant desire on her part to scratch her limbs. She could not sleep and the eruptions got sore, and yellow water came out of them. I had two doctors treat her, but she grew worse under their treatment. Then I bought the Cuticura Remedies and only used them two weeks when she was entirely well. This was in February. She has never had another rough place on her skin, and she is now fourteen years old. Mrs. R. R. Whitaker, Winchester, Tenn., Sept. 22, 1908."

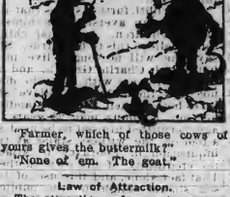
Pathos in a Fire Report.

In the annual report of the fire marshal of Kentucky the following extract is not without a suggestion of "Little Boy Blue:"



"Among the odds and ends of the attic, usually are vanished furniture, rags smeared with grease to take fire themselves, painting oils liable to take fire when the sun beats on the roof, and broken toys of children who are grown and gone away, or who went to sleep long ago."

Well, Not Very Often.

The little daughter of a Republican candidate for a local office down in Philadelphia, when told that her father had received the nomination, looked serious for a moment, then her wee voice trembled a bit as she exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma! do they often die of it?"

WHY, OF COURSE.

"Farmer, which of those cows of yours gives the buttermilk?"

"None of 'em. The goat."

Law of Attraction.

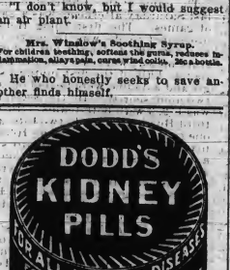
The attractions of men to women and women to men are full of the most perplexing inconsistencies and contradictions imaginable. It is, for instance, a physical law that magnetism is not simple attraction of one thing for another, but the difference of two opposing forces of attraction and repulsion, of which the former is the greater. The same law holds in relation to the attraction of men and women for each other, in which, as a rule, the masculine is the superior force.—T. P.'s Weekly, London.

Neatly Put.

Two Quakers were having an argument and one considered the other was speaking falsely. This is how he reproved him:

"Friend Thomas, I will not call thee by any bad name, but if the mayor were to ask me who was the greatest liar in the town I would hasten to thee and say: 'Thomas, I think the mayor greatly desireth to speak with thee.'"

It is a mother's duty to keep constantly on hand some reliable remedy for use in case of sudden accident or mishap to the children. Hamline Wizard Oil can be depended upon for just such emergencies.



A Natural Selection.

"I don't know, but I would suggest an air plant."

C. L. GRIFFITH'S ADDRESS "TO THE PUBLIC."

I have thought I would let this effusion of Mr. Griffith's pass without notice or comment, as it is but an echo of the growl of disappointment on his part over the verdict of the jury in the February inquisition, but on reconsideration I have concluded to make a response.

His purposes, in so far as they can be gathered from his loose-jointed card, seems to be: First—to put my brother and myself in such light as to furnish room for criticism of us by some people; second—to create the belief that he and HIS attorneys and "the good people of Walton," had been "turned down" by an unjust verdict; third—to impress the public mind with the belief, notwithstanding the verdict, that his wife was and is now insane; fourth and finally—to assure everybody that he will have no further care for her unless she is ADJUDGED insane, whatever her needs or condition otherwise. If Mr. Griffith believes his wife insane why should he refuse to care for her, whatever the verdict? Why predicate his care for her on the verdict of a jury, if he, notwithstanding the verdict, believes her insane? Can he give an intelligent answer?

There are two truths stated by him, and they are that Dr. Finnell and myself left Burlington quite early on the morning succeeding the verdict, and that we left Martha (our sister, C. L. Griffith's wife) in Burlington. We did, both for reasons satisfactory to ourselves, whether they were to Mr. Griffith or not. We asked Martha to go home with us but she had been up nearly all of the previous night, (the verdict having been returned about 12 at night) and had been trailed with all the eagerness of a tiger in the jungles following its victim, for two weeks her every act and word being set down against her and perverted and distorted, and she, and all who believed her sane, subjected to an espionage that was rarely equaled by the rarest exhibitions of the late Thomas C. Campbell, of Cincinnati, in his palmiest days, and she needed rest and sleep, and we left her in order that she might get them, and ATHER OWN request. She remained in Burlington for about three and one half months, and went from there to Erlanger, and from there to Covington. In Erlanger she had a nice place to board, and in Covington she had a nice room on Fourth street, in a respectable place. There was no dissatisfaction with her on the part of either landlady arising from her mental condition or from her conduct, until she yielded to her unfortunate desire for intoxicants. On the contrary, her landlady in Covington told my brother and myself that she was much pleased with her; that Martha conducted herself as a lady should—with sense and dignity, and that the only trouble was her excessive use of intoxicants at times. I have never seen her landlady at Erlanger, but venture the opinion that she would be welcome at that home, also as a boarder, with intoxicants out of the way. The only places she has been where she should not have been were saloons, although Mr. Griffith leaves this open to other suggestions.

It is wholly untrue that either my brother or I attempted to induce the belief by the jury, or by anyone else, that we would in the future look after and care for her. One of her attorneys in the argument before the jury, stated that I could give her legal advice, and that if she became sick, that my brother could act as her physician, if she was near him. Nothing beyond this was stated even by her attorneys, and there was no intimation from any source that the sole care of her, should she be adjudged of sound mind, would be furnished by us, or either of us. We both believed she was of sound mind and needed no care from anyone. We hoped that her experience would keep her from intoxicants, and if this expectation was realized, that she was amply able mentally to care for herself. In this connection I will state that it has been industriously asserted and reiterated that we INTERFERED with C. L. Griffith in HIS business, and, therefore, her care should devolve upon us. What is meant by this we do not know. We attended the inquisition. If we had not done so these same people, who now charge us with interfering, would be loudest in their criticisms of us, charging us with indifference and neglect. But, we attended, and were both called as witnesses as were others, and, now because the jury took our view of her mental condition, we are charged with interfering with Charlie Griffith. We were both ready then, and are now, to go to the aid of our sister should she be wronged, or threatened with wrong, but, as stated, and as all know, who heard the testimony, she acquired, years ago, and with knowledge, presumably, of her husband, for it could not have escaped him, the deplorable habit of using intoxicants, and neither my brother nor myself can cure her of this habit, or follow her to watch her and keep her from indulging it.

Why did not Mr. Griffith interfere and prevent the FORMATION of the habit? We all know that when once formed it holds its victim in iron bands, and that, too, in the case of women as well as men. And how men of brilliant intellects have become its miserable victims? Of course it is much more deplorable for any woman, who has been respectably reared, to form this habit, than for a man, but when formed, its effects are the same in both cases. Mr. Griffith knows that this is all that is the matter with Martha, and that the only hope of her redemption from the use of intoxicants is a course of treatment for it. Yet, with this fact staring him in the face, I wish to state that in the latter part of May last, Dr. Finnell and myself received word that Martha was in Covington intoxicated. We went to T. J. Griffith, the brother of C. L. Griffith, her trustee, and who, with Charlie, have possession of all her property and personal property, and asked him and his wife, who is a sister of ours, that the remedy was to have her treated in some reliable institute for the whisky habit, and asked that enough of HER money, not Charlie Griffith's, but hers, be furnished one of us, and that we would see that it was thus applied, or else return the money. He answered that he could not part with the money for this purpose without the consent of her husband. We then asked that he call up her husband, and have him to come to his (T. J's) house that night, and to try to get his consent, as we wished to go to Covington on the early morning train. He agreed to do this, and presumably did it, or, at least sent for his brother, but the money was not furnished, or even promised, and there was not afterwards even an inquiry from anyone of the three, either T. J. Griffith, or his wife, or Charlie Griffith as to the result of our trip, although Martha came home with me, and remained with me on the farm for nearly a week.

Why not her own money be used in an effort to cure her, and why should Charlie Griffith stand in the way of its use, when he, now, unblushingly, proclaims he will not care for her, except as for an insane woman? What care would she be to this exemplary husband as an inmate of an asylum, charged as she was, at the inquisition, in February as an incurable lunatic, and with a form of insanity that is incurable.

Mr. Griffith adroitly states that she "has been furnished" $500 in the past five months. The fact is, and the public shall know the fact, that the $500 have been paid her out of her own means by her trustee, and this trustee will ask a credit for the amount in the settlement of his trust accounts. Why didn't he state this fact? The answer is he hoped "the public" would conclude that he had, as a model and loving husband furnished his insane wife "with this much money," in order that she might or might not be "pushed from house to house," while he was at home, buried too feet deep in humiliation and sorrow and silence. There is an old maxim that translated means that the suppression of truth is the expression of falsehood. In all his "desperate efforts to CONCEAL the facts," (see his address to the public), he didn't want the fact concealed that she had "been furnished" $500, if his silence, as to the source from which the money came, would induce the belief that HE had furnished it.

Mr. Griffith further states that my sister has an aversion for himself and her children. As to her children, I believe this to be untrue. She says she will no longer live in a home with Charlie Griffith, and as her children are with him, she does not visit them, but I believe she loves both of them, notwithstanding her son, a young man 23 years of age, permitted himself to be used as a tool on the witness stand at the inquisition in February to attack the credibility of his own mother. That fact alone, and this use of his son, should enlighten "the public" as to the true inwardness of this unfortunate and deplorable family affair.

There are other statements in Mr. Griffith's confidential talk with the public that I would like to refer to, but this article is already of considerable length; statements, some of which are expressly private and others with the facts undisclosed so that the statements may be misleading.

I beg the pardon of the people of the county for discussing this humiliating matter in this public way, and do it only in self-defense. The shame of it should have been enough for Mr. Griffith, and should have put the seal of silence upon him, whatever his private troubles. The public did not call for or expect a public discussion of his family affairs.

GAMES NEXT SATURDAY:
Burlington at Big Bone.
Belleview at Hebron.

The game at the Burlington park last Saturday afternoon was a game of games. The first thing Hebron proceeded to do was to make two nice hits off of Conner, but the next three men up were easy outs. In Burlington's half of the first Imling a single and a double were peeled off and two men scored. In the second it was 1, 2, 3 with both teams. In the third Burlington made two hits and one run. In the fourth one Hebron man was down when the umpire sent a man to first on balls, and Conner and Slayback bucked. A long wrangle ensued which resulted in two umpires being canned, and one Hebron man crossing the pan. Edson Riddell was put in to umpire. In the sixth inning Tolin got to first on an error, and Craig made a two base hit to left field, which resulted in an overthrow to home plate to cut Tolin off, and Craig took third. Ernest, catcher for Hebron, declared that Craig was entitled to second base only and further that if Craig was not sent back to second that he would go home. The umpire and the managers of the two teams held a conference, and Craig was permitted to remain at third and Ernst skiddooed. Johnnie Hogan went in to catch, and the game was concluded without further incident. Features of the game—Westbay's play, from third to first, Ryle's great one hand stop of Slayback's hot grounder, and the ragged support given Shinkle. Following is the score:

Burlington	2	0	1	2	0	1	0	4	*	—10
Hits	2	0	0	0	0	0	1	1	—	4

Struck out—By Conner 11; by Shinkle 5.

Two base hits—Conner, Craig.

Errors—Burlington 2; Hebron 5.

The score at Big Bone Saturday was 2 to 1 in favor of Belleview.

On Friday as Marion Keaton, the ferryman, was getting his trustworthy craft in readiness to leave its moorings on the Kentucky shore a monster blacksnake darted out from under one of the treadles. Mr. Keaton, realizing that trouble was imminent, took to one of the aprons of the boat with the snake in hot pursuit. There he grabbed a board and an instant later killed the huge reptile by breaking its back. The snake measured seven feet and two inches in length. Blacksnakes are seldom known to attack a person, but in this instance it is supposed that the snake became angered because the starting of the propelling mechanism disturbed its repose.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Yellow Tobacco.

In many fields of tobacco there are large spots where the plants have turned yellow and are growing slowly. The plants in the entire field having been treated alike and there being no apparent difference in the soil, the growers cannot account for the small tobacco.

Killed An Adder.

While working in his tobacco, last Friday, Dudley Blyth reached under a plant when he heard a hissing noise that made the cold chills run over him. He lost no time in getting his hand back from under the plant, when he took his hoe and raised the leaves, when he discovered a large spreading adder in position for striking. He yanked the reptile from its hiding place with the hoe and killed it, but every time a leave rattled or a slight noise was heard by Dudley all that day, he thought it was another adder and was ready to beat a retreat.

In the last few years there have been a great many uncomplimentary remarks made about the creek roads in this county, but from the size of the broken stones some of the overseers use on their roads, they appear to be trying to get them about as rough as creek roads.

Walton Dempsey figured in a bicycle smash up a few days ago, that might have resulted in his being injured badly. He was going at a high rate of speed when his machine got beyond his control, and collided with a post in front of the jail. Fortunately he escaped serious injury.

Grover Jarrell and Grover and Cleveland Snyder left last Wednesday for South Dakota, to secure work at wages considerably larger than what is paid here. Many of their friends have been heard to suggest that the young men, had they remained at home and worked at Kentucky wages, would have more money than they will have when they come back, but then the trip will be worth considerable to the boys.

The Union traction road boomers claim that with proper encouragement on the part of the citizens of Florence and vicinity, their work would be lightened considerably. It seems that the Blackburn road has about had its day, and it is a rational supposition that Florence people will go to the assistance of the promoters of the Covington and Union road, which would benefit the two towns to about the same extent. With both communities working in harmony the proposition would look much more satisfactory to those depended upon to finance the road, and matters would be expedited considerably.

Home Again.

Rev. Willard G. Cram and wife returned Monday, after an absence of nearly seven years as Missionaries of the Methodist church in Cores. They, and their two living children, are well and are fast recovering from the fatigues of the long return journey by land and sea, a distance equal to nearly two-thirds the earth's circumference.—Williamstown Courier.

The Fair Season.

The fair season is near again. In this part of the country the Dearborn county, Indiana, fair will lead off, beginning August 5th. Considerable money has been spent improving the facilities for handling the very large crowds of people that are expected each day. The premium list is a good one, and the purses that will be hung up during the week will induce contests between some of the very fast pacers, as well as trotters. There are several special features at the Lawrenceburg fair that will prove good drawing cards. The next in order will be the Erlanger fair and races, beginning August 18th, and continuing four days. The premium list is comprehensive and liberal in all the departments. In the speed rings the purses range from $50 to $300, and some good racing is anticipated for each afternoon. The fair at Florence will follow closely upon that at Erlanger, and with its usual good list of premiums competition in the rings will be exciting. Everybody is looking forward to the above fairs, and the outlook for each enjoying a very liberal patronage never was better.

Hogs and Corn.

In discussing the present high prices of hogs the great packer, Cudahy, says it is altogether due to the shortage in hogs. The supply is over a million short. He concludes by saying: "Hog raising has been a losing game for the farmer for about a year and a half, and he has naturally quit the business. A year ago last December hogs were selling around four cents while the corn was bringing 60 cts. to 70 cents a bushel, and has been relatively in the same position since then up to a short time ago. The farmers the coming year will have plenty of corn, but he won't have the stock to feed it to and in order to get him back to raising hogs conditions have to be reversed. We ought to have and probably will have something like seven cent hogs and fifty-cent corn the coming year. This will stimulate hog raising and in about 12 months from now we will be getting more hogs."

Sensible Talk.

The destruction of the Tobacco Association means bankruptcy to the farmers and every other profession in this part of the country. There may be troubles with the management. If there are, they should be righted. But in the name of heaven and toiling masses of this country, let's see to it that the Association continues to live. Its usefulness has been conciusively proven, and wise council and sober judgment should prevail in the righting of any wrong that may exist. Peace and prosperity should be the motto of all, and every good citizen, with the welfare of his family and country at heart, should begin now to work to that end.—Dover News.

That Fish Fry.

The fishfry given at Union last Wednesday by the county medical association was a hummer. Every feature was a towering success. The responses to the several toasts were of the highest class, each speaker acquitting himself in the most creditable manner. Besides the 250 pounds of nice river fish that were cooked for the occasion there were numerous baskets of provisions furnished, consequently everybody had all they wanted to eat, and the supply was not exhausted. There have been larger crowds in Union, but none ever spent a pleasanter day there than those who attended the fish fry last Thursday. The doctors who arranged for and so successfully conducted the outing were delighted with the manner in which the public responded to their invitation to take a day off and spend it with them.

A few days since Mrs. J. P. Tanner, who lives about a mile and a half southwest of Burlington, heard a noise in a fire place that was closed with a screne. She made an investigation and was horrified by the discovery of a large black snake that had taken up its quarters there, and was subsisting on young chimney swallows that fell out of their nests, having just swallowed one or more of them. Mrs. Tanner gave the alarm, and her husband and son, Kirb, who were at work in a field near the house, were soon on the scene and lost no time in dispatching the reptile. How the snake got into the fire place without being discovered is a mystery, as it would certainly have been discovered had it crawled through the house. It may have climbed the chimney on the outside and gone down or fallen down the inside.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

THE HAY FEVER PEOPLE.

There is a national hay fever association which meets up in New Hampshire in August. Of course it will discuss the causes of this aristocratic distress, and one of the causes that will be considered relates to the effect of various plants, says the Ohio State Journal. Among these are the golden rod, the ragweed and the Indian corn, all of which are accused of this grievous assault on the human race. This discussion is particularly interesting because each of these flowers has its sturdy advocates for the honor of being called the "national flower, and against them all the hay fever association is preparing to utter its most urgent protest. The hay fever people have no candidate for this honor, for they look with suspicion upon all flowers while the dogstar rages. Some affirmative action they will doubtless take, and that is in favor of putting on the free list all manufactured handkerchiefs, and all raw material used in their production. Long accounts which tells of these things and many more, says the association, will open with the singing of the anthem, "Boy, bugles, blow, set the wild echoes flying."

Careful observers in the great crop states agree with opinions that have been expressed as to the outlook for wheat. The general belief appears to be that, with no serious setback, the chances are favorable to a larger yield than last year. The estimate of the New York Journal of Commerce that the output is fairly certain to reach 665,000,000 bushels, and may go to 700,000,000 bushels, is much within bounds, according to such judges as the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, which, using the latest report of condition made to the department of agriculture, figures therefrom a possible crop of 735,000,000 bushels, against 664,000,000 in 1908. If these figures shall be verified after the harvesting has been completed they will mean that the 1909 wheat crop has been equaled but twice in the history of the country—in 1901, when the total was 748,460,000 bushels, and in 1906, when the aggregate was 735,260,000 bushels. The corn crop, the greatest of all, and which last year beat all records, is still to be heard from, and necessarily will encounter more risks than wheat, which matures earlier, but so far the outlook is promising.

A foreign historian, who has been visiting this country, and is naturally writing about it, says that the exposure of financial scandals in the United States is not to be taken as evidence of general corruption, but, on the contrary, as a moral upheaval. He says that the revelation of this corruption and the outbreak of public opinion, leading to a regeneration of conditions, would be impossible in Europe, where the corruption would be ignored, if not required to be exposed for political or grafting means. Consequently, what looks like a national scandal is really a credit to the underlying morality of the American people. To be so written about by a returned visitor is so unusual that this writer deserves a Carnegie medal.

New York is about to build a 31-story hotel that is to be the highest in the world, but, as most visitors to that town can painfully testify, in one important respect its hotels were already the highest.

42 PEOPLE INJURED

SEVERAL MIRACULOUS ESCAPES

Cause of Wreck So Far Determined By Officials—Was the Dropping of Brake Beam or Brake Shoe From Beneath Fender.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 26.—Forty-two persons were injured, six of them seriously, in the wreck of Big Four Train No. 16, en route from Chicago to Cincinnati to Zionsville, 17 miles northwest of Indianapolis, at 2:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The train, running at a speed of 50 miles an hour, jumped the track, some of the coaches turning over.

There were 200 passengers in the coaches, and the fact that none were killed, is regarded as miraculous by the railroad officials.

Passengers who were imprisoned in the overturned coaches escaped by way of the sash, through windows. Physicians from Zionsville and Indianapolis, and surgeons of the Big Four, dressed the victims' injuries.

The cause of the wreck, so far as could be determined by officials of the road, was the dropping of a brake beam or brake shoe from beneath the tender, causing the trucks to ride over the obstruction. The impact thus caused, it is believed, resulted in the derailment of the baggage car, and finally the entire train left the rails.

Clark Deer, a railway postal clerk, who lives in Cincinnati, was crushed beneath several hundred pounds of mail pouches and it is believed he may have suffered internal injuries.

C. L. Burroughs, another postal clerk, was bruised by being thrown against a mail pouch rack. C. W. Anthony of Lafayette, another postal clerk, was in the forward end of the car just before the train was derailed, and, believing that the speed was greater than was safe at that point, retired to the middle of the mail car.

He no sooner had left the front end when the mail car was completely turned over.

Perhaps the most miraculous escape of the wreck was that of Haskell Wall, a 17-year-old boy of Lebanon, who was riding in the blind baggage between the baggage and the mail cars. Wall boarded the train at Lebanon and was going to come to Indianapolis.

While he felt the cars swaying from side to side he knew something was wrong, and he jumped from his perch between the two cars. A second after he leaped the cars between which he was riding were turned over, but Wall had jumped far enough to escape being pinioned beneath them.

MANIA TO KILL

Leads Husband To Slay Wife, Shoot at Mother-in-Law and Commit Suicide.

Butte, Mont., July 26.—Possessed of an insane desire to kill, telling his wife and his mother and sisters again and again of his mania to make a "clean sweep of them all," Philip O'Connell carried out part of his threat here Sunday.

After telling his mother-in-law, Mrs. O'Neil Fountaine, to take a good look at the weapon, he pulled the trigger. She fainted from fright and fell to the floor, and the bullet whizzed over her head. A cry from his sick wife brought him to her room.

While she was hugging the wall in her attempt to escape he put the pistol near her ear and blew her brains out. After taking another shot at the fleeing form of Mrs. Fountaine, who had regained consciousness, and missing her, he then put a bullet through his own brain.

Tiger Fatally Rends Trainer.

New York, July 26.—Henry Falkenburg, retained for the past 10 years by some of the most intrepid animal trainers in the world, came to the end of his thrilling career Sunday in Bostock's Dreamland, Coney Island. In the presence of nearly a thousand women and children he was clawed and bitten by Mogul, a tiger regarded as untameable. Falkenburg is lying in the Coney Island emergency hospital of a fractured skull, internal injuries and several lacerations.

SLAYER CONFESSES CRIME

FORMER INDIANA GIRL MAKES HUSBAND ADMIT MURDER.

L. Byrd, Arrested in Denver Soon After Wedding, Tells of Killing Fellow Clerk in Memphis.

Denver, Col., July 26.—L. Robinson, who was arrested here Thursday on suspicion of being J. L. Byrd, wanted in Memphis, Tenn., for the murder of Joseph Black, a shoe dealer of that city, confessed to the murder to his wife, that he was the murderer.

Byrd was married two weeks ago at Colorado Springs and with his bride was enjoying his honeymoon at Denver. The prisoner's wife, Elsie Syms Robinson, came to Denver with her parents from Terre Haute, Ind.

Robinson's confession followed a talk with Chief of Police Armstrong at the latter's office. Robinson's bride of two weeks, who was present, finally interrupted.

"Jimmie, if you are the man, tell them," she said. "I will take my part of the blame and the punishment, whatever it may be."

"There was silence for a moment. Then Robinson, white and shaking, owned up.

"Chief," he said, "I am the man you want. I killed Black because I thought my life was in danger. We quarreled in an argument over a hat. I had bet and he started toward me with an open knife in his hand.

"I seized the only weapon at hand, a shoe stretcher, and struck him over the head with it. I did not mean to kill him. I didn't tell you before on account of my wife."

Byrd added that Black previously had insulted him several times.

"For two years I have been wishing for a chance to make a clean sweep of them all," Byrd added, "and now that I've been caught and told my story, I am happy and will go back there and clear up everything and commence to live right."

Robinson said that in a panic of fear after his fatal encounter with Black, he went to Texas, stayed there a few days, then came to Colorado later going to San Francisco and Seattle and returning to Colorado, where he secured employment.

ACTION MAY MEAN A WAR.

Buenos Ayres.—The Argentine government Tuesday sent his passports to the Bolivian minister here, ordering him to leave Buenos Ayres within 24 hours. The government has also telegraphed Senor Fonseca, Argentine minister to Bolivia, to leave La Paz immediately. It is practically a declaration of war.

The action of the Argentine government follows the refusal of Bolivia to accept the decision of Argentina in the matter of the boundary dispute between Bolivia and Peru. The Argentine Republic has taken offense at the action of the president of Bolivia, who, it is asserted, has sent circulars to the prefects throughout the country, casting reflections on the Argentine government.

DEATH LIST GROWS

EIGHTEEN REPORTED TO HAVE PERISHED IN FIERCE GULF STORM.

CLOUDBURST HITS DULUTH

Minnesota City Flooded and Three Lives Lost—Conditions Alarming in Northern Wisconsin—Loss from Floods Reaches Millions.

Houston, Tex.—Twenty-one reported dead, eight injured and a property loss totaling $1,250,000 is the result of the storm which raged over the southern coast of Texas Wednesday, according to the latest dispatches received.

The property loss in piles and towns along the coast is estimated at $1,250,000.

The storm has practically demolished Velasco. Not more than a dozen houses stand. The gulf waters were driven inland for nearly three miles. Two negroes lost their lives.

A dispatch from Beaumont says a party of 13, three brothers named Abernathy, their wives and seven children, who left High Island for Sabine Pass Tuesday afternoon, are missing.

The territory around Bay City seems to have been the center of the storm, which moved southwest from Galveston. For four hours there a 70-mile wind swept across the country, carrying everything before it. Velasco, a small town near Bay City, is reported demolished but with no loss of life and none injured.

Worst at Bay City.

At Bay City, about 50 per cent of the business section was damaged, including the opera house, one bank, the courthouse, the new high school building and the city jail. In the jail the cages were left standing and the prisoners were exposed to view, but were safe. Six prisoners escaped from the jail at Richmond, when the windows had been blown in and while the guards were repairing the damage.

At Galveston Bay, the situation is not as bad as at first reported. No part of the railroad bridge, which spans the arm of the bay between the island and Virginia Point, was washed away but some 50 feet of the structure was thrown badly out of alignment by a huge barge and other small craft, which were washed from their moorings and pounded against the piling.

Cloudburst Floods Duluth.

Duluth, Minn.—Following the terrific rains a cloudburst caused a scene of devastation in Duluth. The loss as now computed will reach $1,500,000.

Three lives were lost during the storm. Two children were swept from their mothers' sides on Ninth avenue, East, one body being lost in a sewer at the bottom of the hill. Another child was lost in Keene's creek at West Duluth.

The theater crowds came out to find the streets a miniature lake each, and the men, picking up their female companions, carried them to higher ground. Automobiles and hacks were impossible, owing to the accumulation of mud in the streets. The hotels were crowded with those unwilling to venture forth in the elements.

Twenty or more houses were washed away along small creeks in the city suburbs.

Flood Situation Worse.

Ashland, Wis.—The situation in the flood district is worse. The railroad bridge and all other bridges are believed to have been swept out to Odanah. Nothing has been heard from that place since 2 o'clock a. m. A special train has left for Odanah, carrying boats and men. Boats have also left for the mouth of Bad river to pick up refugees. Six bridges are torn out on the Marengo river, five of them being steel. Four million feet of logs were swept into the lake at Montreal river. Train service on all roads is abandoned.

Another heavy downpour Wednesday night aggravated the situation. The village of Odanah is completely isolated. The people in Odanah are sleeping in tents and "on the high lands."

New Trunk Murder Mystery.

Lynn, Mass.—Another "trunk murder mystery will be added to criminal annals by the finding of the body of Miloo K. Monjian in the room of Vahan Nabandian in a boarding house here. Both Monjian and Nabandian were Jewish workers. There was a bullet wound, and several knife wounds in the breast. The motive is not known. All the slayers have fled.

Was Not Leon Ling.

London.—The man who, when an American visitor saw outside a jewelry shop here on July 16, and identified as Leon Ling, the Chinaman suspected of the murder of Miss Stone in Asia Minor, is not Leon Ling, but is believed by Scotland Yard to be a Japanese.

FRENCH CABINET FORMED

Aristide Briand, the Premier, Presents Names of His Aids to President Falliers.

Paris.—After a day of conferences Aristide Briand succeeded in forming a new French ministry and officially announced the success of his endeavors to President Falliers. The new cabinet is made up as follows:

Premier and minister of the interior and of public worship, M. Briand; minister of justice, M. Barthou; minister of foreign affairs, M. Pichon; minister of finance, Georges Cochery; minister of education, M. Doumergue; minister of public works, posts and telegraphs, M. Millerand; minister of commerce, Jean Dupuy; minister of agriculture, M. Ranu; minister of the colonies, M. Trouillot; minister of labor, M. Viviani.

The portfolios of war and the navy will be filled to-day. These have been offered respectively to Gen. Brun and Admiral Boue de la Payrere and both are expected to accept.

Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Cawas Lalcaca, was found guilty and sentenced at the conclusion of a trial of less than an hour at the Old Bailey Friday.

As the lord chief justice concluded in pronouncing sentence the prisoner drew himself up in military style and saluted. He said:

COMFORT

CLEANSES THE SKIN.

One Whole Square in Business Part of Owenton Destroyed by Fire, Causing Loss of Upward of $200,000, Only Partly Insured.

Owenton, Ky.—One whole square of the business part of this city was destroyed by fire, which was discovered in the Holbrook block, occupied by the Wood grocery and meat market and the hardware and furniture store of J. Farrell, the Mammoth clothing house of D. H. Daniel, groceries of L. Wolf, Tomlinson & Montgomery, and the residence of Joel Hayden, which were soon in flames. The loss will reach upward of $200,000, only partly covered with insurance.

AMICABLE AGREEMENT

Reached Between City of Lexington and Owners of Local Water Works System.

Lexington, Ky.—Amicable agreement was reached in the protracted fight over a 25-year water contract between the city and the Lexington Hydraulic and Manufacturing Co., owners of the local water works system. The company agrees to supply the city with water for the next ten years 20,000,000 gallons and for the next five 25,000,000 gallons per annum, or a proportionate amount of water annually pumped for water rentals. Under these amounts the city is to pay 8 cents per 1,000 gallons for the first 1,000,000 gallons, the minimum rate of charge per 1,000 gallons to other consumers of 500,000 gallons or over per annum. The maximum rate is 25 cents per 1,000 gallons, in trade for fire protection, the company agreeing to place mains and fire hydrants at the direction of the city under specified reasonable conditions.

PRIMARY PEOPLE UPHELD.

In All of Their Contentions by Democratic Committeeman Donaldson.

Newport, Ky.—At the conclusion of a two hours' session, in which Kentucky State Central Democratic Committeeman J. A. Donaldson sat as a political tribunal here to try the question as to whether or not a primary or convention should be held, for the purpose of selecting a ticket for the coming fall election, Judge Donaldson rendered a verdict upholding the primary people in all of their contentions. He declared the call for a convention to be held at Alexandria, Ky., null and void and ordered that the primary of August 28 be held as originally called by the majority of the committee when it broke away at Alexandria on July 25 and held a meeting on the second floor of the courthouse.

PEST DISCOVERED

That Clings to Clover and Alfalfa and Which Is Very Destructive.

Frankfort, Ky.—H. Garman, of the Kentucky Experiment station at Lexington, has found a parasite that clings to the clover and alfalfa and will do thousands of dollars of damage to the hays in Kentucky and other states unless there is something found to kill the little pest. He says: "The pest is a true parasite, but its seeds germinate in the soil and grow much like other plants until it secures a hold on clover or alfalfa, when it loses connection with the soil and thereafter derives all its nourishment from the plant to which it is attached."

Winchester, Ky.—Officials of the Burley Tobacco Society left during the conference with the American Society of Equity committee in Lexington state that the matters under discussion in this conference are abandoned in so far as the Burley Tobacco society is concerned, and that there will be no further consideration given the proposal of the American Society of Equity. The Burley Tobacco society, the officials announce, will carry out their plans for the compaign for the pooling of the 1909 crop under the form of pledge now in motion and containing the ten per cent clause upon which the American Society of Equity bases most of its objections.

Lexington, Ky.—E. Rudd, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., left here to assume management of the company's office at Knoxville, Tenn. He was succeeded here by C. J. Winkler, for some time chief operator.

Louisville, Ky.—Louisville will send a big delegation of boosters to St. Paul next month to attend the convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers, and a strong fight will be made to secure the next convention of the body for this city.

Louisville, Ky.—Wholesale grocers from all over the state will come to Louisville as guests of the Louisville Retail Grocers' association, which will entertain them at a local park. Arrangements are being made for a big picnic.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Banks Ordered to Pay.

Auditor James has sent statements to all of the banks notifying them that they must pay their taxes immediately or the penalty would be put on them. Although a banker himself, Auditor James will play no favorites with the bankers.

Admitted to Kentucky.

State Insurance Commissioner Bell admitted to the Kentucky field the Consolidated Casualty Co., of Chicago. It has $100,000 capital stock, and will be represented in Kentucky by S. J. Duncan, of Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—Stating the belief that they have been wrongfully dealt with by Lewis W. Parrish, president of the board of trustees of the Union Depot company, the dissenting members of the board have begun suit in the circuit court to have the action of the board in declaring the dividend declared void.

CHARGES ALL TRUE

MR. BRYAN RIGHT IN INDICTMENT OF REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Democratic Leader Said Opponents Were Impotent to Accomplish Reforms, and Time Has Proved Correctness of Assertion.

In his speech at Lincoln, Neb., August 12, 1908, accepting the Democratic nomination for the presidency, Mr. Bryan charged that the Republican party "is impotent to accomplish the reforms which are imperatively needed. Further, I can not concur in the sentiment that the Republican platform unequivocally declares for the reforms that are necessary; on the contrary I affirm that it openly and notoriously disappoints those who expected to find therein the Republican Democrats."

For many weeks now Senator Aldrich has been zealously proving the truth of Mr. Bryan's charges. Nothing has been required of Mr. Bryan but to help him while Mr. Aldrich and the Republican majority produced the evidence.

On the tariff the case against the party was more damning than was to have been expected in the circumstances. It was a genuine attempt at downward revision. It recognized that the consumer's demand for relief was justified.

From the day beginning Senator Aldrich showed that his purpose was to undo the work of the house. He defied impudently that the Republican party was under any obligation, expressed or implied, to reduce the Dingley schedules. He openly repudiated the pledges of downward revision given by Mr. Taft and other Republican candidates during the 1908 campaign. His policy has been to restore the Dingley rates lowered by the house and he has systematically undertaken to raise many of them. The Aldrich tariff out-Dingleys Dingley. Yet its author asserts that it fulfills the promises made by the Republican platform.

As for the income tax, Senator Aldrich has always opposed it. He admits on the floor of the senate that he only accepted the corporation tax as a means of beating the income tax. It was Mr. Taft's suggestion, but Senator Aldrich promises the repeal of the corporation tax within two years. That means the repeal of the publicity clause which Mr. Taft in his special message said is the most important part of the bill. Having tricked Mr. Taft on the revision of the tariff, Senator Aldrich proposes to trick him with the corporation tax.

Senator Aldrich is in full control in the senate. His leadership is recognized at the White House. In the revision of the tariff he has falsified Mr. Taft's pledges, and in such reforms as the corporation tax and its publicity provisions he purposes nullifying Mr. Taft's efforts. The Republican party's impotence to accomplish reforms, as Mr. Bryan foresaw, comes from Senator Aldrich's hostility to such reforms and from the party's support of him as its foremost representative.

Wickersham Thinks Otherwise.

Good for Attorney General Wickersham.

As against the sugar trust's pleading of the statute of limitations, on which District Attorney Wise halted the prosecution, the attorney general says go ahead. Consequently, seven high trust officials, and a go-between who negotiated the low trick that throttled the Philadelphia Independent Company, are under indictment for conspiracy in violation of the Sherman law.

Let it be noted that the law firm of which this resolute Wickersham used to be a member was retained by the sugar trust in the civil suit out of which this federal criminal prosecution grew. But Mr. Wickersham holds his present retainer from the public, and he proposes to do his utmost for his client.

It must also be remembered that these indictments are based on evidence which Messrs. Roosevelt and Bonaparte refused even to look into, declaring that there was not sufficient ground for prosecution. Wickersham thinks otherwise. But Wickersham is a real lawyer and no blowhard.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Tariff and Morality.

As the result of my observations upon different tariffs of the world (and I do not pretend to be wise or deeply read about the matter), I find that wherever there is a protective tariff it has built up a system of morality of its own, as I never found that its rules of morals were in accord with any other rules of morals, religious or secular, ever framed in this world. Protection is a system of morality in this country that not only is wicked, but it allows to be done by authority of law, what the man who does it would never do in his private capacity as a citizen. It permits a man not only to covet his neighbor's goods, but to take them away from him by force of law. When we consider how we collected a little over $300,000,000 last year, and the people of this country pay in taxation to these protected interests $2,100,000,000, I think it is about time we are considering whether we are not taxing the American people a little too far.—Senator Dolliver in the Tariff Debate.

The Tariff.

The tariff is not only the mother of trusts but she is mighty generous to her children.—Washington Post.

CHOOSE RIGHT KIND OF MEN.

If Voters Are Desirous of Real Tariff Revision They Must Retire the Standpatters.

It is certain that the Payne-Aldrich bill in its final form, if acceptable to President Taft, will contain many hundred reductions from the Dingley duties; but it is equally certain that these reductions will be fewer and less drastic than the country desires and demands. Something must be done and planned to secure still further concessions from the standpat leaders in congress.

The only available ground of attack, obviously, is to reduce the number of standpatters so that in the senate, for example, the organization may be taken over by the progressives and leave the Aldrich crowd in a minority, and even this can only be done in states like Indiana, where tariff reform sentiment is more powerful than desire for high duties. The Chicago Record-Herald puts it in this way:

"The voters of the United States can not strike directly at Aldrich.

"The voters of Rhode Island will not.

"But the voters of each and every state should strike as directly as possible and as often as possible against every man in either house of congress who enlists under the Aldrich banner."

There is hope for success in the undertaking, by reason of the non-partisan character it has assumed; for the most uncompromising standpatters come from both Democratic and Republican states. In the Republican states of the north we shall have to elect Republican revisionists and in the Democratic states of the south we shall have to elect Democratic revisionists. From New England, as from Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina and Texas to the south and California, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming and Montana in the west, little can be expected in the way of tariff revision gains. Pennsylvania and West Virginia are hopelessly high tariff. But the states of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, the Dakotas and possibly Kentucky and Tennessee, ought to send revisionists to the senate who will vote with the present members from Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota and Maryland. Until important changes along these lines can be effected in the senate, it will be difficult to secure any considerable reductions from the schedules of the Payne bill, especially as there are always spots where the revisionists will fall down on particular schedules, as the Democratic senators from Florida did when it came to pineapples, or as the new Democratic senator from Oregon did when it came to the tariff on lumber.—Indianapolis Star.

The Tell-Tale Imports.

Tariff schedules may fool the people for a time, but they do not fool the experienced importers.

While the dominating organization of congress has been telling the country that the proposed revision will be downward revision, the importers have been increasing their foreign purchases because they know that there is to be an upward revision.

Last February, just before the extra session of congress began, and when the whole country had a right to expect downward revision, as promised by both parties, the imports had fallen to a very low volume in anticipation of more favorable duties.

The extra session had not progressed very far before the imports began to increase, and this increase has gained with the consideration of the bill in the senate.

In February it was estimated that the treasury deficit would reach $130,000,000 by July 1. But the imports have increased so rapidly and so enormously that the deficit is only $39,000,000, or $41,000,000 lower than the estimate.

The increase in imports, at a season when importations are ordinarily low, means simply that the revised tariff is going to be even more unfavorable to the consumers than the Dingley tariff.

Likely to Escape.

The statute of limitations now seems likely to stand between the sugar trust and the national department of justice, in respect of its practically confessed violation of the anti-trust law.

But the escape of the trust through no fault or laches of Taft and Wickersham. That it owes to Roosevelt and Bonaparte who, in 1906, were too busy rattling the stage thunder and vociferating violent intentions to attend to the testimony against the sugar trust pressed on them by George H. Earle. They refused to listen to me, says Mr. Earle.

So the statute of limitations began to run for the trust; and now that the new attorney general is eager to go ahead on Mr. Earle's evidence it seems to be too late. For which immunity the trust may thank the failure of the firm of Roosevelt and Bonaparte to do its plain duty.

Acrid Crumbs of Comfort.

It will not make much difference in the long run how many Democrats receive office at the hands of an amiable Republican president or how many Democratic communities are fed on the crumbs that fall from the tables of condescending plutocracy. A party in pretended opposition which is content with this sort of thing will remain a minority forever.—New York World.

[1212w] SCOTT CHAMBERS.

Judge B. F. Menefee, of Crittenden, was here a part of last week on business pertaining to a couple of law cases in which he is interested.

Mrs. B. K. Menefee and daughter, Miss Cecile, left last Friday for Pendleton county, on a visit to her father, Henry Claycamp and family.

Dr. E. T. Zinke, of Cincinnati, who was called to given special treatment to Mrs. Rex, of Zion Station, spent part of Wednesday here with friends.

Woodford R. Miller spent part of last week at Big Bone Springs where he formerly resided and has business interests.

Henry C. Diers, who is selling nursery stock in Henry county, spent Saturday and Sunday here with home folks. He is having a big business.

Mrs. Arthur Smith and little son, and Mrs. Kirtley Finnell and little daughter left Saturday, for London, Laurel county, on a visit to relatives and friends.

Judge T. J. Crowe spent last Wednesday and Thursday at Richwood attending the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Marsh, who died there last Wednesday in her 80th year.

Mrs. Mary Fields and son, Robert, of Kensington, and Mrs. C. C. Metcalf, of Walton, enjoyed the pleasures of a trip to Indianapolis, visiting friends Sunday and Monday.

Robert W. Jones, Roy D. Stamler and E. P. Northcutt, three of our excellent business men, were visitors to Cincinnati part of last week in the interest of their respective stores.

[illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] kindly offices to have Mr. [illegible] arranged in the [illegible]

sion of the Northern Kentucky Medical Association at Union last Wednesday.

A. M. Edwards spent Saturday afternoon at Glencoe on business pertaining to the Walton Building Association, he being one of the appraisers of property on which loans are requested.

Mrs. Chas. McCarty returned home last week from Cincinnati where she has been undergoing treatment in a hospital for several weeks, and she is now on the road to complete recovery.

Rev. Jas. W. Rogers, of Walton, and Rev. Chas. Shultz, of New Castle, Indiana, began a protracted meeting at the Mt. Lystra Christian church, Grant county, Monday evening, expecting to hold a two weeks' session.

Clarence Jones lost a very fine mare last Thursday by it breaking its leg while running in the pasture. Dr. H. C. Black endeavored to save the mare but found the leg broken in two places and recovery impossible, and to put the animal out of its misery it was killed.

Rev. Edgar C. Riley, of Burlington, was a welcome visitor here to his many friends, Friday and Saturday. Bro. Riley is very popular here with a large circle, and whenever he preaches here he is listened to by a large congregation as he is a most excellent speaker, and, besides that, a most genial, companionable gentleman.

Ed. Stamler, of Paris, Bourbon county, was a visitor here last Thursday, guest of his brother, John M. Stamler and family. Mr. Stamler is an architect and is landing some nice contracts. He has just finished the plans for a $75,000 school building at Wilmore, Jessamine county, which has been approved and greatly complimented.

Dr. C. C. Metcalf hurt his leg quite severely one day last week by striking it against an iron kettle while watering a horse, the animal jerking suddenly and throwing Dr. Metcalf against the kettle. It happened to be his leg that had been broken some years ago and in its weakened condition the injury was very painful, but, fortunately, no serious results followed other than crippling him for a while.

The new wheat is coming in slowly, and the local millers are slow to take hold of the new crop on account of the high price, the market being about $1.18 per bushel. They are afraid the price will be much lower before long, especially as December wheat is quoted at $1.08, and it will not do as a profitable venture to load up very much on high priced wheat at this unstable period, and with the grain showing the effects of the recent very wet weather.

Hon. W. O. Coleman, of New Castle, Henry county, was the guest of Dr. C. T. Coleman and family, last Thursday. Mr. Coleman represented Trimble and Oldham counties in the Kentucky legislature for several terms in the past, and is now seeking the position of prison commissioner, an office to be filled by election by the Kentucky legislature. He was on his way to Dry Ridge to see Representative John S. Steers, and solicit his support at the coming session of the legislature.

A case of small pox is reported on the farm of Mrs. M. J. West near Verona, a colored man being afflicted with the disease. It is evident that he is not seriously affected as the man has been reported as being at work in the corn field every day since the doctors pronounced him afflicted with smallpox, which is no doubt the disease, though in a mild form. Care should be taken to avoid its spread as it will probably show itself in more aggravated form when cold weather predominates.

The members of the congregation of the Walton M. E. church, are very anxious to have their pastor, Rev. J. B. Harris, returned here next year, and have addressed a lengthy petition to the Presiding Elder Rev. E. L. Clark, of Fort Thomas, [illegible] Harris is very popular with all of our people, because he is a polished, high toned gentleman, and as a public speaker he is a great success and very pleasing.

The controversy over the probating of the last will and testament of Mrs. A. H. Jones, deceased, between her children, Mrs. Lula Hudson and Harry Jones, has been amicably adjusted through their attorneys, J. G. Tomlin and John L. Vest, representing Mrs. Hudson's interests, and B. F. Menefee, of Crittenden, representing Mr. Jones' interests. The appeal from the Boone county to the Boone circuit court will be dismissed as the entire matter has been fully settled to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

K. Watson Dyas, who was born and reared here, and is a nephew of our clever citizens H. R. and J. H. Watson, was united in the bonds of holy wedlock to Miss Ida Cassidy, Wednesday, July 21st, at the residence of the bride's parents at Bellevue. The bride's father is the mayor of Bellevue and the young lady is said to be very pretty and popular, and the young man's many friends in this quarter extend congratulations and best wishes. Mr. Dyas is a fine, young gentleman and has made his home in Cincinnati for several years.

Charles Roberts, Robert Coffman and Wayne Byland left last Thursday for Brlton, South Dakota, to work in the harvest fields, there being a heavy crop of small grain in that State, and $2.75 per day as wages being paid besides their board. The young men wanted to see the country and thought this a good opportunity at no expense. Thousands of men from the outside territory are usually induced to go to these western grain fields during the harvest season, and besides receiving good remuneration have a delightful visit to the great and glorious west.

Last Friday night a frame house near the colored Odd-Fellows hall was destroyed by fire. The property belonged to Wm. C. Moxley, having been bought by him a couple of years ago for back taxes. The building was used as a practice room by the colored brass band. The fire was discovered about two o'clock Saturday morning, and the flames had made such progress that only the band instruments could be saved, and the rest was a total loss. It is supposed that the fire was the work of an incendiary as the fire caught in the eaves of the building, but some believe it caught fire from the stub of a cigar left burning in the building by some of the boys when practicing.

E. S. West, of San Bernardino, California, was here the past week the guest of his cousin, Sleet West. He is a son of J. W. West and was born near South Fork and reared in this neighborhood. He went to California about twelve years ago, and is now the engineer on a freight train on the San Bernardino, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad, and is delighted with his adopted home as he is well and prospering. Mr. West has grown to be a big, strong man, and one would hardly know him as the same young man who left here twelve years ago. He has since married and his wife is now visiting her mother Mrs. Williams at her girlhood home at Zanesville, Ohio. Mr. West's father resides in Illinois and in returning to his California home he will stop and visit him.

Last Wednesday afternoon the tenth anniversary of Walton Lodge, No. 719, Free and Accepted Masons, was celebrated by a delightful open air session in the beautiful grove of Bro. Napoleon Rich, in the outskirts of Walton. At about 2 o'clock the members of the Lodge formed in procession at their hall, and headed by the Walton Military Brass Band, with Bro. Joseph Reed as marshal, marched to the grove, where seats had been provided and speakers' stand erected, the stand being beautifully decorated with flags and bunting, the stars and stripes being tastefully arranged about the stage. The band took position on the stand and discoursed sweet music for half an hour, when the assemblage was called to order by Bro. D. B. Wallace, who had been selected as master of ceremonies, who, in a short address, stated the object of the gathering, was to commemorate in this pleasing manner, the anniversary of Walton Lodge, and then introduced Bro. Jas. W. Rogers, who, in an entertaining address, made a "Review of Walton Lodge." The next speaker introduced was Bro. J. B. Harris, who discussed the "Relations of Masonry and the Church." Bro. B. M. Nelson then followed with "Masonry in General," and this address was a display of beautiful oratory and reasoning. Bro. John L. Vest was the next speaker introduced, and his anbject, "Masonry and the Law," was splendidly handled in a practical, reasoning manner. Bro. R. H. Elliston, of Johnstown, was the last speaker of the day, and he discussed "The Beauties of Masonry," paying the ladies a well deserved compliment, and winning a round of applause at the close. Then, by special invitation Bro. Joe Reed recited the beautiful poem, "The Symbol of the Apron, which concluded the exercises at the stand. The band which had discoursed sweet music, following each address, continued to play until the announcement was made that refreshments were ready, then all adjourned to the tables where a fine feast was spread, consisting of fried fish, pickles, bread, coffee, etc., and to which all did ample justice, and then there was a good supply left after everybody had been fully satisfied. At about 7 o'clock the joyous crowd wended their way home, all voting it to be one of the pleasantest afternoons it had been their privilege to spend for many a day. The ladies and children were out in full force, and their smiling faces and joyous voices lent a charm to the beautiful afternoon that made the occasion one long to be remembered. The addresses were very entertaining and praiseworthy, and the inspiration of the occasion made the throng akin and in harmony with the object of the meeting—to celebrate in a fitting manner the anniversary of the making of Lodge at Walton [illegible] The spread was under the superviscannot be given them for the elegant manner in which the food was prepared and served. Bro. Napoleon Rich in every way endeavored to make the visit to his pretty grove and home a pleasant one for everybody, and much of the comforts enjoyed was through the work of Bro. A. K. Johnson, John Watson and Joseph Reed, who arranged the grounds and prepared the seats. The Masonic Lodge desires to return their thanks to Bro. J. D. Mayhugh for the use of the lumber with which to erect the platform and seats, and also to the Walton Military Band, who so kindly furnished the music without charge and in every way endeavored to make the occasion a success.

The Junior League of the Cristian Endeavor met at the Christian church last Friday evening to discuss the subject, "Why some men and women do not succeed in life." President Chas. Ransler presided. After several songs, the leader, Miss Mayme Northcutt, read the scriptural lesson. Joshua 1:1-9, and followed with a paper bearing on the subject. Prayer, Bro. Jas. Bowlington. Essay—Idle Habits—Chas. Jones, followed by a very able address on the subject delivered by Chas. Ransler. An excellent essay, "Faithfulness," was read by Miss Katie Bentz. A beautiful solo was well rendered by Miss Queen Tillman, followed by prayer by Bro. Edgar Riley. A talk on the "Lack of Perseverance," was to have been given by Wayne Byland, but in his absence Bro. Riley took up the subject and delivered a very interesting and instructive talk, which was indeed appreciated and enjoyed by all who heard it. A sentence prayer followed, beginning with Bro. Taylor Grubbs and closing with Bro. Bowlington. After a short business session the meeting adjourned to meet with the Baptist church in August. All are cordially invited to be present at these meetings as they are interesting and instructive.

No little interest is being manifested in "The what time will the clock stop" contest now on at Robt. W. Jones' store in which $3 in cash is given away every Saturday afternoon at 2:30. Mrs. Will Lancaster held the ticket nearest the time last Saturday.

Ed. Kinney, of Lawrenceburg, is helping his uncles the Corcoran boys in their hay harvest.

James Masters and wife, of Bullittsville, were Sunday guests of his brother, T. C. Masters, of Ashby.

Clarles Slayback and wife, of Erlanger, were Saturday night and Sunday guests of Sol Winkle and wife, of Idlewild.

Sand Run church has appointed delegates to the North Bend Association which will meet at Bullittsburg September 8th.

Mrs. Allie Corn, of Bullittsville, is soliciting and collecting funds for the Orphans' Home, and Mrs. Belle Cropper, for the aged ministers.

Farmers, Duke & Sons, of Petersburg, want your wheat. Those that have had dealings with them say they are nice, fair men to do business with.

Farmer Jones finished, last Saturday, putting up the nicest field of timothy hay in this neighborhood. At least there is none nicer—tall but not coarse, and clear of weeds.

R. B. Huey, of Sunnyside, passed through again Tuesday morning and had a pair of crutches in his buggy. Mr. Huey is nursing a badly sprained ankle and can't walk a step without crutches.

Dr. Randall and wife, of Louisville, and Dr. Walton, of Home City, arrived here Sunday evening for a visit with relatives. Dr. Randall and wife have just returned from an outing in Michigan.

Next week we will give you a rest from visit, and my nonsense thrown in between. We will give you something interesting about birds from an abler pen than mine next week. Rev. Jones has given us an article on birds of Boone county which we will give to the readers of the Recorder.

Rev. Brooks filled his regular appointment at Sand Run Sunday. Text—Matthew 5-6—"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." On his return he reported an unusually interesting Sunday school. The school has provided itself with a lesson chart.

Tomorrow will make 8 months that we have been toll collector at the gate in Pushburg, and the farthest away from the gate we have been is down to Idlewild and that between 7 and 8 o'clock at night, except when we went to the primary election at Bullittsville. Had it not been for the pretty, kind and sociable ladies that pass through the gate I don't know what I would have done. None that is prettier more kind and sociable has passed than Miss Carrie Graves. We feel sure that a certain young man that pays toll to Graves' lane will back us in this statement.

An Exciting Expereence.

Elmer Conley, carrier on rural rout No. 2 out from Burlington, had an experience last Saturday afternoon that it will take him a long time to forget. All the streams which his route crosses were on a rampage that afternoon as a result of the rain that commenced falling shortly afternoon that day, but, fortunately, he had made all his crossings except the one near town, before they got in a condition to make trouble for the traveler. Under ordinary circumstances the creek between W. J. Rices and Burlington, could have been forded without hazard when Mr. Conly reached it, but the horse he was driving, after having nearly crossed the creek, was frightened by some floating drift, and it whirled and started back to the side of the creek from whence it came, but as it neared the edge of the water it scared at an old sack that was lying on the shore, when it whirled a second time, turning the buggy over, throwing Mr. Conley out into the stream which was rising rapidly. He held to the lines and managed to get back to his horse, which got down in the creek and would have drowned in a few minutes had its owner not succeeded in releasing it from the shafts in wonderfully short order considering the surroundings. The vehicle was washed against the pier of an old foot bridge were it remained, but the mail pouch containing stamps and letters was sweept from the buggy and carried half a mile down the creek where it was found next morning suspended from a bush, mouth down, but all the contents in tact although thoroughly soaked. It was a narrow escape for Mr. Conley, and his trouble would doubtless have been more serious had it not been for Albert Conner, who chanced to be at the creek and rendered him valuable service.

Has Reached the Million and One-Half Mark.

The insurance in the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company has reached $1,501,966, being the largest amount of insurance carried by any company in the State doing business in a single county. This company has been managed in the most economical way possible ever since its organization, and has furnished its policy holders the cheapest insurance obtainable. This company has saved for the farmers of Boone county thousands of dollars in premiums, besides giving them an insurance that is more satisfactory than they can obtain elsewhere, as a fact, that is universally recognized and acknowledged throughout the county. The farmers have long since discovered that in this company they have a good thing and are going to stay with it.

James H. Hasting, in his 84th year, died at his home in Rising Sun, last Thursday, after a protracted illness. The funeral was conducted last Saturday from the home of his son-in-law, Dr. L. C. Cowen. For many years Mr. Hastings was a resident of this county, owning a very fine farm in East Bend bottoms. He was quite wealthy, having made much of his money in buying and shipping produce by flatboat to the South, many years ago when that was the manner in which produce was transported from this section to the cities and towns along the lower Mississippi. His wife and three daughters, Mrs. Cowen, of Rising Sun; Mrs. McKay, of West Va., and Mrs. McConnell, of Danville, survive him.

BABY SHOW

Dearborn County Fair at Lawrenceburg, Indiana.

At the exhibit of Harris Fitch on Friday, August 6th, 2 p. m., $5.00 in Gold will be given to the Prettiest White Baby under one year of age.

On Saturday, at the same hour, $5 in Gold will be given to the Handsomest Colored Baby under one year of age. No entry card is necessary, and the gold will be handed to the mother as soon as the decision of the judges is announced. These prizes are offered by the Lawrenceburg Register.

A Mr. Sharp, of Lexington, made quite a lengthy speech at the court house here last Monday to a small audience. He was speaking for the cause of the A. S. of E. and poured hot shot into the Burley Tobacco Society at many points. The leaders of the Burley Tobacco Society in this county were among his audience and gave him respectful attention. What effect, if any, the speech will have on the Burley Society's effort to pool the tobacco of this county cannot be foretold at this time.

STARTED THE TEARS AFRESH.

Thoughtless Act of Little Eben That Reminded Sorrowful Widow of Her Loss.

Mr. Jefferson had not been altogether an exemplary husband and father, but he possessed certain engaging qualities which secured him many friends, and made his death the cause of sincere mourning to his widow. "Mis' Jeff'son, she's done broke up over Eb'nezer's being took off fr'm pneumony," said one of the neighbors.

"She sutt'nly is," said another. "Mournin' round de house all de time, she goes. Why, day befo' yist'day I was thar helpin' her, an' she only stop cryin' once, an' dat was to spank little Eben for takin' m'lasses out'n de jug right into his mouf' when her back was turned.

"When she spanked him good an' set him down, she say to me: 'He makes me t'ink ob his pa so much I cyan't bear it!' and bus' right out cryin' agin."—Youth's Companion.

"Hamlet" in Japan.

Japan, eager to rival America and Europe, has appropriated our plays and presents them with novel and oriental accessories, says a writer in Sports of the Times. "Hamlet" was recently performed at Kobe in a style that makes Eddie Foy seem as serious as a funeral. The melancholy Dane first appeared in the uniform of a student of the Imperial university; then in the third act he wore a bright blue suit with striped stockings and rode a bicycle during his scene with the players. For the duel and his death he was conventionally attired in evening dress. The king, not to be outdone by his son-in-law, changed his costume from the robes of a Japanese nobleman to a swallowtail coat and stovepipe hat. Ophelia was beautiful in a kimono, but wooed Hamlet in a Parisian toilet. The effects are said to have been kaleidoscopic, but the Japanese actors contended that they were justified by the text.

A City Clerk's Garden.

A city clerk never misses a chance of expatiating on his garden to his colleagues, who, however, were never taken home to see it, but were under the impression it was of enormous size. Five of them resolved to have a look at it, discovered his address, and called one Saturday afternoon to see the hundreds of roses all a-growing and a-blooming. On being taken to the rear of the house, judge of their surprise on seeing a back yard about 12 feet by ten feet. One bold spirit ventured that it was not very big.

"Big!" replied the proud owner, pointing to the sky. "Why, man, alive, look at the height of it!"—Chicago Daily Socialist.

THE NEW WOMAN
Made Over by Quitting Coffee.

Coffee probably wrecks a greater percentage of Southerners than of Northern people for Southerners use it more freely.

The work it does is distressing enough in some instances; as an illustration, a woman of Richmond, Va., writes:

"I was a coffee drinker for years and for about six years my health was completely shattered. I suffered fearfully with headache and nervousness, also palpitation of the heart and loss of appetite.

"My sight gradually began to fail and finally I lost the sight of one eye altogether. The eye was operated upon and the sight partially restored, then I became totally blind in the other eye.

"My doctor used to urge me to give up coffee, but I was willful and continued to drink it until finally in a case of severe illness the doctor insisted that I must give up the coffee, so I began using Postum, and in a month I felt like a new creature.

"I steadily gained in health and strength. About a month ago I began using Grape-Nuts food and the effect has been wonderful. I really feel like a new woman and have gained about 25 pounds.

"I am quite an elderly lady and before using Postum and Grape-nuts I could not walk a square without exceeding fatigue, now I walk ten or twelve without feeling it. Formerly in reading I could remember but little but now my memory holds fast what I read.

Several friends who have seen the remarkable effects of Postum and Grape-Nuts on me have urged that I give the facts to the public for the sake of suffering humanity, so, although I dislike publicity, you can publish this letter if you like."

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Owen Tyler Officially Announces That He Will Make the Race for Mayor of Louisville on Independent Democratic Ticket.

Louisville, Ky.—Louisville's puzzling political situation became more tangled when Owen Tyler, the democratic nominee for mayor of the city in 1907, and regarded as one of the most prominent democrats in the city, made the official announcement that he would make the race for mayor on an independent democratic ticket. His announcement came after a long conference with his friends and advisers.

TO BECOME NUNS.

Two Daughters of Col. Milton Young, Noted Turfman and Breeder.

Lexington, Ky.—Misses Spalding and Alice Young, daughters of Col. and Mrs. Milton Young, left here for Albany, N. Y., to enter the Convent of the Sacred Heart to become novices in preparation for final vows that will make them nuns of the Order of the Sacred Heart, of which their younger sister, Maria, has been a member for some time. Col. Milton Young, the father of these three sisters, is the noted breeder and turfman, member of the Kentucky state racing commission, who last fall disposed of his famous McGrathiana stud of thoroughbreds, sold his broad acres of blue grass land and is now investing a vast sum of money in real estate and buildings in this city. Col. Young is not a member of the Roman Catholic church, but Mrs. Young is, she being a relative of Archbishop Spalding.

VACANCIES RESULTING

From Resignation of 24 Officers Will Be Filled by Election, Says Gov. Willson.

Louisville, Ky.—Gov. Willson announced that the vacancies in the First Kentucky regiment resulting from the resignation of 24 officers would be filled by election. He stated, however, that he would appoint officers to command the regiment until the annual encampment was over. "Following the encampment," said he, "I want the regiment to settle down to business and, in due time, elect its own officers. The appointments will be for the purpose, as stated, of enabling the regiment to participate in the benefits of the encampment, forget incidents connected with the resignations and be able to choose its own commanders."

RUMOR IS CURRENT

That Burley Tobacco Society Officials Will Support Judge O'Rear for Governor.

Lexington, Ky.—The claim is made in Central Kentucky political circles that Clarence Le Bus, president of the Burley Tobacco Society, and other prominent republicans in that organization have entered into an agreement whereby Judge Ed O'Rear is to have their support, and as much of that of the membership of the Burley Society as they can control, in his race for the republican nomination for governor of Kentucky. In return for this support, it is alleged, Judge O'Rear agreed to take the stump actively in the campaign for the pooling of the 1909 tobacco crop.

Louisville, Ky.—Caught between the gates of a railroad crossing while driving in a buggy, Mrs. Catherine Farris and her 3-year-old son were run down by a fast Louisville & Nashville passenger train. Mrs. Farris was probably fatally injured. The boy escaped injury.

Henderson, Ky.—The Albuquerque Fair and Racing association has leased the track of the Henderson Fair association for three years, and will institute spring and fall race meets here. The first meeting will commence August 21 and last to September 7, inclusive.

Glasgow, Ky.—Flem Powell, a member of the firm of Rice & Powell, grocerymen, was electrocuted here at the corner of Front street and Broadway by coming in contact with a live telephone wire.

Louisville, Ky.—Louisville was visited by the heaviest rain and electrical storm in years. The wind blew at a rate of 60 miles an hour, rain fell in torrents and 1.22 inches was recorded in an hour.

Louisville, Ky.—W. S. Garner, of Danville, Ill., a liquor dealer, who, in an automobile, ran over and killed little Yetta Kauffman in this city about three weeks ago, was held over to the grand jury on the charge of manslaughter.

Hawesville, Ky.—Fire destroyed the big tobacco warehouse of J. D. Cooper, valued at $2,500, and the residence of Mrs. Mary Bruner, valued at $2,000. Other property was badly damaged. There was no insurance on any of the buildings.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Changes in Militia Officers.

The adjutant general's department announced the appointment by Gov. Willson of the following officers of the First regiment to fill the vacancies caused by resignation: Capt. Felix Kerrick, to be major Third battalion; Capt. William B. Caperton, to be major First battalion; First Lieut. William H. Meadows, to be captain of Co. C; First Lieut. George W. Seymour, to be captain of Co. D.

A Day's Doings in Kentucky

Louisville, Ky.—In trying to escape the bullets from the pistol of Patrolman Vessels at the Seventh street depot, an unidentified negro jumped from a trestle into the river and was drowned.

Lexington, Ky.—Garrett B. Wall, real estate agent for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Co., announced that the erection of a new depot in Mt. Sterling, to cost $30,000, is to be begun at once.

Fordsville, Ky.—The body of Rev. Joseph Bennett was recovered from the river 25 miles below Louisville. "I will soon be out of this world," read a note addressed to Frank Bennett, son of the dead man.

Louisville, Ky.—Although Louisville sweltered under the fierce heat of the hottest day of the year, only one prostration was reported. The thermometer reached the highest notch of the season—96 degrees.

Lexington, Ky.—The postoffice at Withers, Rockcastle county, was robbed of $100, a supply of stamps and a number of registered letters. On call of the postmaster, Capt. V. G. Mullikin went to Withers with his bloodhounds, but found no trace of the robbers.

Lexington, Ky.—In a heavy rain and wind storm an electric light wire was blown from its fastenings and fell across the street. A horse, driven by Bob Angus, trotted against the swaying wire and was instantly killed, and Angus was rendered unconscious.

Winchester, Ky.—Clarence Lebus, president of the Burley Tobacco Society, brands as false the published report that he and other members of the society have entered in an agreement whereby the influence of the society is to be cast for Judge O'Rear in political affairs.

Lexington, Ky.—Circuit Judge Parker passed until August 2 the hearing of the petition for an injunction against the city council to prevent the adoption of the twenty-five-year water contract between the city of Lexington and the Lexington Hydraulic and Manufacturing Co.

Louisville, Ky.—Some light-fingered individual walked into the offices of the Louisville Coffee Co. here and walked away with $23,000 worth of government bonds, bank stocks and other securities. The securities were the private property of C. W. White, president of the company.

Louisville, Ky.—Railroad traffic managers and freight agents representing about 25 railroads attended a meeting of the Southeastern Mississippi Valley association here. The body considered many questions of rules and regulations dealing with the interhandling of freight business.

His ability soon won him recognition and he was made city editor, from which position he retired to become secretary of the Louisville baseball team.

Middlesboro, Ky.—Bell county is enraged over the attempt of James White, a negro, to attack Mossie Woodward, a nine-year-old white girl. Lynch talk is being indulged in. White lured the Woodward child to a lonely spot. He bruised her considerably, but did not accomplish his purpose.

Lexington, Ky.—To determine their commercial value tests of clays from several sections of Kentucky are being conducted at State university under the direction of Prof. H. D. Eastin, of the College of Mining Engineering.

Estill Springs, Ky.—The Kentucky state tennis tournament at Estill Springs brought out some very classy players for the men's singles, and the matches were exciting from start to finish. Splendid exhibitions of tennis were given by the Arterburn brothers, of Louisville.

MOONLIGHT RIDE IN MOTOR BOAT

Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 2.—A moonlight ride on Owasco lake in a motor boat that is said to have developed into a "joy ride" early Sunday morning resulted in a tragedy, in which two out of four persons lost their lives. The party, composed of E. Fay Stevens, William M. Yorkey, Miss Nellie Reilley, all of Auburn, and Miss Beatrice Mahoney, of Duboise, Pa., started out about dark Saturday night in Mr. Steven's motor boat. Miss Mahoney and Mr. Yorkey did not return.

After proceeding several miles up the east shore the party turned homeward. It was long after midnight when they got down to the front of the lake. Then in some manner not explained the tragedy occurred just as the boat was about to come into the channel at the end of the state pier.

None of the survivors will talk. Mr. Stevens being almost bereft of reason, while Miss Reilley hysterically denies having been in the party.

Coroner Louis O'Neill believes there was an accident and attempted rescue. He states that in trying to make a quick turn to enter the outlet the speeding launch suddenly veered to starboard, causing Miss Mahoney, who was seated on a high chair, to lose her balance and fall into the water. Almost simultaneously, it is said, young Yorkey shot overboard, supposedly to rescue the girl. Mr. Stevens stopped his engines and started at once to their aid, but after Yorkey reached Miss Mahoney both disappeared.

When the motor boat came back to the ill-fated spot no sign of the couple was found. The bodies have not yet been recovered.

DESPONDENT MOTHER

Dressed Her Two Children in Their Best Clothes, Then Killed Them and Herself.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 2.—Despondent because her husband had failed to provide for her and their two children, Meta, 15, and Gustav, 12, Mrs. Emma Michel, Sunday, dressed them in their best clothes, locked them in a room, and then turned on the gas. They were dead when neighbors, attracted by the odor of the escaping gas, made an investigation. The body of the mother was found in the kitchen. She had seated herself at a table, put a tube in her mouth and turned on the gas.

She had started suit for divorce, and pending a decision the husband had been ordered to pay her alimony, but had failed to do so. She became downhearted when the children became hungry and asked for food. The police are seeking the husband, to tell him of the triple tragedy, but up to a late hour Sunday night were not able to locate him.

Bride To Be Drank Carbolic Acid.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 2.—Although the family home had been prepared for a wedding, a funeral took place, with the bride to be as the corpse and the wedding guests as pallbearers. Pretty Beatrice Land, 18 years old, was to have been married to C. M. Rhodes according to the announcement of her parents. Guests from afar assembled, including Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Norwood, from Los Angeles, Cal. The coroner's jury returned a verdict that death was due from carbolic acid, administered by her own hand. Rhodes is missing. The young bride was buried in her wedding gown.

Large Number Killed in Collision.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 2.—The number of dead as the result of the head-on collision of two electric trains on the Coeur d'Alene & Spokane railway totals 12 and the number of injured about 75. The wreck occurred at Coldwater, Idaho, a small station 25 miles east of Spokane. Many persons from eastern states were on the car, having come to Spokane to register for the Indian land opening. Among the injured are many who live in states east of here.

Blind Boy Saves Brother.

Yeadon, Pa., Aug. 2.—When ten-year-old John Glibert, who could not swim, got into deep water in an old quarry used as a swimming hole by boys of the neighborhood and called for help his 12-year-old brother Henry, totally blind, guided by his cries, went to his assistance, and, although losing his grasp twice, succeeded in swimming to safety with the drowning boy.

Cotton Mills Burned.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 2.—News has just reached here of the total destruction by fire at Paras, state of Cohuil, Mex., of Las Estralla, one of the oldest and largest cotton mills in Mexico. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

Long-Lost Ship Arrives at Port.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 2.—The American barkentine J. M. Griffith arrived at midnight Saturday, 71 days from Carmen Island, Mex. The vessel was feared to have been lost. The delay in arrival was due to contrary and light winds.

A SURE SIGN.

When It Appears Act at Once.

Trouble with the kidney secretions is a certain sign that your kidneys are deranged and that you should use Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure all irregularities and annoyances, remove backache and side pains and restore the kidneys to health. Charles Cole, 204 N. Buckeye St., Iola, Kans., says: "The kidney secretions were irregular, scanty and painful and contained sediment. My back was stiff and lame and my limbs swelled. I grew weak and discouraged. Doan's Kidney Pills removed these troubles entirely. I have been well for two years."

Singular and Plural.

"Huh! the way it affects her husband is singular."

"How singular?"

"Just singular, it affects his 'nerve.' He tried to borrow a hundred from me to-day." — Catholic Standard and Times.

Widow to Widowers.

Mr. Robert Marshall, a well-known London police court missionary, recently received the following letter:

"Dear Sir: Reading of you sometimes in newspapers, I take the liberty of asking if you know of a very respectable man wishen to get married again. I have been a widow for years now and am all alone in the world. Trusting to your honor and remaining yours respeckable, Mrs. ——, middle age."

Either Way.

Mr. Wilkins had been sitting quietly on a nail keg, perusing a paper which he had found on the counter. The date of it he had not noticed. Finally he looked up with a puzzled expression.

"What's this wireless telegraph signal, this 'C. O. D.' they're talking about?" he asked.

"I guess it's 'C. Q. D.' ain't it?" suggested Holbrook, the grocer. "Anyway, it's a signal of distress," he added, moodily.

The Water Bite.

He was six years old and had never gazed into the mystic lens of a microscope. Several slides containing animalcula had been displayed to his astonished vision. He was too amazed to make any comment until he came to one slide that seemed more wriggly than any of the others. It was merely a drop of water.

The little fellow gazed at it a long time, with all its nimble particles of animal life, and finally exclaimed to his mother:

"Oh, mamma, now I know what it is that bites you when you drink soda water!"

A Colony of "Good Samaritans."

The point I wish to make most emphatically is that here in this mission of the slums, among the lowest of the low, is demonstrated again and again the power of a living religion to reconstruct the individual human life. And it apparently makes not the slightest difference whether the man is an unlettered Chris or a university graduate, the power of reconstruction is the same. Once grasped, such religious faith changes the whole world for the man who grasps it. It cures, as it did in apostolic times, both bodies and souls, and it produces, moreover, a singularly simple and brotherly relationship among those who are reached, a desire to serve one another. It is no affectation which causes these men to refer to one another as "brother." They are brothers.—American Magazine.

BEL AND THE DRAGON

Story of Their Destruction by Daniel

(Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. E. Mason.)

The Book as Part of Daniel.—The original text of the Book of Daniel and the Greek translations of the same differ in that the latter contain several insertions and additions, among them being this eleventh book of the Apocrypha, known as "The History of the Destruction of Bel and the Dragon." Such is the "Song of the Three Holy Children," which differs from the "History of Susanna," and the book under consideration, in that the former is incorporated in the midst of the text of Daniel, while the two latter mentioned appear more distinctly as appendices, and offer no semblance of forming part of the original text. "The History of Susanna" (or "The Judgment of Daniel") is generally found in the beginning of the book; though it also occurs after the twelfth chapter of Daniel. "The History of the Destruction of Bel and the Dragon," is placed at the end of the book; and in the LXX version it bears a special heading as "part of the prophecy of Habakkuk. Various conjectures have been made as to the origin of the additions, and it has been supposed that they were derived from Aramic originals, but the character of the additions themselves indicate rather the hand of an Alexandrine writer. It is also not unlikely that the translator of Daniel wrought up traditions which were already current and appended them to his work.

"O king, be not deceived," replied Daniel, with a smile of incredulity "for this is but clay within, and brass without, and did never eat nor drink anything."

As Daniel finished speaking the face of the king became livid with anger, and turning him about, he directed one of his servants to summon the priests which served before the great god Bel, and when they had come, he exclaimed, his voice shaking with intense passion:

"Daniel here declareth that Bel eateth not of those things which the king provideth daily. If ye tell me not truly that Bel eateth these things, then ye shall die. But if ye can certify me that Bel devoureth them, then Daniel shall die for he hath spoken blasphemy against Bel."

"Thou hast spoken well," said Daniel, looking full into the eyes of the assembled priests.

It was agreed that test should be made that the king and Daniel should shut and seal the doors of the temple after they had placed the usual food and drink and offering before the image. And the priests little regarded the matter, for under the table they had made a privy entrance, whereby they entered in continually and consumed those things which were set before Bel. But Daniel was as subtle as the priests themselves, and unbeknown to them he caused his servants to strew the floor of the temple with very fine ashes. Then were the doors shut and sealed with the king's seal.

In the morning with eager step came the king and Daniel with him, and the king said:

"Ah, ha, are not the seals whole?"

"Yea, my lord, they are whole."

Then the king commanded that the doors be opened, and when they had gone within behold the table was empty, and the king cried:

"Great art thou, O Bel, and with thee is no deceit at all."

But Daniel only laughed, and pointing to the pavement where the ashes had been spread, he said:

"Mark well whose footsteps these be."

And when the private entrance had been disclosed to the king he was very angry and he caused the priests to be slain and delivered Bel and the temple into the hands of Daniel, who caused them to be destroyed.

Now there was also in the same place a great dragon which the people of Babylon worshiped. And the king said unto Daniel:

"Wilt thou also say that this is of brass? Lo, he liveth, and eateth and drinketh. Thou canst not say that he is not a living god. Therefore worship him."

"Nay," responded Daniel, "but I will worship the Lord my God; for he is the living God. But give me leave, O king, and I shall slay this dragon without sword or staff."

And the king having given his consent, Daniel took pitch and fat and hair and having made of them great balls he took and threw them into the great yawning throat of the dragon from which issued a hot and scorching breath. Now, as soon as the pitch balls had reached the interior of the dragon they burst into fierce flame and caused the image to burst asunder in the middle. Then turning to the king, he said:

"These be the gods ye worship."

But when the people of Babylon heard that Daniel had destroyed not only Bel but the dragon which they worshiped, they were wroth and made common cause against him, declaring that if he were not delivered into their hands they would rebel against the king and destroy him. Now when the king saw the straits into which he had fallen he gave Daniel into their hands and they cast him into the den where were seven lions, fierce and hungry. There Daniel was for six days. But God by a mighty spirit carried his prophet Habbacu from Jerusalem to Babylon, bearing a bowl of pottage and broken bread, which he gave into Daniel's hand and he was strengthened. And on the seventh day came the king, and when he found Daniel safe he cried: "Great is the God of Daniel."

And he caused Daniel to be drawn forth and those who had sought his hurt were cast in thither and were devoured of the lions.

QUOTATIONS FROM PSALMS.

(Scripture Which Doubtless Comforted Daniel During This Trial.)

Who knows but that the inspiration for Daniel's daily devotion came from the Fifty-fifth Psalm as follows:

As for me, I will call upon God; and the Lord shall save me.

Evening and morning and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud; and he shall hear my voice.

And again from the Fifth Psalm:

Give ear to my words, O Lord, consider my meditation.

Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King and my God; for unto thee will I pray.

My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee. The foolish shall not stand in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing: the Lord will abhor the bloody and deceitful man.

But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy fear will I worship towards thy holy temple.

Lead me O Lord, in thy righteousness, because of mine enemies; make thy way straight before my face.

For there is no faithfulness in their mouth; their inward part is very wickedness, their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue.

Destroy thou them, O God; let them fall by their own counsel; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions; for they have rebelled against thee.

But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice: let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee.

For thou Lord, wilt bless the righteous; with favor wilt thou compass him with a shield.

THE STORY.

PROSPERITY and the attaining of eminence exciteth envy and bringeth enemies.

So it was in the days of Daniel, and so it is to-day.

At such time he who walketh the pathway of rectitude and honor will eventually bring those who would do him evil into the snare of their own devices.

Our story begins at the time in the life of Daniel when he had become great in the sight of the king and had been shown great honor my him. This was the reward of faithful service and the exercise of that great wisdom which God had bestowed upon him because he had chosen to serve God in the presence of the heathen court.

Naturally the preferment which was shown to Daniel by the king excited the envy and hatred of the princes and chief men of the realm and they sought for occasion against him.

Now it came to pass that as the king went in daily to adore the great god Bel which had been set up in the temple at Babylon, that he noted that Daniel went not thither and he asked him concerning the matter, saying:

"Why dost not thou worship Bel?"

"Because I may not worship idols made with hands, but the living God," replied Daniel, earnestly.

"Thinkest thou not that Bel is a living god? Seeth thou not how much he eateth and drinketh every day?" demanded the king, indignantly. "For him is provided at my expense every day 12 measures of fine flour, and 40 sheep and six vessels of wine."

His Goodness All About Us.

Men live daily by faith in the universe, by confidence that the seasons will return, that you can depend on nature giving as you sow. All living is based on the eternal verities of nature. Why can we not read this message for our own lives? Should not each returning day tell of the goodness that is ever new?

It is folly to look for some authoritative word revealing a good ruler of the world if you do not find goodness writ large and everywhere in the world as you have it. Why should we not trust the revelation of justice and affection in nature? Why should we not seek ourselves to learn the laws of life, to be in harmony with this universe of law and so to come at last to know the face of that life which has taught us life and love through the work of his fingers?

We need no dreams of dwelling beyond pearly gates; we need no promise of paradises of sloth or of fairy furnishings, all we need to make our lives full, and rich, and strong is this faith that the world is even now being made by right and truth, that no other way than that of right is possible to the true man, that the love that passes our knowledge is over all and this love is the law for our lives and for our living.

The man deserving the name is one whose thoughts and exertions are for others rather than for himself.—Sir W. Scott.

BACK TO THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Sailor Preferred the Simple Presents from Loved Ones to Meaningless Display.

"I bin readin'," said the sailor, "about the presents this Baltymore gal got wot married young Suffern Tailer. Suffern jiminy, it was fierce.

"Two motor cars wuth $15,000 apiece, one yard of di'monds containin' 250 picked stones, a solid gold dinnerservice, a check for $125,000, and so forth.

"In the next column I glanced my eye down the list of presents for that there Grosvenor gal wot married young Lord Dalmeny.

"I seen five rows of fine matched pearls wit a large diamond clasp, a town house in Belgrave square, a diamond tiarry, a hunter, a limousine 60-horse-power car, a di'mond triple festoon necklace, and so on down the column.

"Lord Dalmeny, Lord Roseberry's heir, never done a day's work in his life, and he never will. Suffern Tailer, though a free-born American, he ain't never worked neither. But I work 12 hours a day."

The sailor paused. Then he said earnestly:

"In school, when we was kids together, the ones wot worked hard got all the prizes. But now, when we're growed up, the prizes all goes to the loafers. Somehow it don't seem right."

The sailor smiled good-humoredly.

"Any how," he said, "I was to a weddin' last week down lowy way, and there the presents seemed simpler and more nacher'l-like and they didn't give me that there envious feelin'. Let's see. What was they? Sump'n like this:

"From father and mother of the bride, one Jersey calf. From bride to groom, hair wreath made from hair of her entire family, also six white shirts. From groom to bride, piano lamp and quartered oak Morris chair. From brother George, one dream book, one polite letter writer and a watch dog. From Aunt Hannah, six hens and a rooster, also one jar of tomato catsup. From Cousin Susan, one poem, composed by herself, on the bride and groom—15 verses in all!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Flowers Without Foliage.

One of the most extraordinary flowers in cultivation is Hall's amaryllis, which reverses the order of nature by blooming in midsummer without any foliage. Ordinary bulbs bloom in spring and rest in summer, but Hall's amaryllis suddenly appears out of the bare ground during the dry season.

This extraordinary plant has fragrant, rosy lilac flowers which are banded with yellow. In the spring the leaves make their growth, die down, and after a long interval of rest the flower stalks appear with the strange effect here described.—Garden Magazine.

Penetrability of Matter.

In a lecture at the Royal institution Prof. Sir James Thompson said that matter is neither continuous nor homogeneous. He showed by an experiment that hydrogen can be passed into a vacuum bulb passes through an incandescent platinum window. In a similar way sodium passes through glass, and this is a useful fact in the manufacture of vacuum tubes, because sodium can be passed into the tube to absorb the residual oxygen. Beltati, the Italian physicist, has shown that hydrogen can pass through cold iron. Matter may therefore be generally regarded as full of holes.

Russia Leather Repels Moths.

The peculiar and agreeable odor of Russia leather is derived from the birch bark used in tanning it. This odor repels moths and other insects and makes it invaluable for bookbinding, as a few books bound in Russia leather in a library will protect the remainder from insect attacks.

The New Idea.

"He hasn't much sense," said the health fad enthusiast, disgustedly. "Why, he hasn't enough sense to go out into the wet

TO THE PUBLIC.

Replying to the article of James B. Finnell in last week's RECORDER, I will say that my reasons for stating that I would care for my wife only as an insane woman, were,

First. It is not now and has not been since September, 1907, a debatable question as to her true condition.

Second. If she were sane now and had been since Sept. 1907, I could not, and would not tolerate and endure a great many things that she has done in the meantime. It is only on the theory that she is of unsound mind that I can know of things she has done, and yet love her as my wife.

Third. Even if she were willing to stay at home, it would be dangerous to me and my children, and I was so advised and warned by doctors of high standing, several months previous to her escape from home on December 5th, 1908.

For more than twenty-four years we lived together as happily as any couple in Boone county, until this mental disease came on her, and it was and is because of my love and respect for her while she was responsible that I have endured everything and done everything in my power for her since she has become irresponsible. After exhausting the Keely cure (which she has taken fully, twice and partially, four times,) change, rest, travel, and the skill of the best doctors of her own selection, as a last resort, painful as it was, and acting on my own judgment and the best medical and lay advice I could secure, I sought to have her cared for and restrained by law, the first step toward which was the inquisition.

We believe the two trials at Burlington were irregular and erroneous in many particulars, but there is no appeal save to the public. Above all we believe that a certain cabal existed among certain persons to so influence the Court, jury and public opinion as to defeat the proceedings at all hazards, regardless of facts. The article in question breaths the same indifference to Martha's welfare and my rights and feelings. Indeed it is convincing proof that every other consideration is subordinate to humiliating me, breaking me up if possible, and wasting her estate.

It is very true that all moneys advanced to her since the trial has been hers. I being no longer able to bear such extraordinary expense. Money was sent her liberally, in all $694.93 since the trial, in order that she and those who assumed to advise and direct her movements, might have every means of doing all and every thing possible for her welfare. The result is well and generally known. We know that she was in jail in Covington at least once before being sent to Cincinnati about June 20th, 1909. She was then deserted shamefully by all those who took such an active part in the trial pretendedly for her. I ask the public now, if those persons deserted her with her estate intact, how much would their interest be after her estate is dissipated?

Mrs. Griffith was given the Keely cure at Lexington, Ky., in February and March, 1908, and remained at home in Walton from June 1st, 1908, to December 5th, and did not have a drop of liquor until Thanksgiving when she secretly got some. During this period she was in the care and custody of a nurse, and it was then that her mind first continued and growing evidences of the ravages of Parinola. The people of Walton are quite as fair, honest and intelligent as any other part of the county, and it was her nearest neighbors and closest friends, who acting, as they thought for her welfare, testified at Burlington as to her condition. That I do not mean to argue any question pertaining to the trial. I have confidence in Boone county people being fair and honest. The jury was not so much to blame for this atrocious and shameful miscarriage of justice as the cabal.

Comment is made that the subject is private and not public. Therein I differ. It is and has become a matter of the gravest public concern. Insanity is a disease and is liable to attack the wife of any citizen of Boone county at any time and it is wholly wrong to speak of this as a family affair. There is not and never was the slightest trouble between me and my wife. Her delusions about that matter are a part of her disease, and Dr. Furnish and other doctors so stated, and that it is a very common one in this form of insanity.

But the main question is, "Is Martha A. Griffith of unsound mind?" In view of the testimony given at Burlington and especially in view of the utter and complete failure of all efforts made since by the various members of the cabal, whose motives were very strong to try and keep down the delusions and manifestations of insanity, and in view of the final and complete abandonment of her by each and all members of the cabal in her terrible hour of trial, a repetition of the opinion that her trouble is alcoholism alone, is nothing short of obstinacy, born of desperation, and proves previous guilty intent to thwart the inquest in spite of the facts. Happy would I be, if the facts did not exist; thrice happy would I be if the facts were alterable, or if time had given hopes for improvement, which if I am to believe Dr. Furnish and Dr. Beebe it does not.

By her abandonment of the pretended friends of the cabal have given me at least the consolation that it again gave me the privilege and opportunity of knowing where and how my wife is. When abandoned by all her pretended friends on July 4th, 1909, we caused her to be placed in Grandview Sanitarium, a private asylum for the insane in Cincinnati, where she has been ever since and now is. There she is restrained and controlled, though kindly treated, and sorrowfully do I state it, part of the time she is placed behind bars where she can do no damage to herself or the furniture or buildings. I can at least lay down at night and sleep, knowing that she is safe, which I could not do from December 5th, 1908, until July 4th, 1909, during which time under one legal obstacle, and another, she was at large no more capable of taking care of herself than a child, nor in fact half so much, since she only obeyed orders in keeping away from those who love her.

I can not doubt my own opinion after what I have gone through with for more than two years, nor the opinion of all Walton and Verona people where her life is known, nevertheless, I have taken counsel with the best doctors I could secure, and out of the seven different doctors who during the past two years have had her under treatment not a dissenting voice as to her trouble and condition has been raised, and out of these seven doctors, all true, substantial, and honest men, not one has ever given me any hope of her recovery. I regard Dr. Bagby, Dr. Jones, and the late lamented Dr. Adams, Dr. Knox, of Georgetown, Ky., and Dr. Rogers, of Cincinnati, all as honorable and upright gentlemen and able doctors, and Dr. Furnish, by reason of his experience at Lakeland as the very highest authority in Northern Kentucky on this class of cases.

I do not complain that her brothers attended the inquest. They ought to have attended the first inquest, and more than likely had they not considered it a foregone conclusion that the jury would find her to be a person of unsound mind, at the first trial, they would have done so, but whether this is true or not, they ought to have given me help and comfort long before either trial. Also if they believed that she was being wronged, they should have protected her, but not having been friendly to her or me for twelve years, they should at least have accepted the facts as they actually existed, and joined me in tryiug to subserve the best interest of their sister, and doing for her the only thing that can be done for her good, in the opinion of those who study and understand such misfortunes, give her institutional life, and this can not be done, and was so known by the brothers at the trial, without the formal verdict of a jury adjudging her to be of unsound mind.

As things now are, without a legal trustee, under both the Kentucky and Ohio law, no one has the power legally to restrain her, and no court in either state, can appoint a committee, without a verdict of unsoundness of mind, and the courts of Ohio have no jurisdiction for any purpose because she has no residence there. Likewise the courts of Kenton county have no jurisdiction, because her legal residence is in Boone county. I submit therefore that it is proper and right to appeal to the people and the officials of my own county to protect her, not me.

On July 4th, when I gave Mr. Finnell notice of the condition and peril of Mrs. Griffith, I sent a buggy to his residence to take him to the station if necessary, but bodily and bluntly refused to have anything at all to do with her or to assist in her honr of trial in any way, but since the appearance of my first article in the RECORDER Mr. Finnell has taken a renewed interest in Mrs. Griffith. One day last week after the RECORDER of July 14th, had been published Mr. Finnell went from Verona to Cincinnati and called upon Mrs. Griffith, and found her in Grondview Sanitarium, where she had been placed on July 4th, and finding that it was a private asylum for the insane, and seeing that she was properly cared for there, and that her best welfare was a thousand times better subserved than roaming at large on the streets, as a pretended self-reliant sane woman, he actually expressed his approval of her retention in that institution. Mr. Finnell knew where she was when his article was written. Why did he not denounce her incarceration in a private asylum for the insane as a high handed piece of lawlessness and injustice to Mrs. Griffith, as he did the mere mention and ideas of such a thing, while at the trial at Burlington? Mr. Finnell is an attorney, and he knows that her retention in Grandview Sanitarium at this time is not legal from strictly a legal standpoint and that she can be removed from this place by a habeas corpus proceeding.

Has he the heart as her brother to make the affidavit to remove her, and again turn her at large upon the streets? So long as she can be retained as an inmate of an asylum for the insane without the verdict of a jury under the laws of the state of Kentucky, the cabal and Mr. Finnell are content. She may be placed in rooms with bars for her protection, and kept as an inmate of a private asylum and Mr. Finnell expresses his approval, but pronounce her trouble "Alcaholism." Strange consistency. Even now with the full knowledge of all the past before him, and his approval of her incarceration in an asylum for the insane, should an attempt be made to have a jury formally adjudge Mrs. Griffith of unsound mind, Mr. Finnell would more than likely appear at the inquest protesting as loudly and vigorously as he attempts to write in his article.

Kelly & Roberts' Cooking Contest.

The cooking contest which Kelly & Roberts had been advertising for last Saturday afternoon created considerable interest on the part of the ladies, about a dozen of whom entered the contest, in which the prizes were awarded in the order named below:

Mrs. B. B. Hume,
" D. M. Snyder.
" W. L. Riddell,
" Edgar Riley,
" C. W. Riley.

The judges were Mesdames Dudley Rouse, James E. Smith and J. E. Gaines.

Following is a letter from Houston, Texas, written to J. W. Howe, by his son, who is in the Lone Star State:

DEAR FATHER:—I've been waiting to send you a long letter for several days but seem to have found time for only short notes since coming here. I am certainly delighted with this town, and the people I've met are equally pleasing. I have seen a number of the engineers here and their cordiality made what seemed a task really a pleasure. They are surely different from our northern engineers. When you enter an office here you're at once asked to have a chair. You state who you are and what you want, and they simply "lay off" for a while to hear what you have to say, and after talking about things in general, engineering conditions included, you are finally told that there is nothing doing just at present, but "drop in any time, we'll be glad to see you,—have you seen Mr. So-and So? he might have something, and you might see Mr. Blank too. Well, good bye, glad we met you; come in again any time."

I am enjoying the Y. M. C. A. here immensely. They have a $800,000 building and a fine swimming pool 75x25 feet and 7 to 8 feet deep, always filled with cool, clear, artesian water,—you can imagine how much I enjoy a dip and a swim in it. I went to the Masonic lodge one night last week and had not the slightest difficulty gaining admittance. They have two lodges here with stated meetings every two weeks instead of once a month, so there is always something doing.

If it turned so hot in Hamilton after I left, I'm glad I turned my face toward the sunny south, for I haven't felt the heat here at all and they tell me that June and July are their hottest months. They never hear of heat prostrations in this section, so have no fear for me on that score. In fact, I don't see how any climate could be much finer than this. Even though the sun is warm, it never causes a sunstroke and you can always keep comfortable in the shade. There's always a good breeze blowing in from the gulf and when the people of Ohio are miserable with the heat even at night during July and August, they sleep under a blanket here during those months.

Mr. Knight has been exceptionally kind. He took me over to Galveston last Sunday afternoon and we had a great time. It was the first time I ever had a dip in salt water and I liked it immensely. I'm not much in love with Galveston as I am with Houston, however. The latter is truly a beautiful city and is growing rapidly. Just now they have six fine buildings in process of construction, each from eleven to sixteen stories high.

There is a tract of land near here called the Oyster Creek district which is undoubtedly the finest and most productive soil I ever saw for the money. It is not black land, but a dark chocolate brown, and the same all the way down too, instead of from one to two feet deep like we have in Ohio. It is mostly prairie land, as level as your hat brim, and only wooded along the streams.

Oyster Creek is quite good size and Bastrop Bayou is navigable so that products can be shipped very cheaply to Galveston, which is only about thirty-five miles southeast, and as you know, is the greatest cotton market in the world, as well as the second largest import and export market in the United States.

The H. & B. V. Ry. runs through this district, making it possible to market perishable products in a very short time, and artesian water may be obtained and placed on this tract at a depth of 700 to 1000 feet. I suppose you think I'm getting very enthusiastic over Texas and you're guessing just right, for I never dreamed the country here would be half so fine as I have really found it. They not only can raise nearly everything we do in the north, but all the tropical products as well. Bermuda onions grow like weeds here and there is surely a lot of money in them. One man put in forty acres in onions in the early spring and received a net profit of $11,000 from them. He then put the same land in sorghum which produced eighteen ton per acre, selling at $10 per ton, yielding a return of $7200. The second cutting yielded ten ton per acre, making a return of $4000—thus making a total return of $22,200 in one year from forty acres. Now, what do you think of that? We couldn't begin to do such a thing in Ohio and the farm that would make the nearest approach to it, would cost $200 per acre or more and this land down here can be bought at from $30 to $40 per acre.

Figs, oranges, tomatoes, potatoes, etc., all grow around here. I've seen some of the potatoes from Oyster Creek district and thought they looked fine enough to have their pictures taken, so I will send you their photo soon.

I do wish you would come down here and invest in some of this land. It won't cost you much and the trip itself will do you good. You needn't be one bit afraid of the heat as it seldom gets as hot here as you say it was in Hamilton last Sunday. Why not get hold of some of the men around home who have money to invest, get them interested in Texas land, form a company and invest in a tract of this land. But I want you to get in on this yourself. Large tracts may be bought at from $18 to $25 per acre.

If any one tells you "Texas is hell," tell them they don't know anything about it that you have a son down there and he says it's more like the original Garden of Eden.

I have been more fortunate than I anticipated. As you know, I had not a single thing in view in the way of a position, and it has only taken me a little over a week to land a pretty good job, which pays me $65 per month and all my expenses. I'll be in camp about twenty miles from Houston for a while. I can keep this job for three months but expect to get a better one soon on railway construction work.

Don't be alarmed if you don't hear from me as often as you did when I first came down here, for I'll be out in the woods and will only return to Houston on Saturday, and Sunday.

Give my best to all the boys and tell them I'm delighted with Texas—both its people and the country.

Write soon and tell me what you think of my proposition as to your coming down here yourself.

Lovingly, your son,
JAMES S. HOWE.

$3,200 Profit in One Year.

We know where there is a section of land (640 acres) every foot level, and can be cultivated, with rich loam 2 to 6 feet deep, will raise an average of 40 bushels of corn, 30 bushels of wheat, 40 bushels of oats, 50 buahels of kaffir corn, four crops of alfalfa; no tiling, can be plowed 12 months in the year, no rocks, no stumps, no gulleys, no hills; taxes 22c on the $100, selling at one-fourth its worth; roads always good; catarrh, asthma and consumption yield to the pure, dry air, such is the Pan-Handle of Texas. These are facts—get that fixed in your mind—solid facts. A tract of land is being sold in a healthier country than this, cheaper country to live in, where the crops bring more per acre than here, and you ought to own some of it. This land has been increasing in value at the rate of $5 on the acre every year. A section would make you a profit of $3,200, to say nothing about the crop, if you could buy now, while the land is cheap. See us about it. Go with us on our next excursion, August the 16th. A. E. It is about time to begin making arrangements for your supply of winter coal, which can be secured at any of the yards along the river.

The hay fever patients are looking forward to a prolonged period of the ailment on account of the large crop of rag weeds this summer.

Ben Cason, of Middle creek, was in town one day last week. He reported his fruit crop a failure, but said his corn and tobacco crops are hummers.

Don't forget the Odd-Fellow's picnic at Harvest Home grounds next Saturday afternoon. Being the second picnic of the season and a large attendance is anticipated.

Some say that their potatoes while large and plentiful in the hill the quality is not so good as it should be, while others claim that the tuber is scaley and imperfect.

The very repulsive reptiles known as spreading adders appear to be more numerous about here this year than they were last, and quite a number has been killed in the last few weeks.

The big Dearborn county fair will begin tomorrow at Lawrenceburg, and continue three days. A large crowd of Kentuckians are expected to patronize the fair, and especially on Saturday.

Under the old dispensation last Monday would have been the annual election in this State, and the luscious watermelon (home-grown of course) would have been present at all the polling places.

If all the wheat within five miles of Burlington was stacked at one yard, a good machine and an active, industrious force of hands could thresh it all in two days and then some.

The excessive heat had no ill effects on the harvest hands last week, although it was almost sufficient, one or two days, to bake a man who was exposed to the rays of the sun.

The privileges for the Florence fair will be let at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon on the grounds at Florence. All who desire doing business in that line during the four days of the fair should be on hand.

The parasite that has been injuring alfalfa in other parts of the State has been getting in its work in some places in this county. Edgar Hensley, of Locust Grove neighborhood, was about the first to complain of its ravages.

The speech of F. C. Greene in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Ed Wilson, delivered in Owenton last Friday, was pronounced by all who heard it as perhaps the ablest speech ever delivered in the Owenton court. Before his speech every one thought the defendant would go clear, but after his speech they gave him 21 years in the penitentiary, and his friends were afraid he would be hanged.—Carrollton Democrat.

High Class Entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Cochran, of Louisville, will give an entertainment in Burlington on Thursday night during the Teachers' Institute two years ago, he made his visit a pleasure to the teachers. Mrs. Cochran is a very talented musician and plays accompaniments of her own composition as well as those of the masters. Mr. Cochran has made good everywhere with "Song and Story," having visited many places as often as three and four times. His musical and dramatic ability is far above the average. Come out and hear him.

A Big Crop of Tobacco.

Tun Rich, of Big Bone has between 50 and 60 acres of the finest tobacco in the county. To save his crop will require an immense amount of house room.

Working the Roads.

Bert Sullivan, overseer of roads in this district, had a force of hands out a day or two last week repairing the highways.

The Harvest Home.

The posters containing the premium list for the next Harvest Home have been printed and are being put up. The date is Saturday, September 11th.

Fine Tobacco.

It is claimed that Flick Bros., of Belleview, have the finest piece of tobacco in the county. It is growing on a piece of land where the osier willow grew for many years.

Collections Slow.

Deputy Sheriff Cropper's trip to Rabbit Hash, last week, concluded his first 1909 circuit of the county collecting taxes, and he reports the collections considerably smaller than they were for the corresponding round last year.

Plenty of Peaches.

W. T. Davis, who resides a mile and a half out on the Florence pike, was in town, Saturday morning, and in speaking of his fruit said that his peach trees are full of nice peaches. Some of the trees were so full that he had to relieve them by shaking some of the peaches off.

Taken off for Repairs.

B. B. Hume sent his mail wagon to Lawrenceburg, last Thursday, to have it put in first-class condition for use on the Burlington and Erlanger route. The wagon has been in use for many years, but when it appears again on the route it will have the appearance of a spin, spank new vehicle.

Getting Ready for the Fair.

Chas. Garnett, of Kidville, was in town, one day last week, negotiating with the local butchers for a supply of meat to be used in the dining room at the Florence fair. Mr. Garnett will have charge of the dining room during the fair and it is the height of his ambition to furnish the best dinner ever put on there.

Gone Again.

Having repaired all the fencing on the farm, cleaned out the briars and filled all the gullies, and laid the corn by, "Boss" Eddins has gone back to Hyde Park to work. Boss held a job there once before for quite a while, and those for whom he worked liked him so well he had no difficulty in getting back into his old position.

Steamboat Excursion.

The Steamer Kentucky will leave Rising Sun on Saturday, August 7th, at 7:30 a. m., for Lawrenceburg and way-points. Round trip 50cts. This is Kentucky Day at the Dearborn County Fair. The star feature on the program is the Derby in which some of the best horses in the country will run. Other numbers on the program are the 2:15 trot, 2:20 pace, ½ mile run, Cook's Roman Hippodrome, and shows of Saddle and Harness horses. It will be a great day. Return boat leaves Lawrenceburg at 7 p. m.

Good Crops.

The work of putting up one of the largest and best crops of hay in years, was completed in this county last week, just as the warmest weather of the year arrived. Nearly every mow in the county is filled to its utmost capacity, while large stacks and ricks loom up in every direction. It is true in some meadows the weeds came on rapidly during the last few weeks but not enough to injure the hay as a crop to any very great extent. While the weeds threatened to take the corn crop early in the season, owing to the continued wet weather, there are now splendid prospects for a larger yield of corn than the county has had for several years. A good, soaking rain this week will make a splendid crop of the early planting, and put the late corn in a splendid condition, and a good rain in a week or ten days will insure that part of the crop. The tobacco is coming on nicely, and some of it will have to be cut in the next three or four weeks. The crop is a bumper, but not so large as was anticipated during the winter months. Altogether Boone county farmers have no cause for complaint so far this year, altho their tobacco and corn crops are not beyond destruction by storms. The fine rain of last Saturday afternoon which at some points was very near a cloud-burst, will make the early corn in this county and advance the late corn so that another good rain will make it.

Somewhat Lame.

Leonard Hewitt is going lame badly. He went to milk one night last week when the cow stepped on two of his toes reducing them almost to a pulp.

Farm Hands Needed.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, who has just returned from a trip through the Western States, says that lack of farm hands is the chief cause of the high price of foodstuffs. "All through the West and Northwest the same situation exists," said Mr. Wilson. "The country is as healthy and prosperous as ever it was but thousands of acres of valuable and fertile lands are lying idle because the owners cannot hire labor, although wages paid farm hands in these States are the equal of those paid to the laborers in our large cities. The immigrants who land on our shores all flock to the larger cities and those of them who have done farming in their own countries are incompetent and nearly useless to the American farmer because they do not understand the modern machinery used on the farms in this country. Prices of grains and vegetables therefore are bound to be high and of course with these staples selling at high prices the value of meats is thereby raised."

A Family Fight.

The Burley Tobacco Society and the Society of Equity are engaged in a bitter fight, which may result in the destruction of both. The Society of Equity charges that the officers of the Burley Society are making too much money out of pooling of tobacco, which was primarily for the benefit of the growers. The comfortable provisions made for Mr. LeBus, president of the Burley Society, augmented the ill feeling which had been cropping out for some time on the part of the Society of Equity and the fight began and is on good and strong.

Was Examined for a Certificate.

Before a candidate is eligible to election to the office of county superintendent of schools, the law requires that he hold a certificate of qualifications from the State Board of Education. Last Friday was the date for holding that examination throughout the State, the State Board furnishing the local boards with the questions propounded to the candidates, consequently Rev. Edgar Riley was a busy man last Friday. The examiners for this county were County Judge Cason, County Clerk B. W. Adams and Dr. F. L. Peddicord. The local board certifies the examination papers to State Board for grading.

A Fast Horse.

Belleview Boy, the property of Al Rogers, the Belleview merchant, has been showing some wonderful bursts of speed this season. The horse is being trained by Atty. O. M. Rogers, of Erlanger, on the track at the Erlanger fair grounds, and has gone a quarter in :31 by the watch. That is certainly going some and is fast enough to capture first money in many races this season if he will stick to his knitting.

The Crime of Idleness.

Idleness means trouble for any one. Its the same with a lazy liver. It causes constipation, headache, jaundice, sallow complexion, pimples and blotches, loss of appetite, nausea, but Dr. King's New Life Pills soon banish liver troubles and build up your health. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Corn and Hogs.

The flattering prospects for a good crop of corn will create a demand for stock hogs, the supply of which has been reduced to the minimum in the last year because of the scarcity of corn and its very high price. Very few hogs are to be found in this county just now.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S. CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

BANKING GAINS IN DULL TIMES.

The statements made by the national banks of the country under the call of April 28, 1909, show that they had gained at that date no less than $774,261,000 in total resources since the report of their condition made on May 14, 1908. That means an increase of nearly nine per cent. in a year which was marked by much industrial depression and no little discouragement in business. It might fairly be called the growth of the national banks in dull times—a gain of about $65,000,000 a month in resources. Where such development is possible in a period of depression, what may be expected when the current of trade and industry is flowing swiftly? If that is the way the financial strength of the United States increases—and the national banks measure less than half of it—when business is not considered good; what may be counted on when things are booming? It seems fair to estimate the growth of the banking resources of the country in a good year at more than $5,000,000 every busines day, or over a billion and a half annually, says the Cleveland Leader. If Americans feel somewhat conscious of their wealth and power and prosperity they do not have to look far for facts and figures to justify their soaring conception of the land they live in and stake their future upon.

The American Agriculturist is good authority, and that newspaper says regarding the outlook for corn, the country's greatest grain crop: "Every condition, both weather and financial, has tended to enlarge the breadth of this cereal, and the result is an acreage which not only surpasses all previous records, but is the largest area ever devoted to a single crop in any country in the history of the world. The increase was 5.2 per cent. over the area harvested last year, making the present breadth 102,750,000 acres, or slightly more than 5,000,000 above the largest breadth heretofore harvested." Other cereals make a correspondingly favorable showing. There is no famine in sight this year, and as usual the United States will continue to help out the rest of the world in the matter of food supply.

One effect of the warm weather has been to promote the fruit and berry industry. The weather recently has provided great growing and ripening conditions, and the effect is plainly visible. The Delaware-Maryland peninsula, which is the seat of an immense strawberry-raising industry, reports a record-breaking crop. The shipments have aggregated 16,676,000 quarts, with 2,600,000 quarts more than for the same time last year, and this notwithstanding heavy rains that tended to offset in part the favorable influence. The supply of material for strawberry shortcake and strawberry jam, to say nothing of just strawberries and cream, is abundant and should add largely to human happiness. The strawberry season is very brief, but this year the fleeting joy of it should be exceptionally intense.

Some men have the hortatory and correctional instinct so strong upon them that they are always wanting to rush out and expose an error or refute a fallacy, says the New York Evening Post. This goes with a highly developed oratorical temperament. Gladstone had it. Walter Bagehot describes him as listening to some dullpated member of parliament, prosing away with one folly after another till midnight, and saying to his friends: "Let me get at him. I can show him what a fool he is and perhaps induce him to vote with us." But life is too short, and the fools too numerous, for such exercises. We should have philosophy enough to perceive that some blunders are too great to require exposure, that some men and some newspapers are not worth answering.

The treasury statement shows that the deficit in receipts of the national government at the end of the fiscal year just closed was $89,811,000. The estimated deficit was $114,000,000, so it seems that conditions have improved greatly during the last few months. The discrepancy is larger than is desirable, but receipts and expenditures are steadily getting nearer together, and anyway Uncle Sam has a handsome surplus left from former years to draw upon. And his credit was never better.

There is a little comfort for friends of American shipping in the news that a company running steamships to Hawaii has contracted with an eastern concern for three new vessels of large dimensions. These ships will be of American construction, operated by Americans under the American flag, and for this much the American people may be proportionately thankful. May the new craft be such inspiring object lessons that more of the same sort will follow speedily.

QUAKE KILLS SCORES

MEXICO SHAKEN BY MOST VIOLENT TREMOR IN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

SEVERAL CITIES DEVASTATED

Six Dead in Capital and Many Injured—Residents of American Colony Escape Death—People in Panic, Pray in Streets.

Mexico City.—Reports continued to come in Saturday from the district which suffered Friday in the earthquakes which were the most severe this country has experienced in the last 25 years. President Diaz has rushed aid to the devastated towns and the army is giving every assistance to the hundreds of injured.

Reports telling of the loss of life are as yet not complete, but the official figures show that scores were killed outright while many were mortally injured. The towns of Acapulco, Chilipa and Chilpancingo, in the state of Guerrero have been partially destroyed.

Reports from the towns of Vera Cruz, Oaxaca, Tlacotapam, Silicayoapam, Duzman, Meroteon and Pachuca indicate more or less property damage, but no loss of life.

Communication with this part of the republic of Mexico has been imperfectly established.

Acapulco, noted for its great landlocked harbor, is the chief port of call for steamers plying between San Francisco and South American ports. Its population is about 5,000.

Chilipa has a population of 8,500. It is about 75 miles from Acapulco. Chilipancingo is about 20 miles from Chilipa and has a population of 6,500. The towns were badly wrecked by an earthquake in January, 1902.

According to the observatory records, the first shock was felt at 4:15 in the morning. It was severe, causing the bells of the many cathedrals of the city to toll, breaking crockery and in some instances leveling walls. The inhabitants of the city had hardly recovered from the fright occasioned by the phenomena when a second and more severe shock caused an outpouring of nearly all of the inhabitants to the streets and open plazas. Tall buildings swayed and in some instances cracked, the pavement opened in places and in the poorer sections of the city houses collapsed.

So far as can be learned from police records, six persons lost their lives in Mexico City and its environs as a result of the second shock, including three women and a child. Four others are expected to die.

The large American colony escaped unscathed. There were some slight contusions reported among them from falling plaster, but no serious injuries were reported.

The property damage in this city is slight. Some of the cathedral walls were cracked and scores of adobe walls were sent to the ground, but the main business part of the capital showed absolutely no signs of the severe shaking which it had been given.

The wailing and praying of the Indians in the public squares added to the weirdness of the scene and painted an unforgettable picture on the minds of the half-clad, shivering hordes of frightened men, women and children who stood out in the drizzling rain waiting for the coming of daylight. When the sun shone the people returned to their homes, having sufficiently recovered from the fright to sit down to breakfast.

HARVEST HANDS IN DEMAND.

Work for Thousands of Men at Good Wages Awaiting Them in the Northwest.

St. Paul, Minn. — For the purpose of assisting the farmers of the northwest to obtain an adequate supply of help for the abundant harvest that is now assured, and also to direct men seeking work to the various places where their services are in demand, the Northern Pacific Railway Company has issued a circular telling where in the states of Minnesota and North Dakota several thousand men will be needed in the next few weeks.

This circular gives the names of the various towns along the line of road, the date at which harvest will begin, the number of men wanted at each point and the rate of wages. The lowest rate of wages quoted is $1.50 a day, but the general rate is from $2 to $3. A small army of men is needed.

Son Born to Mrs. Crane.

Pittsfield, Mass. — A son was born to Senator and Mrs. Winthrop Murray Crane at Dalton. This is the second child born to Senator and Mrs. Crane, their first son, Stephen, being born in 1907. The senator, who is one of the wealthiest men in congress, hurried home on a special train.

Compulsory Insurance Adopted.

Clinton, Ia.—The supreme officers of the United Danish Societies of America, in session here announced the votes cast by the Danish societies throughout the country that the policy of compulsory insurance of members of the organization carried by a vote of 637 to 608.

Senate Ratifies Convention.

Washington.—The senate ratified an arbitration convention between the United States and Paraguay, which was signed on March 13 last.

MARKER ARRESTED FOR THEFT

RETURNS TO TIPTON TO CELEBRATE HIS BIRTHDAY.

Was Fishing in Missouri—Refuses to Discuss $105,000 Embezzlement Charge.

Tipton, Ind. — Noah R. Marker, former assistant cashier of the First National bank, who was arrested at his home in this city following his return after being a fugitive from justice for a week, and was taken to Muncie for preliminary hearing, is back among his friends.

When taken before Commissioner Ellis at Muncie, Marker was charged with stealing $50,000. He waived examination, was bound over in the sum of $10,000 to appear before the federal grand jury at Indianapolis next November.

Marker then was brought back to this city, where a throng of his friends awaited him. Several business men signed his bond, and he was released from custody. Many business men signed their names to an agreement to give security for him in any collective amount up to $225,000.

Mr. Marker said he had been fishing in Missouri and returned to celebrate his thirty-fifth birthday anniversary with his family. He declined to discuss the affairs of the bank, and refused positively to say what he did with the $50,000 in cash he is alleged to have taken from the bank.

Marker, according to examiner Weir, is short fully $105,000, but the amount may run much larger as Mr. Weir's examination has not been completed. The defaulting cashier, it has been stated, spent part of the stolen money in an Indianapolis bucket shop. It is believed his peculations were due to an effort to make good money he had wasted in bad investments.

But though Marker refused to discuss his defalcation at the bank he did not decline to talk to his callers regarding his trip to Missouri.

Marker said he saw two pepole he knew on the car going to Indianapolis, but encountered no person in the city with whom he was acquainted. He proceeded direct to the union station and bought a ticket for the sleeper to St. Louis. There was no person near the ticket window when the purchase was made. He arrived at St. Louis next morning and in the station he met some men who were going fishing.

He asked about a good place to spend a week and was told that Louisiana, Mo., a city about sixty miles distant, was an ideal place. He went there, obtained board and spent the time tramping the hills or fishing.

Marker said he learned of the sensation his disappearance had caused here when the papers from St. Louis arrived at Louisiana on Tuesday. He discussed the articles with the others at the boarding house, and no one had a suspicion of his identity. He was looked on as a person who came to regain his health, and his name and address were not asked.

Wisconsin Man Gives Up.

Kansas City, Mo. — His baby dead and his wife dying, as a result of a street-car accident in California, William Nilsson, himself broken in health and tired of being a fugitive from justice, walked into police headquarters and surrendered. He told the police that he had committed forgery at Janesville, Wis., two years ago, while a shipping clerk in the employ of a creamery company. Nilsson fled to Germany, he said, but later returned to this country. He learned Monday that his baby had been killed and that his wife was dying.

Saved by President's Yacht.

Bridgeport, Conn. — The president's yacht Sylph last night rescued 20 of a party of 29 persons who had been thrown into the Saco river when a powerboat capsized. Two persons are believed to have been drowned. The others were rescued by other powerboats.

Alabama Favors Income Tax.

Montgomery, Ala.—Both houses of the legislature reported favorably the national income tax amendment.

WRIGHT BREAKS AIR RECORD

Orville Carries Passenger in Cross-Country Flight and Wins Government Prize.

Washington.—Orville Wright, in a ten-mile cross-country flight in the aeroplane built by himself and his elder brother, Wilbur, and accompanied by Lieut. Benjamin D. Foulois of the army signal corps, broke all speed records over a measured course Friday. Wright's speed was more than 42 miles an hour. The official board determined the speed made. The Wrights will receive $30,000, including a bonus of $5,000, for their aeroplane. This provision was made by congress.

Wright's speed was more than 42 miles an hour. He made the ten-mile flight in 14 minutes and 42 seconds, including the more than twenty seconds required for the turn beyond the line at Shuter Hill, the southern end of the course. He attained a height in crossing the valley of Four Mile Run of nearly 500 feet, and the average altitude of his practically level course was about 200 feet.

President Taft arrived upon the parade ground at Fort Myer just in time to see the aeroplane land and to participate in the wild demonstration which welcomed the triumphant aviators. He sent Col. Treat, commanding officer of the artillery at Fort Myer, to bear his congratulations to the victors.

Slayer Holds Own in Battle of Wits and Jerome Fails to Shake Him.

White Plains, N. Y.—Harry K. Thaw, the members of his family and his retinue of attorneys and experts were unanimous in their opinion Wednesday that he has proved his fitness to be at large. His friends believe that if he acquits himself in the future as well as he did under the six-hour grilling administered by District Attorney Jerome, Justice Mills will have no choice but to grant his application for release from Matteawan. He showed no signs of insanity in the battle of minds with the New York prosecutor.

Although it has been alleged that Thaw has broken with his wife and that she is aiding the opposition, he showed a strong desire to shield her name.

WILSON TO QUIT CABINET?

Secretary of Agriculture, Who Has Record for Service, May Resign in January.

Washington. — That the Taft official family will begin about January to be rounded into its permanent form and membership is the opinion entertained now. It is strongly believed by those who have looked into the situation of late that there will be one change in the cabinet about the turn of the year, which will take out of that body the veteran, Secretary Wilson.

He has been a cabinet member longer than any other man ever was in this country—longer, indeed, it is said than anybody ever was continuously in a responsible government. With his retirement, Mr. Meyer of the navy will be the only remaining representative of the Roosevelt cabinet.

SPAIN IS FEELING EASIER

SURRENDER OF BARCELONA REBELS CREATES RELIEF.

Moors Reported Withdrawn from Outskirts of Melilla City—Estimates of Riot Casualties.

Madrid.—The news from Barcelona that the cavalry and troops have gained the upper hand and captured the main body of insurgents and that only isolated bands are holding out in the suburbs created the greatest relief in official circles Friday. The work of repression will rapidly be followed up throughout the Catalonian province.

It was officially announced that the cavalry engaged at Barcelona had succeeded in driving into St. Martin's square the principal band of revolutionists, against whom the artillery opened fire. After fighting desperately and successfully for a long time the revolutionists were surrounded. Many persons were killed in the fighting and the survivors surrendered.

The Moors have withdrawn from the outskirts of Melilla city. It is believed they are concentrating for a new effort. They burned hundreds of their dead, who they were unable to carry off.

After the tribesmen had retired the sad work of burying the Spanish dead, which already were rotting in the sun, was hurriedly accomplished in the ravine where two columns of Spanish troops were ambushed while trying to rescue a convoy. The ground was covered with corpses.

No figures, not even estimates, of the loss of property and life in Catalonia is vouchsafed by the authorities, but private dispatches leaking out through the frontier indicate that there has been great slaughter at Barcelona, one report placing the dead at 400 and the wounded at 1,000.

Up to Wednesday morning the troops in Barcelona had not fired a shot. In the meantime, churches, convents and colleges had been burned and the sky illuminated by the flames. Dozens of priests and nuns were ruthlessly slaughtered, some at the altar while holding the crucifix in their hands, others while bravely defending their institutions against the revolutionists and devouring flames, the populace preventing the Red Cross workers from giving aid.

It is understood that the king greatly regretted the necessity of using artillery but yielded to the arguments of his cabinet ministers that halfway measures or temporization might prove fatal. Reports continue to filter in of the widest destruction of property, especially churches, monasteries and convents, against which the fury of the mob was centered.

The only other regions creating particular anxiety are the Biscayan provinces. The workmen in the Bilboa mining districts are well organized and have assumed a threatening attitude.

PULLIAM'S WOUND IS FATAL.

Baseball Leader's Attempt at Suicide Successful—Secretary Heydler Takes Charge.

New York. — John A. Heydler, secretary and treasurer of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, and in all probability the next president, Friday arranged for the funeral of Harry C. Pulliam, the president who killed himself. It is believed Pulliam's body will be taken to Louisville for burial.

It was learned that President Pulliam's last official act before firing the bullet that ended his life was to direct a circular letter to club presidents of the league, notifying them that the time for keeping park flags at half-mast as a token of respect to the memory of President George B. Dovey of the Boston club and President Israel W. Durham of Philadelphia, who died recently, had expired.

The belief seems to be general that Heydler will be chosen to succeed Pulliam, practically without opposition.

P. T. Powers, president of the Eastern league, said he had known for the last four years that Pulliam was brooding dangerously over some trouble.

"It always seemed to me," said Mr. Powers, "that it was some deep personal trouble that bothered Harry. He was always a square man. Of course he naturally made enemies in backing up umpires, because that can't be helped, but he would stand behind his umpires through thick and thin. He took baseball matters too seriously, I think."

Is Not Belleville Slayer.

Denver, Col. — Roy L. Griswold is not the man wanted for the murder of Peter Waeltz at Belleville, Ill., last November. Sheriff Charles Cashel of St. Clair county, Illinois, arrived at Georgetown where Griswold has been under arrest for the last three days and declared positively that he is not Sidney Baker, the photographer wanted. Griswold was released.

HIS PLEASURE A LATE ONE.

Probably Mr. Hogan Did Not Realize Just What Might Be Made of His Expression.

Casey was dead, and to do honor to him the members of the Thirteenth district Tammany organization attended the funeral in a body, says the New York Press. Slowly and sadly they filed past the coffin and took a last look at their departed comrade. At the door each man paused to shake hands with the sorrowing widow and to murmur a few words of condolence. When it came to Mr. Hogan's turn, he retained possession of her hand, while he delivered a lengthy oration concerning the good qualities of the defunct Mr. Casey.

"Sure, 'tis plain you knew my husband well, sir," said the tearful Mrs. Casey.

"Only by sight, ma'am, only by sight," Mr. Hogan hastened to explain, "I never had the pleasure of meetin' him 'til to-day."

Eczema Made Hands and Feet Swell, Peel and Get Raw—Arms Affected, Too—Gave Up All Hope of Cure.

Quickly Cured by Cuticura.

"I suffered from eczema on my hands, arms and feet for about twelve years, my hands and feet would swell, sweat and itch, then would become callous and get very dry, then peel off and get raw. I tried most every kind of salve and ointment without success. I tried several doctors, but at last gave up thinking there was a cure for eczema. A friend of mine insisted on my trying the Cuticura Remedies, but I did not give them a trial until I got so bad that I had to do something. I secured a set and by the time they were used I could see a vast improvement and my hands and feet were healed up in no time. I have had no trouble since. Charles T. INCREASES AND DECREASES IN NEW TARIFF BILL

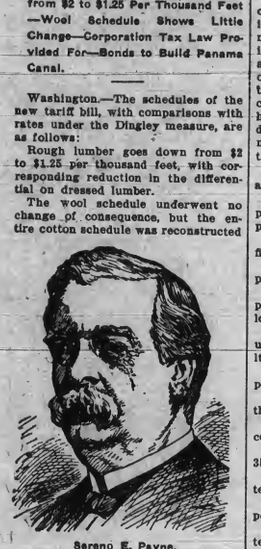
Schedules as Compared with the Rates Under the Existing Dingley Measure.



HIDES ON THE FREE LIST

Marked Reduction in Wood Pulp and Print Paper—Rough Lumber Down from $2 to $1.25 Per Thousand Feet—Wool Schedule Shows Little Change—Corporation Tax Law Provided For—Bonds to Build Panama Canal.

Washington.—The schedules of the new tariff bill, with comparisons with rates under the Dingley measure, are as follows:

Rough lumber goes down from $2 to $1.25 per thousand feet, with corresponding reduction in the differential on dressed lumber.

The wool schedule underwent no change of consequence, but the entire cotton schedule was reconstructed and the phraseology greatly changed in the hope of preventing reductions through decisions by the courts such as have characterized the administration of the Dingley law during latter years. In many instances the rates intended to be imposed by the Dingley law were cut by the decisions, the reductions in some instances being from 60 per cent. to eight per cent. ad valorem. It is estimated that the rates fixed by the bill are about three per cent. higher upon an average than those collected on cotton last year.

Sereno E. Payne.
Republican House Leader.

Probably the most marked reductions throughout any schedule in the bill as a result of the action of the two houses and of the conference committee are found in the metal schedule. Beginning with a decrease in the rate of iron ore from 40 to 15 cents per ton, there is a general reduction throughout that portion of the bill, pig iron going down from $4 to $2.50 per ton, and scrap iron from $4 to $1. The reduction on many of the items in this schedule amounts to about 50 per cent., and this reduction includes steel rails. There is an increase on structural steel ready for use and also a slight increase on razors, nippers and pliers, and on such new metals as tungsten.

Rates on Hosiery Increased.

The rates on hosiery are generally increased. In the much contested matter of the rate on gloves the high protectionists fail to agree. They sought, through an increase made by the house, to raise the duty materially above the Dingley figures, but were antagonized by the senate, and the senate won, the only change made in the entire schedule being one slight reduction.

The silk schedule was reconstructed with a view of imposing specific rather than ad valorem duties, with the result that the average duty will be somewhat higher under the new law than under the present statute.

Oil cloths and linoleum are heavily cut, but otherwise the changes in the flax, hemp and jute provision were not material. A slightly increased duty is provided for hemp, both crude and hackled, and also on certain high-grade laces. On linen yarns and mattings there is a reduction.

Sugar and tobacco duties remain substantially as they are under the Dingley law. The free importation of considerable quantities of both of these articles from the Philippine islands is permitted, and a material change was made in the internal revenue law by an amendment taking the tax off the sale of tobacco in the hand.

There is a uniform increase on spirits, wines and liquors of 15 per cent.

Raise Rate on Hops.

In the agricultural schedule hops are increased from 12 to 16 cents a pound and there is also an increase on lemons, figs, almonds and pineapples.

The publishers win their fight for lower wood pulp and print paper, the rate on the ordinary newspaper print paper being fixed at $3.75 per ton instead of $6 as under the Dingley law, and on the higher grades of print paper at $3.75 instead of $8. Mechanically ground wood pulp is to come in free of duty instead of paying one-twelfth of a cent a pound as under the Dingley law, but provision is made for a countervailing duty in case it becomes necessary to protect this country against Canada's inhibitions upon the exportation of woods to the United States.

Hides of cattle come in free and there is a corresponding reduction on leather and leather goods. The free hide provision is based on the condition that on and after October 1, 1909, sole leather from the hides that are to be admitted free will pay a duty of five per cent.; grain, buff and split leather 7½ per cent.; boots and shoes, the upper leather of which is made from such hides, 10 per cent., and harness and saddlery, 20 per cent. This schedule of rates will result in a reduction of 15 per cent. on boots and shoes, 20 per cent. on harness and saddlery, 15 per cent. on sole leather and 12½ per cent. on leather for uppers, if made of the hides that are put on the free list by the provision.

Bituminous coal is reduced from 67 cents per ton to 45 cents, and there is also a reduction on gunpowder, matches and cartridges. Agricultural implements go off from 20 per cent. ad valorem to 15 per cent. and the older works of art are placed upon the free list. Petroleum, which received much attention in both houses, slips through without any duty, countervailing or otherwise, and most of its products come in under the same terms.

Liquid anhydrous ammonia, from 25 per cent. ad valorem to five cents per pound.

Manufactures of collodion, increased five per cent.

Coca leaves increased five cents per pound.

Fancy soaps increased from 15 cents per pound to 50 per centum ad valorem.

The list of decreases in this schedule was much longer, the principal items being as follows:

Boracic acid from five to two cents per pound.

Chromic acid and lactic acid from three to two cents per pound.

Salicylic acid from ten to seven cents per pound.

Tannic acid, or tannin, from 50 to 35 cents per pound.

Sulphate of ammonia from three-tenths cent per pound to free list.

Borax from five to two cents per pound.

Borate of lime and other borate material from four to two cents per pound.

Chloroform from 20 to 10 cents per pound.

Iodoform from $1 to 75 cents per pound.

Licorice from 4½ to 2½ cents per pound.

Cottonseed Oil on Free List.

Cottonseed oil and cotton oil from the dutiable to the free list.

Flaxseed, linseed and poppy seed oil from 20 to 15 cents per gallon.

Peppermint oil from 50 to 25 cents per gallon.

Ocher and ochery earths, sienna and sienna earths, and umber and umber earths, if ground in oil or water, from 1¼ to one cent per pound.

Varnishes from 35 per cent. to 25 per cent. ad valorem.

Methyated and spirit varnishes from $1.32 per gallon and 35 per cent. ad valorem to 35 cents per gallon and 35 per cent. ad valorem; white lead, acetate of lead, and a number of other lead products, from one-fourth to one-eighth of a cent a pound.

Bichromate and chromate of potash from three to 2¼ cents per pound.

Chlorate of potash from 2½ to two cents per pound.

Crystal carbonate of soda from three-tenths to one-fourth of one cent per pound; chlorate of soda from two to 1¼ cents per pound.

Hydrate of, or caustic soda, from three-fourths to one-half of one cent per pound; nitrate of soda from 2½ to two cents per pound.

Sulphate of soda, or salt cake, or miter cake, from $1.25 to $1 per ton.

Strychnia, or strychnine, from 30 to 15 cents per ounce.

Sulphur, refined or sublimated, or flowers of, from $8 to $6 per ton.

In earthenware and glassware there is but one increase. This is slight and is made on the smaller sizes of plate glass. The decreases in this schedule include:

Fire brick, glazed, enameled, and so forth, from 45 per cent. to 35 per cent. ad valorem; brick, other than fire brick, if glazed, from 45 per cent. to 35 per cent. ad valorem.

Plaster rock, or gypsum, crude, from 60 to 30 cents per ton; if ground or calcined, from $2.25 to $1.25.

Unpolished, cylinder, crown and common window glass, smaller glass and cheaper values, reduced one-eighth of a cent per pound.

Onyx in block, from $1.50 per cubic foot to 65 cents per cubic foot.

Duty Lowered on Marble.

Marble, sawed or dressed, over two inches in thickness, from $1.10 to $1 per cubic foot, with other reductions on the entire marble paragraph and on other stone.

There is a general reduction in mica to 30 per cent. ad valorem. There was before a mixed specific and ad valorem system.

Structural steel, fitted for use, falls in the basket clause at 45 per cent. ad valorem.

There also is an increase on razors, and upon nippers and pliers.

Lithographic plates are increased from 25 to 50 per cent. ad valorem.

Chrome metal, ferrosilicon, tungsten, and other new metals used in the manufacture of steels, are made dutiable at not more than 15 per cent. ad valorem. Tungsten ore is made dutiable at ten per cent.

The duty on watches was readjusted, remaining at about the same as the Dingley law.

A duty of one cent per pound was put upon the zinc in the ore where it contains more than 20 per cent. of zinc. On zinc with less than 20 per cent. there is a lower rate of duty. Zinc now has a duty of 20 per cent.

There was an added duty of one-half of one cent per pound upon plain bottle caps, and on decorated bottle caps the duty was increased from 45 to 55 per cent.

The reductions in the metal schedule are more numerous and generally more marked than in most of the others. Heading the list is iron ore, which was decreased from 40 to 15 cents per ton. Pig iron, iron kentledge, and Spiegeleisen, were lowered from $4 to $2.50 per ton.

Scrap iron and steel from four to one dollar per ton.

Reductions were made on bar iron, round iron, slabs and blooms, structural steel not fabricated, anchors, iron and steel forgings, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel, steel bands or strips.

Railway Bars and Steel Rails.

The reduction on cotton ties is from five-tenths to three-tenths of one cent per pound, and railway bars and steel rails from seven-twentieths of one cent per pound to seven-fortieths. Iron or steel sheets were also reduced, and the duty on charcoal iron is made six dollars a ton, instead of $12.

Other reductions in the metal schedule affect polished sheets, rolled sheets of iron, steel, copper, or nickel, steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs; round iron or steel wire; steel bars or rods, cold rolled, cold drawn, or cold hammered, or polished; anvils, axles; blacksmith's hammers and sledges, track tools, wedges and crowbars; bolts; cast iron pipes; cast hollow ware; chains; lap welded or jointed iron or steel boiler tubes; cut nails and spikes; horseshoe nails; wire nails; spikes, nuts and washers; cut tacks; steel plates engraved; rivets; cross-cut saws, mill-saws, circular saws, pit and drag saws, steel hand saws and all other saws; screws; wheels for railway purposes; aluminum; momazite sand and thorite.

Tin plates reduced from one and one-half to one and two-tenths cents per pound.

Duties on table and carving knives reduced and the minimum limit of the Nelson W. Aldrich.

Republican Senate Leader.

rates on these knives is made 40 per cent. ad valorem, instead of 45. Material reductions are made in the rates on files and the duty on cash registers, jute manufacturing machinery, typesetting machines, machine tools, printing presses, sewing machines, typewriters, and all steam engines, is reduced to 30 per cent. ad valorem from the existing rate of 45 per cent. Until January 1, 1912, embroidery and certain lacemaking machines, and machines used for the manufacture of linen cloth, and tar and oil spreading machines used in the construction of roads, are to be admitted free.

Lumber Schedule.

In the lumber schedule the only increases were those on shingles from 30 cents to 50 cents per 1,000, and on briar wood and laurel wood for the use of pipe makers from the free list to 15 per cent. ad valorem. The rate on sawed lumber was decreased from $2 per 1,000 to $1.25 per 1,000. There was also a diminution on timber from one cent per cubic foot to one-half cent, and on sawed boards of white wood and kindred woods from $1 per 1,000 to 50 cents per 1,000. The reduction in the differential rates in favor of dressed lumber averaged about one-third of the Dingley rate. Paving posts, railroad ties and telephone poles are reduced from 20 to 10 per cent. ad valorem; clapboards from $1.50 per 1,000 to $1.25; laths from 25 cents to 20 cents per 1,000, while fence posts and kindling wood were taken from the dutiable list and placed on the free list.

The only change in the sugar schedule consisted of a reduction of five-hundredths of a cent in the differential on refined sugar.

In agricultural products broom corn was taken from the free list and made dutiable at three dollars per ton. Hops are increased from 12 to 16 cents per pound. There are also increases on lemons, figs, almonds, pineapples and chicory root. The reductions in the agricultural schedule covered bacon and hams from five to four cents per pound, lard from two to one and one-half cents, fresh meats from two to one and one-half cents, and starch from one and one-half to one cent per pound. Tallow, wool grease, dextrin, peas, sugar beets, cabbages and salt were also lowered.

The wine and liquor schedule was increased throughout to 15 per cent. over the Dingley rates.

The cotton schedule was reconstructed and readjusted to bring the duties up to those collected during the first four years of the operation of the Dingley law and to the rate then collected under that law. Since that time the rates have been lowered, in some cases from 60 to 6 per cent. by court decisions. These new rates are equivalent to an addition, on the whole, of three per cent. ad valorem increase over that collected under the present law for last year.

Cotton Hosiery.

Cotton hosiery, valued at not more than $1 per dozen is increased from 50 to 70 cents per dozen pairs; more than $1 and less than $1.50 per dozen pairs, from 60 cents to 85 cents per dozen pairs; more than $1.50 and not more than $2, from 70 cents to 90 cents per dozen pairs.

The remaining rates on stockings are the same as under the present law.

Hemp is increased from $20 to $22.50 per ton and hackle hemp from $40 to $45 per ton. The cheaper laces remain as in the present law, but there is an increase from 60 to 70 per cent. on some of the higher priced laces. In this schedule single coarse yarns are reduced from seven cents to six cents per pound and gill nettings from 25 to 20 per cent. ad valorem.

There was a general reduction in carpets and mats.

A reduction from 20 cents to 15 cents is made in hydraulic hose. Oil cloth, including linoleum, was reduced about one-third.

There was practically no change in the wool schedule from the rates of the Dingley law, but there was a readjustment between tops and yarns and a small decrease on cloths with a cotton warp.

Mechanically ground wood pulp was exempted from duty and placed on the free list with a provision for a countervailing duty against Canada. The lower grade of printing paper was reduced from $6 to $3.75 per ton and the higher grade from $8 to $3.75. There is an increase on surface coated paper and lithographing prints, including postcards and cigar labels.

Common window glass of the lower sizes, in which the imports are heavy, is given a reduction, and where changes were made in the chemical schedule there was a general decrease, except upon such articles as fancy soaps and perfumes, which were increased.

Other Reductions.

Bituminous coal goes down from 67 cents to 45 cents per ton, and there are reductions on gunpowder, matches and cartridges. Agricultural implements are cut from 20 to 15 per cent. ad valorem.

Hides were placed on the free list, while the rate on band and sole leather is reduced from 20 per cent. to five per cent. ad valorem, on dressed leather from 20 per cent. to 10 per cent.; boots and shoes from 25 per cent. to 10 per cent.

Fireworks are increased from 20 per cent. advalorem to 12 cents per pound; wearing apparel made of fur from 35 to 50 per cent, and the higher class jewerly from 60 per cent. to 85 per cent. ad valorem; pencil lead is given specific rates instead of ad valorem rates with a slight increase. For the first time moving picture films are named specifically in a tariff law. The bill gives them a positive rate of 1⅓ cents per foot.

Petroleum, crude and refined, including kerosene, gasoline, naphtha, benzine and similar petroleum products are made free of duty and are left even without a countervailing duty.

The Dingley rates on women's and children's gloves are allowed to stand. The only change is a reduction on "schmaschen" gloves not over 14 inches in length on which the rate is made $1.25 a dozen pairs instead of $1.75.

Miscellaneous Provisions.

A provision is included in the bill which levies on all articles upon which any foreign country pays a bounty or grant upon its exportation, an additional duty equal to the amount of such bounty.

It is required that all imported articles capable of being marked without impairment of their value shall be stamped with the name of the manufacturer and the country of origin.

A very elaborate provision for the administration of the customs laws was adopted by the conferees. It is practically the same as that adopted by the senate. It is intended to prevent undervaluation of articles on which there is no foreign market by which true values may be ascertained.

Provision is made for the establishment of a customs court of appeals, with headquarters in Washington. It will comprise a presiding judge and four associate judges, at salaries of $10,000 a year. There are to be appointed to conduct government cases before this court a special assistant attorney general at $10,000, a deputy assistant attorney general at $7,500, and four attorneys at $5,000 each.

The internal revenue tax on tobacco is amended, making the rates on chewing and smoking tobacco eight cents a pound. No change was made in the tax on cigars, except those weighing under three pounds per 1,000, which were increased from 54 to 75 cents per 1,000. The rates on cigarettes were increased to $1.25 per 1,000. A prohibition against the use of coupons or special gift pledges is incorporated in the new law.

The provision granting farmers the free sale of leaf tobacco places a restriction on the retail dealer which requires him to record every sale amounting to two pounds or more to one person in one day. A number of other ironclad requirements are included in the redraft of this section adopted by the conference committee, by which it was intended to prevent any frauds upon the internal revenues, and at the same time give as much of a local market as possible to the tobacco grower. The growers had contended for unrestricted sale of amounts up to ten pounds.

Foreign-built yachts are subject to an excise tax of seven dollars per gross ton, which is to be collected annually on the first day of September. In lieu of the excise tax the owner of a foreign built yacht or pleasure boat may pay a duty of 35 per cent. ad valorem on his yacht. This will entitle him to American registry. The excise tax provision was adopted because of the fact that some question has been raised about the ability of the government to enforce collection of import duties.

Corporation Tax.

Every corporation, joint stock company or association organized for profit, and every insurance company is required to pay annually an excise tax of one per cent. upon its entire net income over and above $5,000. This feature was put into the bill to raise additional revenues to apply on the treasury deficit. The section was prepared by Attorney General Wickersham, assisted by other able lawyers in the administrative circle, and great care was taken to guard against double taxation. It provides a form of publicity which will enable the government to exercise supervision over corporations. The form of returns which must be made by corporations, and other features of the corporation tax law were made public in detail during its consideration in the senate. It is estimated that from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year will be collected under this form of federal taxation.

The secretary of the treasury is authorized to issue Panama canal bonds to the amount of $290,569,000, which sum, together with that already expended, equals the estimated cost of the Panama canal. It is not intended that the bonds shall be issued except as needed to provide money to carry on the work of canal construction. The bonds are to be payable 50 years from the date of issue, and will bear interest at a rate not exceeding three per cent. When the bonds are sold the secretary of the treasury will restore to the working balance the $50,000,000 paid originally for the canal property and the canal zone.

The re-enactment of the provision authorizing the issuance of treasury certificates for money borrowed to meet public expenditures, increases the amount of the authorization from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000. A large number of other provisions that are in force under the existing tariff law with a few changes in phraseology in several cases.

The drawback provision of the Dingley law is incorporated in the conference bill in lieu of the drawback of the house hill which intended to permit the substitution of domestic material in the manufactured article for export to the same quantity that the imported material, upon which a drawback was obtainable, was used in the manufacture of similar articles for domestic consumption. An additional provision was adopted entitling users of domestic alcohol in the manufacture of perfumery and cosmetics to secure a drawback of internal revenue tax to the amount of alcohol used in an exported article.

Senate Ideas Accepted.

Practically all the administrative features of the hill which were adopted in the senate were accepted by the conferees. They include a new maximum and minimum feature, a corporation tax law instead of the inheritance tax adopted by the house, authorization for a bond issue to raise money to build the Panama canal, as well as numerous other features.

The maximum and minimum provision prescribes duties in accordance with the rates named in the dutiable list until March 31, 1910, when 25 per cent. ad valorem is to be added automatically as the maximum duty. The president is authorized to apply the minimum rates, however, to imports from a country which gives its best rates to the products of the United States and is made the judge as to whether a foreign country accords to the United States treatment which is reciprocal and equivalent. When he finds that this condition exists he is to issue a proclamation putting in effect the minimum rates and until the time of the proclamation the maximum rates will apply.

The president is empowered to employ such persons as may be required to secure information to assist the president in the discharge of the duties imposed upon him and information which will be useful to the officers of the government in the administration of the customs laws. The reciprocity treaty with Cuba is not affected by the maximum and minimum provision.

The president is empowered also to abrogate those reciprocity treaties which can be terminated by diplomatic action. It is made his duty to give 10 days' notice after the bill becomes a law of his intention to bring those treaties to an end. All other treaties which contain no stipulation in regard to their termination by diplomatic action shall be abrogated by a notice of six months from the president to those countries, the notice dating from April 30, 1909, on which date Secretary Knox notified foreign governments that the United States would soon ask them to enter into new tariff relations

GAMES NEXT SATURDAY:
Big Bone at Burlington.

The Belleview-Hebron game scheduled for next Saturday has been postponed until after the Lawrenceburg fair.

The game at Big Bone had gone five and a half innings, last Saturday afternoon, when the hard rain broke it up. Both teams were putting up a nice article of ball which was being enjoyed by all present. Big Bone presented her strongest line-up of the season, and was making it very interesting for the visitors when the proceedings were interrupted by the rain. The Burlington delegation was delighted with the cordial reception accorded them by both the players and audience, and are sorry they did not get to play a game of nine innings. Below is the score:

Burlington	0	1	0	1	0	0	—	2

Struck out by Conner 5, by Woods 6; two base hit—Walton; batteries—Conner and Blackjack, Wood and Corbin; umpires—Sullivan and Burres.

The best game of ball played here this season was that by the two combination teams, last Monday, the game going eleven innings with a score 2 to 1. It was a great pichers' battle between Westbay and Sandford, 9 hits being made off Westbay, and 6 off of Sandford. Every man in the game played fast ball, but Conner captured the crowd with his sensational work at third base.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. W. C. Goodridge has been quite ill for several days.

Jerry Carpenter, of Richwood, was in Burlington a couple of days last week.

Lieut. and Mrs. Robt. Shearer, of the Philippines, are at Erlanger, visiting their parents.

Mrs. Eliza Riddell, of Belleview, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Nancy Adams, near town.

Drs. W. M. and Paul J. Randall, of Louisville, attended county court in Burlington, Monday.

Henry Feltman, a Covinton tobacconist, was mingling with the county court day crowd.

Mrs. C. C. Roberts spent several days the past week at Walton, guest of her father and sisters.

Miss Jennie Lee Castleman returned, last Wednesday, from a visit to relatives in Anderson county.

Miss Laura Maxwell, of Covington, was visiting friends in and near Burlington, several days last week.

James Barlow and Edward Anderson, of Limaburg, were transacting business at the court house, Friday.

William Carpenter and wife, of Locust Grove neighborhood, visited relatives in Gallatin county, last week.

Charles Westbay and F. A. Hall attended the funeral of their uncle Joseph McGarvey, of Cincinnati, last Thursday.

Hayden Kendall, of Williamstown, was a guest at the Cowen House, Monday night, enroute to Lawrenceburg to attend the fair.

Mr. Kirk is now located in Burlington, having succeeded Mr. G. O. Crayne here as manager of the affairs of the Modern Woodmen of America in this territory.

Grover Snyder, one of the three young men who went from Burlington to North Dakota a few weeks ago arrived at home yesterday, having enough of the wild and wooly.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, God in His Providence on July 7th, 1909, called to His home above our dear friend and co-worker, Mrs. Lana Miller, one of the founders of the Ladies Aid Society at the Christian Church at South Fork, and one who was always wise and gentle in her counsel. We the members of this society adopt the following resolutions, viz:

1. That the death of Mrs. Miller came as a personal loss to each of us, and that our society, church and community have lost one who always bore her part bravely and faithfully.

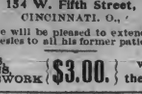
2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the care of her God.

3. That we devote a page of our minute book to her memory and send a copy to the Warsaw Independent, and to the RECORDER, also to the bereaved family.

MRS. ELIZA ROBERTS,
MRS. PIKOLENA KANNADY,
Committee.

Badly Hurt.

The horse driven by W. W. Conner, of Union, ran away with him yesterday near P. P. Neal's, of Buffalo, and threw Mr. Conner out of the buggy onto a pile of rocks at the side of the road, cutting and bruising his face badly and nearly severing one of his ears, while one of his shoulders was hurt considerable. The extent of his injuries were hot known to the party who reported the accident, as a physician had not seen the unfortunate man.



Dropped Dead on Ball Ground.

Charles Black, about 20 years old, and son of George Black, of Big Bone, dropped dead, last Sunday while playing ball on the grounds at Big Bone Springs. He was in the act of catching a thrown ball when stricken, and fell forward. Death was instant. Funeral at Hughes' Chapel last Monday.

C. M. Baldon has installed self measuring and computing tanks in which to keep coal oil and gasoline.

IDLEWILD.

Birds of Boone county; together with something about snakes.

For some time I have been interested in bird study, but it is only within the past sixteen months that I have entered into it with zest. This year when we came to Boone county for our annual vacation I came armed with a pair of opera glasses and two good volumes on our common birds and how to identify them. For three weeks now I have been forming an acquaintance with the birds of Northern Kentucky and the experience is facinating. A week or ten days after arriving here I was passing down the Vawild and stopped for a few moments talk with Mr. Thomas. While talking, a bird lit on the wire fence near us. I named the specie and went on naming the different species that I had identified around Mr. Willis' farm. Mr. Thomas asked that I write an article on birds and he would send it to the RECORDER that its readers may get the results of my study. This I am glad to do. During the above named period I have identified some forty-three species as follows: Brown Thrasher, American Robin, Yellow Hammer or Flicker, Red Headed Woodpecker, Meadow Lark, Cardinal or Red bird, Black bird or Purple Crackle, Mourning or Turtle dove, Cat bird, Indigo Bunting, English Sparrow, Yellow billed Cuckoo, sometimes called Rain Crow, Chickabee crow, Whiteheaded Nutpath, Marsh wren, Chipping sparrow, Goldfinch, Kentucky Warbler, Yellow breasted chat or yellow mocking bird, Chimney Swallow, Phoebe, Song Sparrow, Bob White or Quail, Wood pewee, Barn Swallow, King bird, Southern Mocking bird, Blue bird, Red winged black bird, Wood thrush, Tittark or American pipit and House wren. Besides these I saw some seven or eight species, mostly of the sparrow family that I have not identified as yet. Strange to say I have not seen in these parts this year a single Blue Jay, a bird that is very common in nearly all parts of the county. The birds noted in the list were all seen either on Mr. Willis' farm or along the pike in the vicinity. I should say that there are within the border of Boone county a least twenty, possibly thirty more species of bird life than are set down in the above list. And of the birds I have noted here all of them, with the exception of the crow and black bird are of great value to the farmer and should be protected by him. In conclusion I have a thing or two to say about snakes. Quite a number of "Spread head vipers" as they are commonly called, are usually killed in this county. There is a very general belief that these snakes are poisonous. On the contrary they are among the most harmless of snakes. They have no fangs, and the worst thing about them is their ugliness and blowing proclivities. As a matter of fact there are only four poisonous species of snakes in America. They are as follows: Rattle snakes, Copperhead, Cotton mouthed moccasin and the Coral snake of Arizona. Any book on reptiles will substantiate this, as will also a bulletin on snakes published by the Agricultural Department of our National Government.

Personal Mention.

Martin L. Weaver, of Sale Creek, Tennessee, was a caller at this office last Thursday morning. He has been in the employ of the Cincinnati Southern Railway so long that he is considered a part of its equipment. He has made good at every point to which he has been assigned, and no man stands higher with his superiors. Mr. Weaver's hair has whitened considerably in the last few years, but otherwise growing older has made no change in his appearance. It was certainly a pleasure to meet an old friend who is holding his own so well against the efforts of time. There has been an almost complete change in the makeup of Mr. Weaver's old neighborhood since he left it, a majority of its citizens being composed of strangers or the children or grandchildren of those who composed its citizenship when he went forth into the world to seek his fortune. Here is to you, Martin, and may your shadow never grow smaller.

D. C. Peck, well known in the northern part of this county, but who has been a citizen of Trimble county for about forty years, has returned to his native heath in Indiana, and has requested that his RECORDER be hereafter sent to Aurora. It is said that he may again become a citizen of Petersburg, this county, a little later on.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Knuppfer, of Covington, were guests of Charlie Birkle and wife one day last week. Mrs. Knuppfer is Mr. Birkle's aunt. Her husband isa retired business man in Covington where he was engaged in mercantile and saloon business.

W. T. Black, of White Haven, superintendent of the Consolidated Telephone Co., was a pleasant caller at this office, one day last week. He reports a steady growth in his system both as to 'phones and business.

Johnnie Hogan, of Constance neighborhood, was among the visitors to Burlington, last Friday. When Johnnie comes over it looks like one of the citizens has got back home.

Mrs. Ben Cason, who resides down on Middle creek, was taken to a Cincinnati hospital, last Thursday night for treatment.

Mrs. Elizabeth DeCoursey and little son, Walter, of Covington, are in Burlington, guests of her sister, Mrs. Alice Adams.

Mrs. E. W. Duncan spent last week with her mother near Walton.

M. T. Garnett and W. J. Rice were in Covington, last Friday.

Thanks to Johnnie Cloud for a sack of nice peaches.

'Twas A Glorious Victory.

There's rejoicing in Fedora, Tenn. A man's life has been saved, and now Dr. King's New Discovery is the talk of the town for curing C. V. Pepper of deadly lung hemmorrhages. "I could not work nor get about," he writes, "and the doctors did me no good, but after using Dr. King's New Discovery three weeks, I feel like a new man, and can do good work again." For weak, sore or diseased lungs, Coughs and Colds, Hemorrhages, Hay Fever, LaGrippe Asthma or any Bronchial affection it stands unrivaled. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Sold and guaranteed by Bentlers drug store, Erlanger.

Badly Hurt.

Mrs. Robert Adams, of Sherman, Grant county, who has been visiting her son, H. O. Adams, near Hathaway, fell off the porch, last Sunday night, and broke her arm, and bruised herself so badly, otherwise, that her life is despaired of. She is quite old.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The annual session of the Boone County Teachers' Institute began its five days' session at the Universalist church in Burlington, last Monday morning. The session was called to order by exofficio chairman County Superintendent D. M. Snyder, and after a song devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. A. V. Brooks. The Superintendent then spoke of what was expected of the teachers for the next five days, after which the following teachers were enrolled:

C. V. Brooks, H. L. Harrison, R. C. McNeely, Wm. Smith, Katie Craig, Bettie Dolph, Minnie Stephens, Clara F. Stephens, Gladys D. Ryle, Josie Stephens, Ida Hodges, Flora Yonell, Edna M. Riley, Etna McAtee, Luta Ryle, Sadie Rieman, Elizabeth Rogers, Katie Mendel, Rosa Rich, Alma Corbin, Estelle Huey, Jennie L. Aylor, Elmo Davis, W. Keene Souther, A. M. Healy, Emil Ragenbogen, Amy Ragenbogen, Mabel Ragenbogen, Lizzie Vest, Mattie May, Arrelda Roberts, Ada Roberts, Nannie Chambers, Jane Hance, Elijah Stephens, Paris Aikin, Lucy Russell, Mr. D. M. Bondurant, Annie Miller, Stella Carpenter, Doris M. Hoard, Mrs. F. H. Rouse, Grace Anderson.

The afternoon session was opened with the song, "I Love to tell the Story," after which Supt. Snyder followed with a lengthy talk in regard to the new school law, advising all teachers to prepare for their profession now as the State and county have come to their relief financially, saying laggards and those not prepared will be compelled to drop out.

Prof. Eubank, the Instructor, was then introduced and at once took up the subject of school management and in his remarks said that the draw back was the one who has not enough energy, enthusiasm, or push to meet the requirements that are necessary for the profession of teaching; that increased pay requires better service on the part of the teacher and the teacher who is prepared goes to her work with pleasure.

The committee on program reported that Primary Reading had been assigned to Mrs. Wood; Advanced Reading, to Lucy Russell, and Paris Akin Spelling, to Stella Carpenter; Grammar, to Prof. E. S. Ryle. After a continuation of remarks by Prof. Eubank on school management the institute adjourned for the day.

TUESDAY MORNING.

The following teachers were enrolled Tuesday: Elizabeth Turner, Madge Wood, Blanch Kelly, Josie Stephens.

Supt. Snyder called the meeting to order. Song: "There is Sunshine in my Soul." Devotional exercises by Rev. Brooks.

The subject of Reading was introduced by Mrs. Wood, who said she combined the three methods, letter, word and phonetic in teaching reading, also used the blackboard freely in teaching the printed and script letters and words.

Question—What is the best method of the three above methods? Prof. Eubank would advise the word method. The subject was also ably discussed by Prof. Akin and Lucy Russell.

The session after recess began by singing, "Take The Name of Jesus With You." Prof. Eubanks continued the subject of Reading, and advised against having children imitate a teacher. Miss Craig gave a good talk and said she tried to cause pupils to see by imagination the object and good thoughts contained in reading.

The afternoon session began by singing No. 121.

Spelling was introduced by Stella Carpenter, followed by C. H. Deitrick, representing the American Book Co. Prof. Eubanks advised the teaching of the diacritical marks, and recommended spelling matches when the community is willing to take an active part.

After recess, America was sung.

Prof. Rhotan, of Georgetown gave quite an illustration of Hampton Roads and vicinity, giving the teachers much geographical and historical information. His talk on Arithmetic was much appreciated also.

The Institute adjourned for the day. A. M. YEALY, Secretary.

Circuit Court.

The August term of the Boone circuit court began promptly on o'clock last Monday morning, Hon. J. W. Cammack presiding and F. C. Greene, Commonwealth's Attorney on hand to look after the State's interest. The grand jury was organized in a short time, and having received the usual charge, entered upon the discharge of its duty. It is composed of the following:

Geo. Ransler, Walton, Foreman; Geo. Bohanan, Petersburg; S. B. Scott, Bellevie w; Vess W. Gaines, Petersburg; Thomas Grant, Bullittsville; J. S. Noel, Beaver, J. W. Arrsmith, Big Bone; W. C. Berkshire, Burlington; R. E. Moore, Beaver; R. J. Akin, Burlington; Thos. Watts, Bullittsville; Geo. Barlow, Florence.

The petit juries were empanelled Tuesday morning and are composed of the following named gentlemen:

Jury No. 1—John D. Mitchell, Ben F. Norman, Clarence Estes, George Osman, Wm. Stephens, Waichus Souther, J. T. Johnson, Jeff Williamson, Bernard Rogers, S. H. Marshall, Tom Hafer, J. J. Walton.

Jury No 2—John W. Cleek, Robert Ratcliff, J. M. Beemon, T. E. Randall, Wm. Stott, C. B. Mason, Otho Shinkle, J. E. Kennedy, T. J. Walton, E. K. Stephens, Jeff Eddins, R. S. Cowen.

So far the grand jury has been taking it quite easy.

THE CASE of JIM DISMUKES

A CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE STORY

I HAVE attempted to vary these stories of circumstantial evidence," said Judge Sturgis at the weekly meeting of the Calf Skin club, "by putting in my little contribution to this symposium in the style of fiction. The facts, however, are drawn from my own experience. As it is my first attempt at anything outside the paths of legal literature I crave the indulgence of you all. With your permission I will read my story." The judge then read the following narrative in a manner that showed he had not, during his years on the bench, forgotten his early skill before a jury.

Jim Dismukes sat in mute resignation and stared into the face of the judge; that stern yet sometimes kindly old face that meant so much to Jim. He wondered in his simple way why there should be so much of trouble and so much of solemnity about so unimportant a member of the community as himself. He wondered more than all why that terrible, unknown thing called the law had seen fit to drag him from his little log home and keep him through those long months shut up behind the barred windows of the modest county jail while, except for the doubtful attention of "Bill," his half-grown boy, the little ten-acre patch might be growing up in ragweed and cocklebur.

Of course Jim knew that one dark and forbidding night a traveler tramping homeward along the little frequented highway that ran into the timber just beyond his place had stumbled over the body of young Arthur Ballard. Jim knew people said Ballard had been murdered. He knew when he went with the crowd to look at the body by the dim, early morning light, he had seen that reeking, horrible gunshot wound in his breast, and he had trembled and grown pale. He knew he was charged with firing the shot that made that wound. And Jim also knew, deep down in his own heart, whether or not this charge was true. Jim knew, and this knowledge if was now the duty of a judge, twelve men and a state's attorney to drag forth.

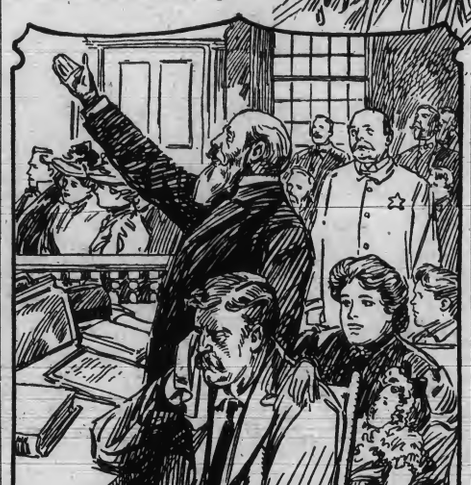
As Jim sat before those terrible inquisitors and watched the changing play upon the countenance of the judge a tow-headed, stubby-nosed baby slid from his mother's lap, negotiated the distance to Jim upon all fours, and began the perilous ascent of his long and awkward legs. Jim bent over and patted the little head, but Sally Ann grabbed the child to her lap again with the whispered injunction:

"There now, Buddy mustn't bother pappy. Pappy's busy."

"Pappy" was indeed busy.

The last man of the panel had just been accepted by both sides.

"I wish I had 11 more just like him," thought Clay Sheppard, the young and ambitious state's attorney, as he passed the veniremen over to the defense.



"I can trust him at least to give Jim a square deal," thought old Tom Robinson who had volunteered to save Jim, if possible, simply because he couldn't help doing kind deeds any more than he could help living.

The twelfth man truly was an ideal juryman. In a small community the questioning of a venireman is largely a matter of form. Either the state or the defense can tell long before the trial by looking over the list of veniremen what men they would like to have on the jury. Amos Watson was one of those who would have been picked in advance by both sides. A farmer of expansive acres, which lay in the high priced prairie beyond the timber of which Jim's place was a clearing, he was identified with all that was progressive in the community. He was a deacon in the church, a director in the bank, an officer in the county fair association, and, in fact, held most of those honors which, beyond the city, are the capstones of success. He was indeed an ideal juryman. In the city he would have been challenged for cause, for, with all the rest of his good qualities, he was intelligent.

The attorney for the state then arose for his opening. As he described with the minutest detail Jim's movements upon the fatal night, Jim writhed and would have given all the world, yes, even his precious ten acres, to have escaped the stares that seemed to burn into the back of his wrinkled neck. At the same time he vaguely wondered how the state's attorney knew things about him that he didn't know himself.

Then old Tom Robinson brought tears to Jim's eyes as he referred casually to Jim's "devoted wife, his honest faced boy, soon to grow into manhood and the little innocent babe that prattled at its father's knee." Older and sterner eyes than Jim's would be bathed in tears when Old Tom Robinson returned to this motif in his closing appeal.

And the evidence began to pile up that sent Jim farther and farther away from the little log home and the ten acre patch. Circumstantial all of it, but each link forged and polished into a perfect chain that it would take a stronger hand than Jim's to break. There was the quarrel over the sucking pig that young Ballard killed while driving over the big prairie farm in his light top buggy to hit it up with the boys in town. There was the story of Jim's waylaying him, as with a companion, he dashed back again late in the night, and much the worse for his evening's

"fun," of Jim's catching his horse's bridle and demanding payment for the worthless runt; and then of the cruel, stinging back-handed cut across the face with Ballard's buggy whip and Jim's sullen threat "to git even with the damned stuck-up ef he had to fill him full of buckshot."

And there was the evidence of Ballard's often walking home past Jim's house and through the timber, when, with the open-heartedness that was one of his many weaknesses, he had loaned the mare and buggy to some one of his cherished town companions; of the finding of the body just beyond the Dismukes fence corner; yes, even the marks of feet that Jim's boots fitted so exactly.

Then the state's attorney sprung the star witness, a mute one but with a story so plain that duller jurymen than these 12 could have read it from afar. It was but a circular bit of newspaper probed by the doctor from the wound in Arthur Ballard's breast. Alone it meant nothing. Fitted into the newspaper found under the Dismukes family bed, with every indenture interlacing with a nicety that could never have been accidental, it was as damning as the warrant of death itself. Then there was the muzzle loading shotgun behind the door, freshly fired, according to the firm opinion of well qualified experts in the person of local sportsmen and the village gunsmith.

What had Jim Dismukes to offer to all this crushing weight of evidence? What mattered it though he declared in an aggrieved tone to the judge, whom he persisted in addressing instead of the jury:

"Jedge, I found that paper the mornin' I went to look at the corpse. I fetched it home fer Bill's jest learnin' t' read an' I thought as how he mought spell out some o' the news t' me an' his ma. I jest shoved it under the hed an' fergot all about it. As fer shootin' the gun, I reckon that part's kerrect. I shot her enamost every day, an' we hed rabbit thet evenin' by reason of me shootin' it. But I ain't never kilt nothin' but critters an' varmints 'ith thet gun. Honest, I ain't jedge."

Of what avail was the evidence of young Bill that on the night in question his father had not left the house but had sat up nearly all the night blowing tobacco smoke into young Bill's ear for the ear ache. But then what match was young Bill for an astute and ambitious state's attorney. It might have been some other night that young Bill had the ear ache. He had it many times, and young Bill wasn't very strong on the calendar, anyway. The evidence of Sally Ann might have corroborated that of her first born, but a wise and beneficent law holds such evidence prejudicial to the minds of jurymen, and a wife cannot come to her husband's aid in such a dire extremity.

The usual character witnesses, the last ditch of a tottering cause, put in the usual evidence that Jim Dismukes had always borne a good reputation in his neighborhood for peaceableness and quiet, and this evidence was duly torn to pieces under the cross fire of the prosecution.

When the arguments came at last Jim again sank down as far as possible in his cane-bottomed chair and stared in wonder and admiration at the ambitious young state's attorney as he writhed and perspired in a burst of oratory that painted Jim Dismukes a terrible, blood-sucking monster going up and down the earth seeking whom he might devour; as he threw back his long black hair and raised his trembling hands to the cracked ceiling and called down the vengeance of high heaven upon the foul murderer of Arthur Ballard.

Jim wondered if God could see the state's attorney through the cracks in the plaster. Sally Ann hugged Buddy to her breast and wept softly. Old Tom Robinson hoped the jury saw her.

And then everybody wept when old Tom rose and got his foot on the soft pedal. Even the judge buried his head in the record before him and blew his nose tunefully. The state's attorney began to wonder if being the stern avenger of an outraged law was such an honor, after all.

Jim listened intently to the judge's instructions, but could make neither head nor tail of them. Something about mallets, he thought, but he couldn't remember anything about mallets, and he had understood all along it was a shotgun. But the judge knew better than he did, perhaps.

When the jury filed off into the little room back of the judge's rostrum, the tension broke and the court room hummed like a hive of bees. Above the hum could be heard the scratch, scratch, scratch of the judge's pen as he wrote up the chancery record.

Jim felt like a shipwrecked sailor who had a breathing spell in his fight for life during a lull in the storm. He played with the crowing and strenuous Buddy and when he thought nobody was looking seized and pressed Sally Ann's work-worn hand.

"Et's all right, Sally," he whispered. "Mr. Robinson, he fetched 'em, I reckon."

The minutes dragged into hours, and the jury had not returned. The judge fidgeted and finally sent a bailiff to inquire if the jury wished any further explanation of the law. As the shadows through the small paned windows lengthened into evening the word came that the 12 were in hopeless disagreement. Something at the judge's waistband reminded him that his supper was getting cold and he ordered the jury in. The whisper went round that they stood 11 for conviction and one for acquittal. Only mental telepathy can explain how news like this flies through a crowded court room.

The judge was angry. He had two powerful motives for anger, his spoiled and sodden supper and the double cost to the county in another trial. He mentioned only one of these, however, in his scathing rebuke to the 12 men that stood before him. He reminded them that they had failed in their sworn duty and were unworthy to bear the name of citizen.

Then stood forth Amos Watson, the ideal juryman.

"May I have the permission of the court to say a few words," he began. "Eleven men on this jury are not deserving of this rebuke. One man deserves it all and more. I am that man. I have held out in this case for acquittal and as my fellow jurymen labored with me to bring me to their way of thinking I have fought out a battle with myself and my maker. It has been a fight that has extended beyond this court room back six months to the time of the death of young Arthur Ballard. It has been with me waking and sleeping. But now, thank God, I have won the victory and I am ready to tell this court why I could not consent to the conviction of Jim Dismukes for murder. It is only because he is innocent. I killed Arthur Ballard!"

There was a hush, and then a murmur and then a roar which it took the combined rappings of the sheriff and all his deputies to quell.

"Go on, Mr. Watson, tell what you have to tell," sternly commanded the judge, as the "ideal juryman" stood and mopped his brow.

"Yes, judge, I will tell it all. I killed Ballard. I waited for him in the bushes by the side of the road where I knew he would pass, and I shot him down. So certain did I seek to make good my work that when I recalled that my shotgun had been loaded for some time, I drew the load as I waited and put in a fresh one, wadding it with a piece of newspaper. The rest of the newspaper I threw into the bushes, and Jim told the truth when he said he found it there. It is true that Jim's boots fitted in the tracks, and I wonder that Tom Robinson did not inquire where Jim got his boots. Well, I gave them to him."

"When Jim was arrested I wanted to tell, but I could not. I put the terrible truth off from day to day. Always tomorrow I was going to lift the weight from my mind, but I looked at my position in the community, at my family and at all the things that mean so much to a man and I could not.

"When I found myself drawn on the jury the devil tempted me to accept and secure Jim's acquittal. Then he would be free and no one would ever know. But the evidence was so strong that my arguments were weak against my fellow jurymen. I knew then that the truth had to come out. I knew that another jury would hang Jim. And then, thank God, the victory was given to me and if you knew the load of remorse and agony that the telling has lifted from my shoulders you would not wonder at my coolness."

"But, Mr. Watson, you had a motive, a strong motive?" queried the judge.

"Yes, judge, I had a motive, a strong motive. You have a daughter, judge. So have I. You would not want to see your daughter's name dragged in the mire of a case like this. Neither do I. But I had a strong motive."

"James Dismukes is discharged from the bar of this court, and the court regrets the injustice that has been put upon him. The sheriff will take Amos Watson into custody. I'm sorry for you Amos. I'm glad for you, Jim," said the Judge, hastily.

"I knew Mr. Robinson would fetch 'em," cried Jim Dismukes, loyal to the last as he lifted Buddy in his big strong hands and kissed the dirty, chubby face.

It would not be becoming in the author of these narratives to mention the reception accorded by the Calf Skin club to Judge Sturgis' story.

"And were you the judge?" queried half a dozen members in unison.

"No, gentlemen," answered Judge Sturgis. "I was the ambitious young state's attorney."

Almost Any Mother.

The mother of a large family fell ill and died and the attending physician reported that she died of starvation. It was incredible, but he proved it; The woman had to get the dinner and then spend the next two hours in waiting on the family and getting the children to the table. It was never on record that she got all of them there at the same time and they came straggling in all the way from potatoes to pie. By the time she had wiped the last face, her own hunger had left her and she had no desire to eat. Chickens, the doctor said, come running at feed time, but children don't. Valuable Knowledge Spreading.

Every day sees hundreds of new recruits in the war against tuberculosis, and every day brings new methods for the fighting of the plague. The National association predicts that if the present degree of interest is maintained, within five years everybody in the United States will have been informed on the way to prevent and cure tuberculosis, and concerning the infectious nature of the disease. Two things in particular are needed, and for these the National association is working in every way. They are, a more complete registration of tuberculosis cases, and the further isolation of dangerous advanced cases of consumption.

A Sunday Sermon.

One must accept life as it is. It gives us great happiness if we are wise enough to see it, and it balances the scales by sending great sorrows, too.

But that is life.

If you would make the world brighter try to forget your hurts, dry your eyes and turn to help those who need the pressure of a friendly hand, the encouragement of a smiling look.

Sorrows and troubles of all kinds should teach one a great lesson—the lesson of universal kindness.—New York Times.

ON FOOD

The Right Foundation of Health.

Proper food is the foundation of health. People can eat improper food for a time until there is a sudden collapse of the digestive organs, then all kinds of trouble follows.

The proper way out of the difficulty is to shift to the pure, scientific food, Grape-Nuts, for it rebuilds from the foundation up. A New Hampshire woman says:

"Last summer I was suddenly taken with indigestion and severe stomach trouble and could not eat food without great pain, my stomach was so sore I could hardly move about. This kept up until I was so miserable life was not worth living.

"Then a friend finally, after much argument, induced me to quit my former diet and try Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had but little faith I commenced to use it, and great was my surprise to find that I could eat it without the usual pain and distress in my stomach.

"So I kept on using Grape-Nuts and soon a marked improvement was shown, for my stomach was performing its regular work in a normal way without pain or distress.

"Very soon the yellow coating disappeared from my tongue, the dull, heavy feeling in my head disappeared, and my mind felt light and clear; the languid, tired feeling left, and altogether I felt as if I had been rebuilt. Strength and weight came back rapidly and I went back to my work with renewed ambition.

"To-day I am a new woman in mind as well as body, and I owe it all to this natural food, Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason."

AS STRAIGHT MEN SEE HIM.

The Dead-Beat is Probably the Most Despised Creature That Walks the Earth.

No man is wholly free from sin, but so many lesser evils are tolerated that a man should hesitate long before becoming a dead-beat. Criminals are despised and abhorred, but to the dead-beat all that is coming, as well as the contempt of his fellow men. There is something at once so mean and so little in taking advantage of the confidence which comes with friendship that the hand of every man is turned against a dead-beat as soon as his reputation is well established. The dead-beat may fondly imagine he is living easy and making money without work, and, of course, he takes no account of the confidence he violates and the hardships he inflicts on others. But, that aside, he really has a harder time than the man who is honest and fair. He is compelled to move a good deal, and peace of mind he knows not. Like other types of crooks, he doesn't prosper, and his finish is more unpleasant than the beginning.—Atchison Globe.

CHILD HAD SIXTY BOILS.

Troubles Cured by Cuticura.

"When my little Vivian was about six months old her head broke out in boils. She had about sixty in all and I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which cured her entirely. Some time later a humor broke out behind her ears and spread up on to her head until it was nearly half covered. The humor looked like a scald, very red with a sticky, clear fluid coming from it. This occurred every spring. I always used Cuticura Soap and Ointment which never failed to heal it up. The last time it broke out it became so bad that I was discouraged. But I continued the use of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent until she was well and has never been troubled in the last two years. Mrs. M. A. "The chairman," said Bennett, "was a very literal person. He looked at the gallery, where one woman was sitting, and said: 'Lady and gentlemen, this is a most momentous campaign. There are grave issues to be discussed. Later we will hear from our best speakers, but, for the present, we will listen to Mr. Bennett.'"

But Friday things were evened up when a man named Flynn was brought before Judge Rosalsky and swore that he was a Jew.

THE FIRE GOD

Manasses, the King, Offereth Up His Son

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Bidon.)

Scriptural Authority.—2 Chron. Chapter 33, and Apocryphal Book of Manasses' Prayer.

Moloch the Fire God.—The fire god Moloch, to whom King Manasseh offered his sons, and which sin presents one of the blackest records in the life of the wicked king, was the tutelary deity of the children of Ammon, and essentially identical with the Moabitish Chemosh. Fire gods appear to have been common to all the Canaanite, Syrian and Arab tribes, who worshiped the destructive element under an outward symbol, with the most inhuman rites. Among these were human sacrifices, purifications and ordeals by fire, devoting of the first born, mutilation, and vows of perpetual celibacy and virginity. According to Jewish tradition, the image of Moloch was of brass, hollow within, and was situated without Jerusalem. Kimchi (on 2 Kings 23:10), describes it as "set within seven chapels; and who so offered fine flour they opened to him one of them; who so offered turtle doves or young pigeons they opened to him two; a lamb, they opened to him three; a ram, they opened to him four; a calf, they opened to him five; an ox, they opened to him six; and to whoever offered his son they opened to him seven. And his face was that of a calf, and his hands stretched forth like a man who opens his hands to receive of his neighbor; and the priests took the babe, and put it in the hands of Moloch, and the babe gave up the ghost, amidst the noise of the beating of drums that the dying cries of the child might be drowned."

SERMONETTE.

Idolatry was the great sin of the Jewish nation, and plunged it to its destruction. The first two commandments of the decalogue read: "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me.

"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments."

The Psalmist says: "Confounded be all thay that serve gravan images, that boast themselvas of idols."

Paul, realizing that idolatry is a heart condition rather than an external expression and is prevalant in degree if not in kind to-day as in the ancient days, writes this warning:

"Neither be ye idolators, as were some of them; as it is written. The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand. Neither let us tempt the Lord, as some of them tempted and perished by the serpents. Neither murmur ye, as some of them murmured, and perished by the destroyer. Now these things happened unto them by way of example; and they were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages are come. Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. Wherefore my beloved, flee from idolatry."

His definition of idolatry by Paul: "For this ye know of a surety, that no fornicator, nor unclean person, nor covetous man which is an idolator hath any inheritance in the kingdom of heaven."

The closing admonition in the first letter of the Apostle John is: "Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

THE STORY.

"Make way! Make way! The king is coming."

The words of the heralds sounded through the streets of Jerusalem and caused the gathered throngs to press back on either side against the walls of the buildings, leaving a clear passageway in the center down which in the distance could be seen coming the royal procession. First came the trumpeters, the clear musical notes of their horns sounding above the shouts of acclaim of the people and the tramp, tramp, tramp of the horses' feet.

As the royal chariot came opposite the point where the street broadened into a kind of square, affording the people a vantage point, and which was now banked with eager faces, cheer after cheer rent the air.

"The prince! The prince!" The throng shouted and in response to the cry the king bent down and lifting in his arms the fair young child riding at his side he held him aloft.

He clapped his chubby little hands and gurgled in great glee as his father held him up, and this pleased the people immensely and with renewed shouts they hailed the king and the beautiful prince.

The royal party was on its way to pay homage to the gods whose high places had been set up within Jerusalem, and where ceremonial worship was carried on in all the voluptuousness and splendor, of the nations about.

King Hasekiah, Manasses' father, had left a prosperous and extensive kingdom, and from the moment of his accession to the throne at 12 years of age, Manasses had displayed a passion to be possessed of all the glory and magnificence of the nations about him and had encouraged the introduction of every form of idolatrous worship to Jerusalem, setting up the images of gods and bringing thither the priests to perform the rites. Within the past year he had caused to be set up a great brazen image of Moloch, the fire god, and had displayed an unusual interest in establishing and perfecting this form of worship.

On this particular day a new chapel to the god was to be dedicated, and every priest in his full regalia was present to help carry out the service. The great brazen image stood on a high mound and a long flight of steps led up at the side so that the priest would be able to reach the immense out stretched arms and place therein the offerings which the people brought. The image was hollow and was so arranged that the fire which the priests kindled within would heat the arms and hands to a white heat, and consume the offerings therein. Around the great image there had been erected six beautiful chapels, each standing for a degree in the worship of the god. To the one offering fine flour the door of the first and simplest chapel was opened and he was initiated into the first rites and fellowship with the mighty fire god. To the one offering turtle doves or young pigeons, the door of the second chapel was opened and he was accorded a closer fellowship. The third chapel was opened to the one offering a lamb, the fourth to him who offered a ram, the fifth to him who offered a calf, and the sixth to him who offered an ox.

To this last structure which had just been completed by the builders that week, the king directed his steps after leaving the chariot which had stopped on the outer rim where the chapels had been placed.

"Yea, it is well that the king is the first to open the door of this, the sixth chapel devoted to the worship of the great Moloch," said the priest as he received the king and conducted him to the doorway. To one side could be seen the ox which had been provided for the king's offering, and at a signal from the priest, the attendant plunged in his knife to the heart of the beast and as the animal sank to the ground almost without a groan so deftly had the vital spot been struck—the door before the king and the priest swung open, apparently of its own volition.

"Come," said the priest. "Again by thy devotion thou shalt please the great Moloch, and win his continued favor. Six chapels hast thou already caused to be erected for him, and there still remaineth one to be set up to test thy devotion." And as the priest spoke the words, his eyes fixed themselves upon the little prattling child who had trotted in by the side of the king.

The father, following the eyes of the priest, looked fondly down into the beautiful face of the child as it was lifted up in confidence to his own, and his cheek paled as intuitively he caught the thought and meaning of the priest.

"A seventh chapel?" he falteringly questioned.

"Yea, thy nation cannot be said to know and serve the great God Moloch until the seventh and last chapel hath been built and to whom should its door first swing to give entrance but to the king himself?"

"True, but how can I?" and a shudder shook the form of the king.

"But canst thou expect favor from the god from whom thou wouldst withhold thy best treasure?"

Nothing more was said, but the next day the order was sent the priest that the seventh chapel should be built and it was noised through the city and nation that the king was to make the great offering to Moloch, and at the appointed time, after the chapel had been completed a great concourse of people came together in the place where Moloch stood. The arms and great hands relentlessly outstretched were glowing with the intense heat which burned within. The eyes of the people were fixed upon them with an awful fascination, which was only broken by the cry: "The king! The king!" as the royal chariot rolled up amidst the blast of the trumpeters.

Down the marble laid isle came the king and by his side the little son, whose hand lay confidently in that of his father.

A gasp of intense feeling swept over the concourse of people as one of the attendant priests came forward to take the little boy while Manasses, the king, turned with the high priest and ascended the steps to the last chapel. With neither look to the right hand or the left, but a blank, intense awful stare direct before him the king stood before the closed door, the priest remaining impassive by his side. By this time the priest bearing the boy had ascended the steps by the side of the great image. An intense, awful silence had fallen upon the people. They did not even so much as breathe. The rustle of the priest's robe was the only sound which came as he raised the boy aloft. Then a terrific burst of music from trumpet and drum which drowned the tiny shriek of the child and the groan of the people. And with it the door swung open before the king and half stumbling, half falling, he crossed the threshold and collapsed in a swoon.

"Yea," spake the priest, as the king recovered consciousness, "thou hast graciously honored the great Moloch, and a hundred to-day have in the frenzy of devotion followed thy example. Great is Moloch."

"MAKES BETTER RAILROADS."

Western Writer Pays Tribute to Railroad Magnate as Builder-Up of the Country.

Mr. Edward H. Harriman is on a trip to Europe. Ordinarily there would need be nothing added to this announcement beyond an exhortation to Emperor William to chain down his railroads and to other monarchs to put their crowns and other valuables in the safe at night. But Mr. Harriman is going off on a pleasure trip, and so many mean things have been said about him that it will not hurt any to change the tune a moment while he is out of the country and not able to take any advantage of the lapse from the cold attitude of severity that is usually used in mentioning the name of Harriman.

Of all the great railroad men developed in this generation, E. H. Harriman is easily the biggest and the best, says a writer in the Hutchinson (Kan.) Daily News. The head of a railroad company, under the rules of the game, must work for his stockholders, whether it is for the advantage of politicians, shippers or consumers. It is his job to do the best he can for the interests entrusted to his care. Harriman is not only a financier, but he is a builder and an operator. Lucky is the town, city or community that has a Harriman road. He insists on a good roadbed, level track, safe track and the convenience and comfort of the traveler and the shipper. The Harriman roads are noted as the best in the country. When Harriman gets hold of a one-horse or played-out track and right of way he proceeds to put it in first class condition. He does not raise the rates of fares, although he doubtless charges "a plenty," but he insists that enough of the funds go into real improvements to make a railroad. And that is where he stands ahead of a good many others and why Harrimanism is not such a bad thing as some people have been led to think. He makes better railroads, and there is more need for improvement that way than there is in some others which are being discussed. So far as we can see, he believes in giving every interest along his road a fair deal.

He is a public benefactor from that standpoint. He uses his power fairly. He is a great man, and as good or better than the ordinary citizen who looks upon him as the personification of the money power, seeking whom it may devour. He is a strong man in the financial world, but that should not be against him, when the financial world is the object which most of us want to reach. He is a good American and he spends his money on American railroads, not on foreign titles, race horses, old editions or other bad habits. If he is not perfect—and we don't think he is—he is no exception to the rule and is worthy of the praise of his fellow citizens for the good he does and has done.

Laughter a Series of Barks.

Laughing is barking, say the scientists. The neck and head are thrown back while a series of short barks are emitted from the throat. However musical the barks may be, they are barks. The laugh begins with a sudden and violent contraction of the muscles of the chest and abdomen. But instead of opening to let the air pass out of the lungs, the vocal cords approach each other and hold it back. But they are not strong enough to exercise such opposition for more than an instant, and the air, which is under pressure, promptly escapes. As it does so it makes the vocal cords vibrate producing the bark.

This obstruction and liberation of the air expelled from the lungs repeats itself again and again at intervals of a quarter of a second. There are thus in a hearty laugh four barks a second, and if continued, they go on at that rate as long as the air reserve in the lungs holds out. The empty lungs must then fill themselves, and this interval is marked by a quick gasp for breath, after which the barks are renewed. The barks occur in series with gasps for breath at intervals.

When laughter is violent, the entire body participates. The upper part of the trunk bends and straightens itself alternately or sways to right and left. The feet stamp on the floor, while the hands are pressed upon the loins to moderate the painful spasm.

Interviewing the Professor.

"So you don't think Mars would reply, even if we did send signals?"

"I am almost convinced that there would be no response," answered Prof. Thinktum, adjusting his glasses.

"Then you don't believe that Mars is inhabited?"

"On the contrary, I think it extremely probable that life similar to our own exists on the sister planet."

"But you don't give those people credit for intelligence equal to ours?"

"Yes. I am inclined to credit them with even greater intelligence than we display. There are many indications that they have a civilization older than ours, in which case they should have too much sense to fool away their time on any such impractical proposition."

The Way He Did It.

Jenkins—Well, sir, I gave it to that man straight, I can tell you. He is twice as big as I am, too, but I told him exactly what I thought of his rascally conduct right to his face, and I called him all the names in the dictionary, and a lot of others as well.

Studds—And didn't he try to hit you, Jenkins?

Jenkins—No, sir, he didn't. And when he tried to answer back, I just hung up the telephone receiver and d away.

STRONG BELIEVERS IN FATE.

"What Will Be, Will Be," is the General Feeling Throughout the Provinces of China.

The Chinese are invariably courteous and considerate if you take them the right way. Superstition, of course, is deeply ingrafted in their natures, and a kind of kismet policy, after the manner of the Turks, takes possession of them, so that whatever is going to happen will happen and there the matter ends, the Shanghai Mercury says.

Battling against fate for a Chinaman is sheer waste of time, and he simply bows his head to the inevitable. Take, for example, the strict attention, or rather the devotion, that is paid to feng-shui on the Yangtze. Feng-shui is the superstition that determines good site or locality, and if a town on the Yangtze has not a good feng-shui trade will not come to it and it will be ruined.

A town named Pei-Shih had its pagoda in the wrong place, not far enough down the river, in fact, the result being that all traffic which should have come to it was left out in the cold. All the talk in the world would not convince the Pei-Shih folk that the depression could arise from any other cause than that of a bad feng-shui, so they pulled the pagoda down and built another one in the supposed right spot. So far prosperity has not returned to Pei-Shih, though the inhabitants live in hope.

The city of Wanshien, on the other hand, has a perfect feng-shui, two fine pagodas, one 1,000 feet high, below the town, while Wanshien itself is very prosperous. The fact that Wanshien is situated in a most fertile valley, where wheat, barley and the poppy flourish abundantly, while Pei-Shih is barren and miserable, does not concern the inhabitants of these places so much as the feng-shui site. This absurd idea in the Chinese mind is only one of thousands like it.

Good in Blowing Soap Bubbles.

Blowing soap bubbles is an exercise which has been adopted at a school in Haarlem, Holland, on the advice of a local practitioner, Dr. Ootmar, in order to broaden the children's chests. This pleasant method, as ingenious as it is simple, was thought of because of the difficulty in getting children to do ordinary breathing exercises thoroughly and regularly. On three days in the week all the children have placed before them a bowl of soapy water and a pipe. The windows are opened wide to admit as much fresh air as possible. Then competitions are arranged as to who can blow the biggest bubbles. Periodical chest measurements have proved the efficacy of the arrangement, increases being noted in each individual case.

Gavel from Historic Walnut Stump.

A chairman's gavel, carved from an historic Illinois walnut stump, to which Abraham Lincoln used to tie his flatboat, was presented to the grand lodge recently to be used as the official gavel for future Elks grand lodge gatherings.

The gavel was carved by W. T. Baker of Bolivia, Ill., who sent with it a letter describing its origin.

The original tree was at Mill Dam, Ill., and there Abraham Lincoln tied up his flatboat on four different occasions of 1841 and 1842.

The tree grew on land owned by James Baker, father of the man who made the gavel.

The rest of the tree has been presented to the National Lincoln Centennial association of the United States.—Los Angeles Express.

Equality.

There should subsist a great degree of equality between the rank and fortune of individuals; without which there cannot exist long any equality between them in point of right or authority. There should be little or no luxury; for luxury must either be the effects of wealth, or it must make it necessary.—Rousseau.

Appetite of Diabetics.

Some diabetics have no control of hunger and thirst; will even eat a cake of soap.

GAMES NEXT SATURDAY:

Burlington at Hebron.
Big Bone at Belleview.

Last Saturday's Game.

The game between the Burlington and Big Bone teams at the local park went all to pieces after the third inning, when Wood went out of the box on accountof a pain in his side. Wood was pitching fine ball but was getting very ragged support. With a first class catcher Wood could bother any of the local teams, but he has been unfortunate this season in not being able to get a catcher who is able to hold him. After Wood retired all kinds of combinations for a battery was tried by the visito s, but none could make good. Barring accidents Wood is a coming pitcher. Following is the score:

That the days are getting shorter is very perceptible.

The local fishermen did no good on the creek last week.

Tun Rich, of Big Bone, began cutting tobacco, last week.

At this time last year much of the corn was dry enough to be put in the shock.

A considerable colored delegation left Burlington early last Saturday morning for the Lawrenceburg fair.

Florence people will not be annoyed with dust during the fair, having oiled Pike street, which will be in a nice condition.

The picnic at the Harvest Home grounds last Saturday afternoon was well attended, and a most delightful time was afforded all.

The Teachers Institute began its annual session in Burlington Monday morning, and the teachers are a busy bunch of people this week.

Home grown watermelons have been slow about appearing on the market this year, owing to unfavorable weather early in the season.

The time for breaking land for wheat is now at hand, and the ground is expected to plow nicely, owing to it having been kept damp all summer.

Hubert Gaines had his fine yearling, saddle colt on exhibition in Burlington, last Saturday. It is a very handsome young animal and was admired by all.

If there is not a remarkable comeout in a great deal of the tobacco in this county the crop will not make two-thirds of that which the acreage ought to produce.

Charles Clore, of Hebron, rented all refreshment privileges for the fair at Florence again this year. It would not look like a fair if he was not in charge of the refreshment stands.

An expert has been employed by the Boone Fair to judge exhibits of embroidery, beaded and knit work, and all other exhibits to be shown in Floral Hall, Friday, August 27th.

The milk fight that is on in Cincinnati and Covington has caused a very considerable increase in the quantity of milk that is sent to the Union creamery. The trouble in the above cities may result in a permanent benefit to the Union Creamery.

Miss Laura Frances Riddell gave a party last Saturday night in honor of Misses Lulie Mae Cook and Mary Jane Houston, of Walton, who were her guests several days last week. Quite a number of little folks were present and all had a very delightful time.

Those from this side of the river, who attended the fair at Lawrenceburg last week do not hesitate to pronounce it the best fair ever held there. Stock of every kind, and especially horses, was plentiful, and competition throughout the exhibition was spirited.

Richmond Reed, brother of Mrs. F. A. Hall, died last Friday night at the home of Rev. Bedinger near Richwood, from injuries received by falling from a scaffold while painting the Richwood Presbyterian church. Mr. Reed was 57 years old. His remains were taken to his home in Covington, and laid to rest in Linden Grove Monday at 10 a. m. He leaves a wife and two children—a son and daughter, both grown, and three brothers and four sisters, to mourn his death.

J. S. Clore, who has operated the switch-board for the farmers' telephone exchange at Waterloo for several years, died at his home there last Monday after a painful illness of several months of cancer of the liver. He leaves a widow, who was the only daughter of the late Lystra Aylor, of that neighborhood, and one son, Everett, to mourn his death. The funeral will take place today at Belleview Baptist church at 2 p. m., the interment following in the cemetery at that place.

The Union traction road people have about secured the right-of-way for the traction road in which they are interested, and they say a more flattering outlook for the road could not be expected. Every obstacle they remove makes the next easier to overcome, and the people having had time to consider the advantages of a road view it in a much more favorable light and many are now encouraging the enterprise, who, at first were openly opposed to it and made light of the project. The people at the Big Bone end of the proposed road, recognize in the success of the enterprise the making of their section of the county and are giving it all the encouragement possible.

SAMUEL WINGATE. H. P. MARSHALL.

The above are good pictures of Samuel Wingate and H. P. Marshall, of Waterloo, who will celebrate the ninety-third anniversary of their birth tomorrow. This has been a custom of theirs for years, and the occasion is looked forward to from year to year by a large number of their friends and relatives. Baskets of provisions are brought and the crowd assembles in a large woods near Waterloo, where a regular field day is enjoyed, and tomorrow's celebration will be equal to any of the past. In the matter of age Mr. Wingate has it one day over his neighbor, Mr. Marshall. Both are enjoying good health, and bid fair to celebrate many more birthdays.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, the great and good God of all mercy and wisdom, saw fit, on July 25th, 1909, to remove from our midst our dearly beloved brother, Solon Early, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Early Workum Lodge No. 66, Knights of Pythias, has lost a true Knight, who, by his devotion to our lodge, had endeared himself to every member,

Resolved, That the removal of such a life from our midst, leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a serious loss to the community and the public.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family and friends our heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, That a page in the record book be set apart for these resolutions, a copy of the same be sent to the family another copy be printed in the Boone County RECORDER.

Committee—J. M. Grant, D. B. Hoffman, S. S. McWethy.

Resolutions of respect of Morning Star Lodge No. 16, I. O. O. F. on the death of Bro. Solon Early:

Whereas, the great and supreme ruler of the universe has, in his infinite wisdom, removed from among us one of our esteemed brothers, Solon Early; and whereas, the long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties in this lodge makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him, therefore,

Resolved, That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the aid of our organization by service, contributions and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance.

Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased, we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him, who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That a copy of the resolutions be spread on the records of this lodge, a copy printed in the county paper and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

Committee—J. M. Grant, Hubert Walton, J. K. Norris.

For Sale—Good 6 room house (recently painted), and 3 acres of land, all under good fence, bearing orchard, land level and fertile, one summer garden. Near Woodside station. For term and price call on or address Mrs. Elizabeth Elchols, Woodside, Ky. [j21-4t]

Lost—Last Saturday between the Lawrenceburg ferry and Thos. Randall's, pair glasses in black case. The finder will confer a favor by returning same to Jas. T. Gaines, at Idlewild.

For Rent—My stable and lot in Florence for the week of the fair. Apply to Mrs. M. Finch, in Florence.

A Card to the Public.

There have been reports circulated that Myrtle Clements was the cause of the separation between me and my husband. This is positively untrue. It is also reported that he has threatened my life; this is also untrue, as no threats have ever been made in any way. I have sent for her many times to try to settle difficulties. She has been my friend and is my friend today, and I will stand by her to the end.

EMMA MARSHALL.

For Sale—Jersey cow and calf. Apply to D. M. Snyder, Burlington.

Does Not Color Hair

Ayer's Hair Vigor, as now made from our new improved formula, does not stain or color the hair even to the slightest degree. Gray hair, white hair, blonde hair is not made a shade darker. But it certainly does stop falling hair. No question about that.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's — Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

Indeed, we believe it will stop every case of falling hair unless there is some very unusual complication, something greatly affecting the general health. Then you should consult your physician. Also ask him about the new Ayer's Hair Vigor.

—Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

School Notes.

Several schools in the county have not employed teaches yet.

The lady teachers are very much in the majority in this county as is shown by the enrollment at the Institute now in session, but the coming increase in salaries will enlist many more males in the work.

Only half the school districts in the county were to hold elections last Saturday, and in them the election went by default, owing to the list of names for trustees not being placed in the hands of the county clerk in time to have the ballots prepared.

The Taylorsport school district is considerably tourn up over the proposed location of the school house that is to be erected there this fall. A delegation from the district is to appear before County Superintendent D. M. Snyder in the next few days to protest against the site that has been selected.

The County School Board will meet in Burlington, next Monday, and take up the matter of making an appropriation to sustain a High School at the county seat. This school will furnish High School instructions free to any pupil in the county who may desire it, the only expense to which the pupil will be being that of board.

There has been a very great change in the personael of the school teachers in this county in the last few years. It has not been many years since that a large number of the teachers came from the adjoining States and neighbor counties. This year 43 teachers were enrolled on the first day of the institute, and everyone of them is a resident of the county, it is a pleasure to note.

Attempted Suicide.

Emil Clutterbuck, who resides with his grandfather, Wm Clutterbuck, who lives between Florence and Erlanger, attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat, last Monday morning, but failed to cut deep enough to bring the desired result. No cause is assigned for the young man's effort to take his own life. He will recover and it is said that he has repented of the attempt.

Hon. E. E. Winn, of Warsaw, was here a day or two this week looking after business in the circuit court.

$3,200 Profit in One Year.

We know where there is a section of land (640 acres) every foot level, and can be cultivated, with rich loam 2 to 6 feet deep, will raise an average of 40 bushels of corn, 30 bushels of wheat, 40 bushels of oats, 50 bushels of kaffir corn, four crops of alfalfa; no tiling, can be plowed 12 months in the year, no rocks, no stumps, no gulleys, no hills; taxes 22c on the $100, selling at one-fourth its worth; roads always good; catarrh, asthma and consumption yield to the pure, dry air, such is the Pan-Handle of Texas. These are facts—get that fixed in your mind—solid facts. A tract of land is being sold in a healthier country than this, cheaper country to live in, where the crops bring more per acre than here, and you ought to own some of it. This land has been increasing in value at the rate of $5 on the acre every year. A section would make you a profit of $3,200, to say nothing about the crop, if you could buy now, while the land is cheap. See us about it, go with us on our next excursion, August the 16th. A. E. CANNOT SPLIT OR CURL LIKE WOOD SHINGLES

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

Wouldn't it be a satisfaction to you to have a roof on your property that was absolutely permanent; rather than to lay a slate, or wooden shingle roof, or any of the others which are at best only temporary, and always needing repairs? That is never necessary with

Cortright Metal Shingles

If you lay a Cortright Roof you needn't think of how soon you'll be repairing, or how soon you'll be re-roofing, for Cortright Metal Shingles outlast the building without repairs, always remain watertight, defying wind, snow and lightning.

If you are about to spend your money in roofing, post yourself first about the different forms by reading our book, "Conceming That Roof," and let us show you samples.

Local News.

Fine weather last week for a fair.

The blackberry crop is about exhausted.

Robert Carver completed his hay harvest last week.

The Boone circuit court is engaged on its annual August grind.

Several Burlingtonites attended the Lawrenceburg fair, last week, and were very much pleased with it.

The big Erlanger fair will throw open its gates a week from today, and everything indicates a big fair this year.

Rev. Edgar Riley spent several hours in this office one afternoon last week in search of an article published in the RECORDER many years ago in which there was some data in regard to Thomas Campbell and his son Alexander.

Lawsuit Continued Again.

The suit of Aylor against Riggs, which has been pending in the Boone Quarterly court for several terms, was continued again last Thursday on account of the absence of an important witness. The suit involves a colt on which the plaintiff has a lien for the season.

The Crime of Idleness.

Idleness means trouble for any one. Its the same with a lazy liver. It causes constipation, headache, jaundice, sallow complexion, pimples and blotches, loss of appetite, nausea, but Dr. King's New Life Pills soon banish liver troubles and build up your health. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Fine Potatoes.

Martin L. Aylor, of Hebron neighborhood, left at this office last Thursday a sample of a new variety of Irish potatoes he is propagating, and which he calls the Early Mollie, being named for his wife. Mr. Aylor has brought the potato from the seed, and says it is earlier than the Early Ohio, which in quality as a cooker has no equal. He sells them at $1 a peck.

Reduced Rates.

The C. N. O. T. P. Railroad will make the rate of one fare for the round trip from Cincinnati to Lexington, August 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29th, 1909, on account of the Florence fair. On each of the above dates there will be a special train leaving Ludlow at 9 a. m. Friday and Saturday, August 27 and 28th, there will be a special train leaving Cincinnati at 12 o'clock noon, arriving at Erlanger at 12:35 p. m.

He Cleaned up the Town.

Albert Conner, one of the trustees of Burlington common school district, brought his mowing machine over to Burlington, one morning last week, and mowed the school house lot, after which he turned his attention to the streets about town, where he did a good job cutting the weeds that would have been suffered to go to seed. Mr. Conner is entitled to the thanks of all.

Lawrenceburg Fair.

Belleview Boy behaved badly in his race at Lawrenceburg, last Thursday. He was going nicely, when he got mad and managed to throw his driver, Atty. O. M. Rogers, out of the sulkey, when he began running and ran a mile and a half before he was caught. Fortunately no one was hurt by the accident. After that bad behavior the horse did no good in the remaining heats. Belleview Boy would be hard to beat if he was level headed.

B. B. Hume's horse came fifth in the running race on Thursday. It had not been raced since it was two years old, consequently it was not in the condition it should have been.

The Erlanger Fair.

The Erlanger fair which begins next Wednesday will be as good or better than any of the past. The half mile track is in excellent condition for the races, in several of which some of the best horses that attend country fairs will start. These events every afternoon will be drawing cards. The exhibits in the harness and saddle rings will be of the highest order, while floral hall will be an attractive place to all lovers of artistic needle work, fine painting and drawing and excellent cooking. The display of fruits, grains, &c., will, doubtless, be the best in the history of the fair. Everybody is going to the Erlanger fair.

Seared With a Hot Iron, or scalded by overturned kettle—cut with a knife—bruised by slammed door—injured by gun or in any other way—the thing needed as once is Bucklen's Arnica Salve to subdue inflammation and kill the pain. It's earth's supreme healer, infallible for Boils, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Eczema and Piles. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Whipped a Bull with a Pen-Knife.

One day last week as Dudley Blythe was crossing a large pasture belonging to his father, and in which he knew was a cross bull, he spied the animal coming towards him. He was near the center of the pasture and there was not even a bush behind which he could take refuge, nor a rock nor a club with which to defend himself. The ferocious beast was coming on with head down and tail erect, while its bellowing jarred the ground on which the young man was standing. The situation was growing terrible, and as a last means of defense Mr. Blythe drew his pocket knife and opened it for use in the deadly encounter that seemed imminent. Another second and the struggle would be on. The bull, with head down, and its eyes looking like balls of fire, made a lounge for its intended victim, who sidestepped, flashing the animal with his pocket knife as it passed, opening a gash in its hide from the end of its nose to the end of its tail. This reception was so unexpected to the bull that it frightened it so it never stopped going until the center of an adjoining field was reached. It took Mr. Blythe some time to recover from his fright, and he does not go in the direction of that pasture any more until he is thoroughly equipped to defend himself against that bull. He says he does not know which of his experiences was the most trying on his nerves, that with the bovine or that with an adder a few days before.

Give Reasons—Not Abuse.

In common with every citizen of the Blue Grass, we regret the friction which has developed between the officers and representatives of the Burley Tobacco Society and the officers and representatives of the American Society of Equity. It is unfortunate that the difference of views held by the officers of these two organizations should lead to personal attacks and denunciation.

We do not believe there is anything like the difference between the rank and file of the two organizations that one would be led to believe existed by the utterances of the officers of the two organizations. The question of the continuation of the Burley Tobacco Society and the adoption of the pledge submitted by that Society is, and ought to be considered solely as a business proposition. Opposition to it ought to be stated, with reasons for that opposition, not with abuse for those who advocate it. Objections to it ought to be answered by reasoning, not by denunciation.

We believe thoroughly in the principles on which the Burley Tobacco Society is founded. We believe in the co-operation of those engaged in similar pursuits. In our judgment, the labor union, of which the Burley Tobacco Society is in essentials a development, has been of untold benefit in the development of Anglo-Saxon civilization, in the winning of greater opportunity for those who have to earn their daily bread by the sweat of their brow. In spite of all the abuses, in spite of all the crimes committed in the name of organized labor, the sum total of good accomplished by the organization of of laborers far out-weighed the evil done in their name.

The tobacco crop is the most important crop raised in Central Kentucky. It has become the great cash crop. Upon the price received for it depends the prosperity of this section more than any other crop. No personal ambitions, no prienmities, no political considerations, ought to be injected into the consideration of the pooling or non-pooling of this crop, and we hope the indications of bitterness between those who disagree will soon disappear, that it will prove to be but a flash in the pan, instead of a serious breach between those whose objects ought to be, and we believe are the same.—Lexington Herald, July 20th.

A Bad Accident.

Last Wednesday as Harmie Jones was making his last trip for the day from Erlanger to Burlington with the mail wagon, containing two lady passengers, and leading behind the wagon a horse attached to a new buggy, one of the horses attached to the mail wagon fell when opposite Morris Judge's a mile south of Erlanger, and the other horse soon became demoralized and was tramping all over the animal which was down and was kicking and struggling to regain its feet. The lady passengers left the wagon at the first opportunity they had but were slightly injured. The horses attached to the mail wagon continued their bad behavior until the vehicle was turned over, which frightened the horse attached to the buggy and it pulled loose from Mr. Jones and ran some distance when the buggy was wrecked by colliding with a telephone pole. Morris Judge and one or two others who chanced to be near came to Mr. Jones' assistance about the time the horse that fell and caused all the trouble regained its feet, and rendered all the assistance they could. The horse that did not fall acted like a crazy animal, bucking and squealing after the harness had been removed. The trip was completed with Morris Judge's horse and wagon. The horse and buggy that was being lead behind the the mail wagon was driven that morning to Erlanger by B. B. Hume and wife, and was being brought home.

In the mixup Mr. Jones was slightly hurt, but congratulates himself on escaping without a serious injury.

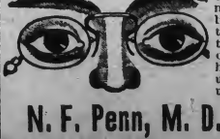
WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a



U. S. CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

SHOOTING STRAY DOGS.

The reports of the opening of the dog-killing season in several cities are replete with brutality. The policemen shoot at all the proscribed canines, and in missing them, which is oftener the case than not, they are apt to destroy the lives of men, women and children, who may happen to be within pistol range. If the bullet hits the dog at all, it probably wounds the poor brute, and makes an otherwise safe and sane dog a writhing, foaming creature, mad from fear and pain, and scattering alarm and disgust wherever it may run or drag its tortured body, says the Washington Post. Even when the policeman is marksman enough to dispatch the dog without suffering or scattering bullets among pedestrians, the killing is offensive to the sight of every human being with a spark of feeling and is brutalising to impressionable children. In the midst of the heat and semi-hysteria which may be expected from the dogs and dog days, Washington is to be congratulated thus far in not resorting to the pistol for the removal of friendless and homeless dogs. Whatever crusade may be necessary to reassure the nervous and protect the people from unlicensed or otherwise outlawed dogs, let there be no turning to the policeman's pistol as a means of mending the situation.

A justice of the supreme court of the state has publicly accused the police force of New York city of arbitrary and illegal abuse of police powers, and called them so severely to account that their methods are now under investigation by the mayor. If there is anything inexcusable in a government like this it is the disregard of personal liberty and constitutional rights by the very forces created by the law to protect that liberty and enforce those rights, says the Baltimore American. Unfortunately, there is too much ignorance, both by public officials of the limit of their powers and by citizens of their own legal rights. More understanding of the one and assertion of the other vastly improve the situation.

This season of severe hot waves, which may be expected to recur, off and on, till fall, is one for the special exercise of mercy in various ways. To all human beings who are compelled to labor in various ways in the heat kindness and consideration on the part of the public will prevent much suffering. Working animals should be spared the whip and their burdens lightened as much as possible. The various charities for supplying fresh air by country and water should be liberally supported, for they mean the saving of many lives. In short, never is there a time of year when the Golden Rule needs more practical application.

The steady growth of the country in business activity is shown again in the figures relating to new incorporations for June. Papers filed for concerns with an authorized capital of $1,000,000 or more each represented a total of $212,575,000, which was an increase of $16,810,000 over May, and $24,411,000 over June of last year. Moreover, the aggregate for the six month ended with June was $723,948,000 this year, against $649,636,000 last year. The report tells its own story on increasing industrial operations and of provisions to meet the enlarged demands of the people.

Zeppelin has raised the enthusiasm of Germany to a high pitch by his spectacular demonstrations with his inventions for navigating the air. The Wright brothers, working along altogether different lines, have attained results which command respectful attention from students of the art of flight in all parts of the world. The presentation to them of gold medals awarded by the Aero Club of America evinces the interest which their countrymen take in their work, and will no doubt tend to encourage them to further efforts.

The most remarkable fish story of the season comes from the Catskills. It relates the tale of a man who, to work off a lazy streak, went out fishing and returned within an hour with a sturgeon which gave 68 pounds of caviar, for which he received $100. The energetic determination to work off a lazy streak is the point of the remarkable tale.

The difficulty of intelligible conversation with Mars is suggested by a scientific theory that the canals of that planet may be signals to us. Here is the possibility that while we think of talking to Mars by electric flashes of mirrors Mars may be speaking to us by canals. Two different languages, you see.

GREEK ANGERS TURK

BY FIRM STAND IN DISPUTE ON CRETAN QUESTION—VOLUNTEER FORCE READY.

ATHENS TO REPLY TO THE PORTE.

Protecting Powers Plan to Avert Conflict—Attitude of Germany Pleasing to Other Governments—War Is Not Expected.

London, Aug. 9.—The acute stage reached in the dispute between Turkey and Greece over Crete is causing anxiety in the European capitals such as always accompanies any diplomatic difficulty in that quarter of Europe; but, as M. Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister, said in an interview at Cowes last Tuesday, that if there are any awkward developments in the situation Europe will see that no mischievous effects result therefrom.

There is no idea that hostilities will result, and there is every belief that a satisfactory settlement will be arrived at. From the latest reports it appears that Turkey has not presented anything in the form of an ultimatum to Greece, but has confined herself to verbal protests, while the four protecting powers are making energetic representations both to Constantinople and Athens to secure an amicable arrangement of the dispute.

The four powers insist that under no circumstances shall the Greek flag be hoisted over any of the public buildings in Crete, and the foreign consuls at Canea have been instructed to impress this fact upon the Cretan authorities.

Great satisfaction is felt in France that Germany is supporting the representations of the protective powers upon Turkey for the necessity of a peaceful solution of the Turko-Greece dispute.

The status quo existing at the time of the evacuation of Crete by the international troops alone was promised to Turkey, and it is considered by the powers that energetic action is necessary in order to prevent Turkey from advancing fresh pretensions.

Constantinople, Aug. 9.—The steps the porte has taken at Athens concerning Crete have been confined exclusively to verbal representations. No written note has been presenting and nothing in the form of an ultimatum.

The representations having been couched in the friendliest language consistent with firmness. Greece had already informed the Porte that the Greek officers in Crete had been struck off the Greek army list since 1806 and that the whole question was in the hands of the four protesting powers.

The ambassadors of the four protecting powers—Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy—held a conference to-day at Therapia, the summer colony of the ambassadors on the west coast of the Bosphorus, and will reassemble Monday morning to agree upon a common action which will be taken without delay.

Athens, Greece, Aug. 9.—It is stated that the Greek reply to Turkey will be delivered Tuesday. The representatives of the powers are holding frequent conferences with the premier and foreign minister.

An Austrian squadron and an Italian warship have arrived at Volo.

BITTEN BY MAD DOG.

Man Barked and Suffered Terrible Paroxysms, Causing Panic on a Train.

Danville, Ill., Aug. 9.—A man giving his name as George Pearce, of Chicago, became desperate on a fast Cincinnati Southern train, which arrived here at noon Sunday, and it took four men to remove him from the train.

He began by smashing windows of the coach, throwing suit cases promiscuously and barking like a dog. His arms are horribly cut by glass, and it took the assistance of two physicians to prevent his bleeding to death. After being placed in the city workhouse Pierce secured a rope and was in the act of hanging himself when stopped by a guard. He said he was en route to Sunbright, Tenn., to visit a brother. He said he was bitten by a mad dog a few years ago. He is still unconscious and barks and groans like a dog.

Fell Four Stories Into Go-Cart.

New York, Aug. 9.—Little Dora Murtha, of 149 Nassau avenue, Brooklyn, entertained friends and relatives, who were gathering at her home to assist in celebrating her second birthday by falling out of a fourth-story window and landing safely in an unoccupied baby carriage that was standing on the sidewalk, without receiving a scratch or bruise.

Spreading Rails Ditch Train.

Pueblo, Col., Aug. 9.—The chair car and smoker of Missouri Pacific train No. 2, which leaves at 12:01 for St. Louis, went into the ditch at Avondale, 12 miles west of here. Five persons were injured. The cause of the wreck was spreading rails.

Fire Destroys Porcelain Plant.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 9.—Fire practically destroyed plant of Imperial Porcelain Works, worth $90,000, well insured. Three hundred hands will be thrown out of work. Three firemen were buried under a falling wall.

ABANDONED!

KILLING FOLLOWS BANK THEFT

ROBBER AND ONE PURSUER DIE IN BATTLE.

Several Others Wounded — Bandit Holds Up White Bear (Minn.) Cashier and Steals $565.

White Bear, Minn.—In a pitched battle with rifles and revolvers following the robbery of the First State bank of White Bear, Robert Pohl, said to be an ex-convict, and Edward Larken, chef at the Five Forks, a Bald Eagle lake cottage, were killed, and four others were wounded.

The dead:
Robert Pohl, the robber.
Edward Larken.

The wounded:
Thomas Skeith, grazed by spent bullet.
William Butler, shot through abdomen; at hospital in critical condition.
Richard Doran, shot through arm.
John Christie, shot through fleshy part of thigh.

Pohl, who had been working at White Bear for a week, and who is believed to have been a professional cracksman, took a check for seven dollars to the bank at 8:30 a. m., and while the cashier, Alfred Auger, was examining it he produced an automatic rifle and told him to hand over all the cash in the bank. Auger complied.

As the robber dashed out of the bank with $565 in cash Auger raised the alarm, and citizens pursued the man to the Interstate lumber yards, where he hid.

Larken entered the yards and was shot through the heart. The robber then ran to a pile of lumber a short distance beyond the lard and hid under it. A desperate battle with the posse, during which at least 500 shots were exchanged, followed.

John Brachvogel, one of the posse, who was armed with a repeating rifle, finally shot the robber in the arm. The man dropped his weapon, but picked it up again, and as he turned to fire Brachvogel shot him dead. Fifteen bullet wounds were found in the man's body.

MOB WITNESSES BEHEADING.

Great Excitement in French Capital As Murderer's Head Is Cut Off in Public.

Paris.—A sudden official announcement that a public beheading would take place at 4:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the boulevard fronting the Sante prison, created a sensation in Paris, which had not seen an execution in 15 years.

Immediately immense crowds gathered at the scene, but were kept back from the guillotine by heavy details of police and municipal guards.

The victim was one Duchemin, aged 23, a butcher. In 1908 he stabbed his mother and this not resulting in her death quick enough he finished her by strangulation. The motive for the crime was robbery.

SWEDEN'S CRISIS IS PASSING

Many of Strikers Resume Work—Dissension Apparent in Ranks of the Idle.

Stockholm. — The tense situation arising from the general strike proclaimed a few days ago seems to be relaxing. The grave-diggers have returned to work and dissension is apparent in the ranks of the other strikers. The employers of the largest plants in Stockholm announce that their men will return to work Monday.

It is reported that the Central Federation of the Trades unions has requested the government to mediate in the present crisis, but this is denied by the chairman of the federation. M. Von Sydow, president of the Employers' federation, declared that intervention by the government would be without result as the differences between the men and the employers were too great to be settled in such a manner. The National Labor union published a statement in the newspapers disapproving the strike of the electric light and gas workers.

As the strikers have been preventing farmers from bringing provisions into the city, troops have been detailed to patrol the country roads. The military authorities continue to dispense milk from the railroad stations for the use of children.

The authorities have forbidden the sale of methylated spirits, as it has been found that the workmen, unable to obtain their usual drink, are resorting to drinking this liquor.

KENOSHA JURIST IS FOUND

Judge Clarkson Discovered Working in a Button Factory at Sabula, Ia.

Kenosha, Wis.—Judge Joseph R. Clarkson, who disappeared from his home here on July 14, was found working in a pearl button factory at Sabula, Ia., by John Burns, one of his close friends, who has been searching for him since he left Kenosha. Judge Clarkson, in company with Burns, is expected to arrive here Saturday.

It was only a few miles from Sabula that Judge Clarkson was found 28 years ago when he disappeared from Omaha under circumstances similar to the present case. After returning home to Omaha more than a quarter of a century ago, Judge Clarkson could remember nothing of the weeks during which he was walking about the country.

One of the strange features of the case is the influence which caused him to retrace the steps which he took on his first disappearance.

The clew which led the searchers to Sabula was received in Kenosha Thursday and Burns at once set out to find his friend. Clarkson was judge of the superior court here for several years.

International Typographical Union.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The annual convention of the International Typographical union opened here Monday with a full attendance of delegates and many others. President John M. Lynch was in the chair. The union's health campaign, the label propaganda, the old age pension and the proposal to establish an insurance feature are the chief matters that are before the convention for action, which closes on Saturday.

TARIFF BILL PASSED

NOT PERFECT, BUT A STEP FORWARD, IS TAFT'S COMMENT.

CONGRESS CLOSES SESSION

President and Members Leave Capital for Their Summer Homes—Gore and Johnson Give Opinions of New Law's Effect.

Washington.—Whether for weal or woe, the United States now is under a new tariff law, the extraordinary session of congress adjourning Thursday evening, after fighting since March 15 over the bill.

The president left Friday afternoon for the "summer White House" at Beverly, Mass., and all but a few of the members of congress have gone to their homes. The members of the conference committee and cabinet were dinner guests of the president Thursday night.

The conference report on the bill was agreed to by the senate by a vote of 47 to 31, and the concurrent resolution making certain changes in the leather schedule was adopted by both houses.

Following is the vote in detail:

Yeas—Aldrich, Borah, Bourne, Bradley, Brandegee, Brown, Bulkeley, Burkett, Burnham, Burrows, Burton, Carter, Clark (Wyoming), Crane, Crawford, Cullom, Curtis, Depew, Dick, Dixon, Dupont, Elkins, Flint, Frye, Gamble, Guggenheim, Hale, Heyburn, Johnson, Jones, Kean, Lodge, Lorimer, McCumber, Oliver, Page, Penrose, Perkins, Pisles, Root, Scott, Smith (Michigan), Smoot, Stephenson, Sutherland, Warner, Wetmore—47.

Nays—Bacon, Bailey, Bankhead, Beveridge, Bristow, Chamberlain, Clapp, Clay, Culberson, Cummins, Daniel, Dolliver, Fletcher, Foster, Frazier, Gore, Hughes, La Follette, McLaurin, Martin, Nelson, Newlands, Overman, Paynter, Raynor, Shively, Simmons, Smith (Maryland), Smith (South Carolina), Stone, Taliaferro—31.

Senator McEnery of Louisiana (Dem), who was absent, was paired on the bill. He was the only Democrat favoring the measure.

The bill received all the Republican votes except those of Bristow, Clapp, Cummins, Dolliver, La Follette, Beveridge and Nelson.

The following are the new appointments made by Speaker Cannon for house committee chairmanships: Vreeland of New York, banking and currency; Rodenberg of Illinois, industrial arts and expositions; Mann of Illinois, interstate and foreign commerce; Weeks of Massachusetts, post offices and postroads; Alexander of New York, rivers and harbors; Parker of New Jersey, judiciary; Prince of Illinois, claims.

President Taft arrived at the capitol at 4:45 p. m., and 20 minutes later signed the bill, which became a law Friday.

Bending over the president as he affixed his signature were Secretary Knox, Secretary MacVeagh, Attorney General Wickersham, Postmaster General Hitchcock, Secretary Nagel and Secretary Wilson. Standing about the table were Senator Aldrich, Representative Payne and many other members of the senate and house. Mr. Payne got the pen. Taft also signed the Philippine tariff measure and other bills.

After signing the tariff bill President Taft gave out a statement embodying his views of the new act, which he designates officially as the "Payne bill," in accordance with past custom of giving first recognition to the framer of the measure in the house of representatives.

The president declares that, while the bill is not perfect by any means, nor "a complete compliance with promises made, strictly interpreted," it is, nevertheless, a sincere effort on the part of the party to make a downward revision and to comply with the promises of the platform.

The statement in part follows:

"I have signed the Payne tariff because I believe it to be the result of sincere effort on the part of the Republican party to make a downward revision, and to comply with the promises of the platform as they have been generally understood, and as I interpreted them in the campaign before election.

"This is not a perfect tariff bill, or a complete compliance with the promises made, strictly interpreted, but a fulfillment free from criticism in respect to a subject matter involving many schedules and thousands of articles could not be expected.

"The corporation tax is a just and equitable excise measure, which it is hoped will produce a sufficient amount to prevent a deficit and which, incidentally, will secure valuable statistics and information concerning the many corporations of the country, and will constitute an important step toward that degree of publicity and regulation which the tendency in corporate enterprises in the last 20 years has shown to be necessary."

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Emma Wharton, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Summary of Matters of Special Interest to Our Readers

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Circuit Judge Reed, of Paducah, Enjoins County School Board from Carrying on the Consolidated School.

Paducah, Ky.—If the decision of Circuit Judge Reed is sustained by the court of appeals there will be no consolidated schools in Kentucky. He held that the transportation of pupils was an illegal expenditure of public money, and enjoined the county school board from carrying on the consolidated school. McCracken was the first county in the state to experiment with consolidated schools.

DEPOT TO BE BUILT

In Louisville to Supplant Seventh Street Structure Destroyed by Fire.

Louisville, Ky.—Final plans for the construction of a Seventh street depot to supplant the structure destroyed by fire several months ago and terms of contract between five railroads to jointly use the building, were agreed upon at a conference of officials representing all lines. Work upon the new depot will begin at once, and will be completed within 90 days. The depot will be one of the handsomest and best appointed in all the south. By reason of arrangements definitely agreed upon by the five roads, the question of Louisville's great union station, long the greatest project of all promoters of the city's welfare, has been finally and effectively removed from the range of possibility.

ATTACKED BY NEGRO

Is Bowling Green Woman, Who Was Slashed in Face and Neck.

Bowling Green, Ky.—While Mrs. Charles Swelnberger was preparing dinner a burly negro grasped her around the waist. When she screamed the negro slashed her in the face and neck and escaped. Her description gave officers a clew and soon Jim Stewart was arrested and identified. A crowd of several hundred persons soon surrounded the jail. County Judge Drake acquainted Gov. Willson with the situation, and the latter directed the local company to guard the prisoner and escort him to the train to be conveyed to Louisville.

Lexington, Ky.—The 4-year-old champion saddle gelding, Kentucky Choice, recently purchased by J. H. Campbell, of Columbus, O., from Gay Brothers for $6,000, was injured at the farm of Gay Brothers, at Pisgah. While cavorting in his stall the horse knocked down a pitchfork, and one of the tines entered one of his legs. The horse is improving, and Horace Gay is of the opinion that he will be able to fill his engagement at the Blue Grass fair. Kentucky Choice will go to the State fair at Louisville, and will also be seen at the international show at Chicago.

Louisville, Ky.—Philip Ewald, prominent iron worker, who died here several days ago, left an estate of more than $500,000, the bulk of it being left in trust to his three children. To each of his nine brothers and sisters $15,000 is left, and several bequests of smaller amounts to certain charitable enterprises.

Danville, Ky.—Westbound L. & N. passenger train No. 23, which runs from Norton, Va., to Louisville, was derailed at Livingston, Ky., killing Baggagemaster Anderson. The engine, baggage car and smoker were thrown off the rails and the passengers severely shaken up, but not injured.

Lexington, Ky.—To prevent an epidemic of typhoid fever several public wells at Shelbyville have been closed by direction of the authorities. This action followed the report of Prof. H. Garman, state entomologist, after he had examined water sent to him from one of the wells.

Danville, Ky.—Virgil Starns, the 15-year-old boy who shot his father, Assessor J. W. Starns, to death in Pulaski county, was brought to Danville from Somerset for safekeeping. The feeling against the youth is said to be very high.

Louisville, Ky.—Mayor Grinstead has signed the building ordinance making valid the so-called "tube" corridor of the Gaiety theater, owned by Rudolph Hynicka, of Cincinnati. The theater will open September 1.

Cynthiana, Ky.—The Harrison county board of the Burley Tobacco Society gave out a statement saying that the progress of pledging the 1909 crop of tobacco in this county is progressing beyond the expectation of the most hopeful.

Louisville, Ky.—Major Morris Gifford, an attorney, received notice from Adjt. Gen. Johnston of his appointment as lieutenant colonel of the First Kentucky regiment. He was a captain in the Spanish-American war, and later was a major in the First regiment.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Object to Rates.

Complaint was filed before the state railroad commission by the state board of agriculture, in charge of the Kentucky state fair, that excessive, extortiontae and unlawful rates are being charged by the Kentucky and Indiana Bridge Co. for the switching of cars loaded with exhibits for the fair from the various railroads with which the K. and I. Bridge Co. has physical connection at Louisville to the state fair grounds.

Will Eradicate Scale.

Commissioner of Agriculture Rankin received a letter from H. Garman, state entomologist, in which he reports the occurrence of the San Joe Scale on the nursery stock belonging to Albert R. Sherron, of Paducah, McCracken county, Ky. Commissioner Rankin will take steps at once to eradicate the scale.

Treasury Statement.

Auditor James completed the calculation of the condition of the state's finances at the end of business on July 31. His report shows that there is a balance of $273,163.27 in the treasury. The amount of outstanding warrants more than wipes out this balance.

Rate Reduced.

At a meeting of the state railroad commission the complaint of the Ashland Leather Co. of freight rates from Ashland to Frankfort was heard and the rate was ordered reduced from 34 cents to 26 cents. The rate to Louisville from Ashland is but 18 cents.

Kentucky Pick-Ups

Louisville, Ky.—With the identity of his assailant and the motive locked within his breast, Ike D. Smith, former gambler and saloonkeeper, died here, with 25 knife wounds in his body.

Louisville, Ky.—Under bond of $100, Adjt. Gen. Johnston was held to answer to the grand jury on a charge of assault and battery upon Denny B. Gdode, editor of the Louisville Focus.

Louisville, Ky.—Postal authorities of this city received a communication from Sayler & Sayler, Cincinnati attorneys, inquiring of local relatives of William Patrick O'Hara, who died in Cincinnati, leaving an estate of $8,000.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—Articles incorporating the Old Kentucky Fire Insurance Co. were filed here for organization. The incorporators are all local capitalists and business men, and it is proposed to have a captal of $200,000 and a surplus of $100,000.

Pineville, Ky.—The L. & N. railroad will soon begin the construction of a branch line from this place up Straight creek, six miles distant, to the property of the Edgemont Coal Co. About 5,000 acres of the celebrated Straight Creek coal land will be reached.

Louisville, Ky.—Senator Foraker, of Ohio, has accepted an invitation to come to this city and deliver an address at the Kentucky state fair grounds during a fair to be held by the colored people of the state the week following the close of the annual state fair.

Louisville, Ky.—Three firemen were injured, three horses burned to death and Manager Trudeau narrowly escaped death, when, for the second time within the year, the feed elevator of C. P. Dodd & Co. was totally destroyed by fire. Loss $20,000, covered by insurance. Origin unknown.

Lexington, Ky.—Attorney Charles H. Stoll failed at the hearing of the water contract injunction case in circuit court in his efforts to make good his avowal that Mayor John Skain is a stockholder in the Lexington Waterworks Co. and that stock belonging to him is held by dummies.

Louisville, Ky.—To prevent the installation, maintaining and operating of party lines the city of Louisville filed suit for injunction against the Home Telephone Co. Under its franchise it is not allowed to install or operate party lines, and the suit charges that this is being done.

Beattyville, Ky.—In the Lee county republican primary William Robinson was nominated for county judge; county attorney, H. S. McGuire; circuit clerk, G. W. Cann; county court clerk, C. B. Lovelace; sheriff, Walker Jameson; jailer, Samuel L. Cecil; assessor, W. H. Seals; coroner, David Mays.

Winchester, Ky.—The auction sales by the Burley Tobacco Society closed here. A total of 4,392 hogsheads have been sold at an average price of about 14½ cents. The total received will be at least $150,000 less than the price at which the independents contracted to take it, and they will be sued for the difference.

Louisville, Ky.—Preparations are going ahead here for the fifth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, which will be held August 25, 26 and 27. Nearly 10,000 engraved invitations have been sent out.

Lexington, Ky.—The deplorable condition of the roadbed and trackage of the Lexington City Railway Co. in several of the principal thoroughfares of this city caused the finding of a number of indictments by the grand jury against the company.

IRRIGATION CONGRESS OPENS

GREAT NATIONAL GATHERING AT SPOKANE, WASH.

Attended by Thousands of Delegates and Others Interested in Reclaiming the Deserts.

Spokane, Wash.—"Save the forests, store the floods, reclaim the deserts and make homes on the land," is the watchword of the National Irrigation congress which opened here Monday. The meeting has attracted apostles of irrigation, deep waterways, good roads and conservation of resources and recruits from various parts of this continent, England, Germany, France, Hawaii, the Philippine islands, the Latin republics and China and Japan, representatives of foreign nations and colonial governments, officials of the federal reclamation, forestry and agricultural departments, governors and members of state and territorial legislatures, railroad and bank presidents and members of agricultural, horticultural, commercial and fraternal organizations.

President G. E. Barstow.

Arrangements have been made for the entertainment of about 4,000 accredited delegates, and thousands of other visitors are coming in from the irrigated districts of the west and of British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba.

President George E. Barstow of Barstow, Tex., presides over the sessions, and the secretary is B. A. Fowler of Phoenix, Ariz.

The regular program consists of addresses by officials of the reclamation, forestry and agricultural departments of the United States, statesmen and scientists, railroad and financial men, promoters of the Carey act reclamation projects and officials of private irrigation enterprises.

The federal department of agriculture has taken charge of a 26-acre tract of land in the Spokane valley, where the latest approved methods of supplying the soil with moisture by artificial means are being demonstrated by irrigation experts.

Parades, banquets, receptions and excursions are the entertainment features on the program. The congress closes Saturday.

WOULD SHAKE OFF EAST.

Time Has Come for West to Cut Shackles, Says Gov. Johnson of Minnesota.

Seattle, Wash.—"It is time that the west threw off the shackles of the east. I would preach no sectional divisions and no sectional strifes, but Minnesota and Washington and the states between them, with those to the south of us, should arise in their might and claim for themselves that fair share of influence in the halls of congress and in the administration of national affairs to which they are entitled by every law of common sense, as well as of political economy."

This was the declaration of Gov. John Johnson in his address at the Minnesota day celebration at the Seattle exposition.

"We, as an integral part of the American people should cast our influence and our votes not only to advance the material interests of our own particular section, but we should be broad enough and big enough to labor for the common good of our common country," said the governor.

Storm Panic at a Circus.

Battle Creek, Mich.—During a windstorm which uprooted trees, blew down fences and telephone poles here, the menagerie tent of Barnum & Bailey's circus was blown down and two women seriously injured. A large crowd was thrown into a panic. None of the animals escaped, but the roars of the lions created a panic.

Miss Adelaide Hathaway of Schoolcraft, Mich., sustained internal injuries and a fractured hip. Miss Bernice Platt of this city was severely injured. At Athletic park, where the local and Jackson teams of the Southern Michigan league were playing, Catcher Stringer of the local team was struck by lightning on the field and thrown to the ground unconsious.

Japan Will Ignore China.

Tokyo.—Japan officially notified the powers Saturday of her intention to proceed immediately with the reconstructing and improving of the Antung-Mukden railroad, without the consent of China, diplomatic negotiations having failed.

Delay Issue of Bonds.

Washington.—None of the new Panama bonds authorized by congress will be issued before congress meets again and has had an opportunity to change the circulation tax.

Mrs. Lora Wills, of Lima, Ohio, arrived here last Thursday on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Diers.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Elliston, of Elliston Station, spent last Wednesday here with friends, the guests of Mrs. Mollie Ford.

Ira Stephens, one of the prosperous farmers and estimable citizens of Kenton county, spent last Friday here with friends.

E. P. Northcutt spent a part of last week in Cincinnati on business connected with his store here, arranging for his bargain sales.

U. S. Wills, of Lima, Ohio, arrived here Monday on a visit to his wife who is the guest of her parents H. C. Diers and wife.

Daniel E. Dudley, one of the up-to-date farmers and clever gentlemen, of Kenton county, spent last Friday here with friends.

Mrs. Anna Hind and daughter, Miss Lucille, have returned from a very pleasant visit to her sister, Mrs. Dr. Shaw and family, of Cincinnati.

Wm. H. Young, of Kenton county, spent Thursday here, guest of his sister, Mrs. L. P. Vallandingham, and visiting other relatives and friends.

Judge Benj. Stephens, who is enjoying the pleasures of country life on his beautiful farm near Florence, spent a day here last week with his many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. L. Vest and baby son, Walter Dudley Grant, spent last Friday at Independence, guests of her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Loomis.

C. P. Sherwin, of Hanover, Indiana, was here part of last week in the interest of some school publication. Mr. Sherwin is a student at Hanover college and resides at Bristol, Indiana.

The members of the Sunday schools of the Methodist church and the Christian church enjoyed the delights of a most enjoyable picnic in Rich's woods near Piner, last Saturday, and there were a large attendance of both young and old.

John Jacobs, of Sanders, Carroll county, officiated as station agent at the L. & N. Railroad depot Saturday, while the regular agent S. W. Beverly, was enjoying the day with his family at the picnic of the Methodist Sunday school near Piner.

A. Brooking Tompkins returned home Saturday from a business trip through Western Kentucky for his firm, The Graf, Morsbach Harness Company, of Cincinnati, and reports business picking up all along the line. Mr. Tompkins left Monday on another business tour.

Wm. P. Kinman, of Jonesville, Owen county, spent last Friday and Saturday here looking over this territory with a view to purchasing some real estate and moving to Walton for the purpose of taking advantage of our excellent school for the education of his children.

Perry B. Gaines, of Carroll county, was a visitor here last Saturday, en-route to Georgetown where his wife has been visiting relatives and friends. Mr. Gaines is one of the most popular citizens in Carroll county, and is a very successful farmer and trader. He is a cousin of our esteemed citizen, Lee Gaines.

James L. Whitson, of Walnut Lick, Gallatin county, spent Thursday here, guest of his relatives, Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Jones, being enroute home from a visit to Cynthiana and Leesburg, Harrison county, where he has some farming interests. Mr. Whitson is one of the cleverest and best citizens of Gallatin county, and has a host of friends in this quarter.

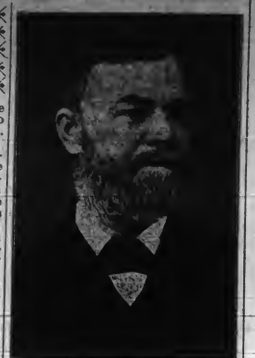
Dr. B. W. Stallard, who recently went from Walton to Cincinnati to take charge of a part of a dental office, was assigned to the charge of an office at Memphis, Tenn., and went there a couple of weeks ago, and is very much pleased with his location and the profitable position he now occupies. His many friends in Waltonare glad to learn of his promotion.

Frank Rork, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, has been here the past two weeks erecting four silos for J. G. Tomlin on his farms in this quarter.

A. S. McClure, of Crittenden, who is the selling agent in this quarter, also spent part of last week supervising some of the business. The silo is a great auxiliary to the stock farm and it is the profit maker for winter feeding of live stock.

Rev. James W. Rogers, who has been conducting a protracted meeting at the Christian church at Mt. Lystra, Grant county, spent Friday here with home folks. The meeting closed Sunday night after a most enjoyable and interesting session of about two weeks. Six additions were reported Friday. Rev. Rogers and Rev. E. L. Stamper, of Yorktown, Indiana, began a series of meetings at the Christian church at Stringtown, Grant county, Monday night, expecting to be in session two weeks.

Richmond Reed who was badly hurt last week by the breaking of the scaffold on which he was painting the Presbyterian church near Richwood, died from the effects of his injuries last Friday night. The deceased was a brother of our clever citizen, Joseph Reed, and was a good citizen and a pleasant gentleman, who had many friends in this quarter. The funeral took place Monday the remains being taken to Linden Grove cemetery for burial. Mr. Reed was about 57 years old.



Dr. and Mrs. Ely Mann and daughter, of Muncie, Indiana, were here last Friday in their automobile en-route to Gardnersville, Pendleton county, on a visit to their old home which they left twenty-five years ago to take up their residence in the Hoosier State, where we are pleased to learn that Dr. Mann has prospered and is esteemed and respected by a large circle of friends. Mrs. Mann was formerly Miss Fletcher and was born and reared in Pendleton county. Dr. and Mrs. Mann and daughter are lovely people and their host of friends in this quarter welcome them back to their old Kentucky home with the genuine, old time cordiality.

Frank E. Curley, who arrived here last week from Tucson, Arizona, where he has been several years practicing law, and we are glad to say is prospering, is enjoying his visit to his old home here where he has many friends who are delighted to meet him again. Mr. Curley states that the temperature in Arizona at this season of the year is not as warm as it is here, owing to the dryness of the atmosphere there and the humidity here. He will return to Arizona shortly and may take his little daughter, Marie, home with him. The little girl came here several months ago when the remains of Mr. Curley's wife were brought from Tucson to her old home for burial, and the little girl remained to comfort her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Edwards in their bereavement.

A. M. Rouse has sold his interest in the Walton Flouring Mills to his son, W. O. Rouse and Wm. H. Tillman, who will conduct the business on an enlarged scale. The business has been quite successful under the firm name of A. M. Rouse & Son, for the past 20 years, and it is an enterprise that contributes considerably to the prosperity of Walton and every public spirited citizen should do what is in their power to help the new firm continue to grow and expand in usefulness and public utility. A. M. Rouse has been desirous for some time of going to some of the newer countries and his recent visit to Texas caused him to believe that he could do better there, and he will go to that State before long. His son W. O. Rouse did not want to handle the flouring mill alone and he therefore prevailed on W. H. Tillman joining him in the business and buying his father's interest, and it is a good combination of business integrity and intelligence that will be sure to succeed.

Mr. and Mrs. Benj. L. Stephens and son, John, of Ashland, Kansas, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Owen S. Watts, last Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Stephens is a son of John Stephens, of the Bullittsville neighborhood, where he was born and reared, and left for Kansas 34 years ago, casting his fortune with the Sunflower State. He had the courage and stamina to battle thru the hardships incident to the early history of Kansas, and attained the well merited success that such good hustlers are fully entitled to. When the depressing period enveloped Kansas Mr. Stephens stayed there and garnered all of the resources possible, and bought all the land he could at prices ranging from $2 to $5 per acre, and now owns 5,000 acres of land in one body with a creek running through the land to the extent of a mile, and the land is stocked with fine cattle and horses. Mr. Stephens has considerable other property and is estimated to be worth $150,000, and he has the good sense to know how to enjoy it properly. He came in from Kansas about a month ago and wanting to visit various parts of his native State he purchased an automobile, and made the trip with his family to Lexington, Frankfort and other places and had a most enjoyable time. His many friends in the old county of Boone are delighted to learn of his prosperity because he is worthy of it in every way.

William Binder, aged about 70 years, committed suicide Sunday evening by swallowing carbolic acid, at the home of Mrs. Carrie Menke, in Kenton county, near Walton. The old man was a native of Germany and came to this country many years ago, settling in Laurel county, where he resided many years. He and his wife disagreed and in the legal separation that followed the farm he owned was given to his wife and son, and this caused him to be very despondent at times. He had been living at Mrs. Menke's a couple of years, and had threatened to commit suicide several times before. On Sunday there were quite a number of visitors at Mrs. Menke's and her sons had taken them to the railroad station to return to their homes in Cincinnati, leaving Mrs. Menke and Mr. Binder at home. At the supper table about seven o'clock Binder came in from his room and handed Mrs. Menke an empty bottle that had contained carbolic acid and said he would make her a present of it. Shortly afterwards he went to his room where he had emptied the carbolic acid in a tumbler, and drank the contents. His groans and suffering caused an investigation and Mrs. Menke realizing Binder's condition telephoned for Dr. C. T. Coleman who hurried to his bedside but the unfortunate man was beyond all human aid, and he died about nine o'clock. Edwards Bros. took charge of the remains and telephoned Dr. W. W. Tarvin, of Covington, who is the coroner of Kenton county, and he came out Monday afternoon and held an inquest, the verdict being in accordance with the above facts. Binder has four sons and two daughters in Louisville, and they were telephoned to but no response could be gotten from them. They had been separated from him for many years and did not manifest much interest in their father's death.

WILLIAM THORNTON SNYDER.

William Thornton Snyder, son of William and Sarah Jenkins Snyder, was born in Albermarle county, Virginia, April 16, 1830, and died at 2:30 a. m., July 20th, 1909, aged 79 years 3 months and 4 days.

He came with his parents from Virginia to Petersburg, this county when about three years of age, and resided in Boone county the remainder of his life. He was twice married. His first wife was Permelia Chambers, daughter of Alfred and Amanda Chambers, who lived only a few months. He was married to Susan Frances Whitaker, daughter of William and Judith Lacy Whitaker, June 17, 1858, having been married 51 years, 1 month and 3 days at the time of his death. To this union six children were born, William, who died in infancy, Mary Snyder Riggs, wife of David Riggs, who died May 3, 1888. His wife and four children survive him, Allie L., H. W., J. E. and T. R.

He united with the Christian church at Petersburg, in April, 1873, during a meeting conducted by W. S. Keene and John F. Rowe, the latter being an old schoolmate of the deceased while at Bethany college, Virginia. He remained a faithful member of this church until his death.

William Snyder, father of the deceased owned and operated the distillery at Petersburg for many years previous to the civil war, and his son who assisted him in its operation learned the business thoroughly, and was appointed to the revenue service by President Cleveland and was in the service so long as his health would permit him to work. He was an excellent bookkeeper, and it was to that department that he devoted the most of his time.

William Thornton Snyder was a gentleman under any and all circumstances and had a smile for all at all times, the characteristics of the Virginia gentleman cropping out on every occasion. To know him was to admire him, and to appreciate his sterling qualities a short association with him only was necessary.—In his death not only his family but the entire community of which he had so long been a valuable member is bereaved, and his loss as a neighbor and a citizen is deplored.

So many people have been imposed on by traveling nurserymen that the public looks upon them with suspicion until their title to confidence and reliability is established. Recently Henry C. Diers, of Walton, who represents The Farmers' Nursery Co., of Troy, Ohio, was canvassing Henry county, where many of the farmers had been "taken in" by glib nursery agents, but they were so impressed with the fair representations of Mr. Diers that they had one of the citizens make an inquiry about the nursery firm Mr. Diers represents, the letter being as follows:

EMINENCE, KY., July 6, 1909.

A. C. Sparks, Cashier Commercial and Savings Bank, Troy, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—Please give me the standing of The Farmers Nursery Company of Troy, Ohio, and you will oblige. They have a representative at this place for the present, a Mr. H. C. Diers, of Walton, Ky.

Respectfully,
Jas. H. Patterson.

An immediate answer was received as follows: Replying to your inquiry regarding The Farmers' Nursery Company, of Troy, Ohio, will say its reputation is second to none. Worth $250,000. First class rating.

Respectfully,
A. C. Sparks, Cashier.

The farmers of Henry county being assured of their getting what they would order patronized Mr. Diers most liberally and he booked a splendid lot of big orders.

Mr. Diers is canvassing a part of Boone county at present and he may not see all, but those who wish to purchase reliable nursery stock will please write him at Walton, Ky., and he will call on you, or state what you desire and he will make the selection with a view to your best interests. This nursery has 1400 acres in cultivation and was established in 1854.

NOTICE—All persons indebted to us are requested to call at once and settle, as our business must be closed up at once, or we will proceed to enforce by law the payment of outstanding accounts.

A CARD—A very great injustice has been done me and my business by some person or persons, through malice, undertaking to create the belief here and elsewhere that I am operating a "Blind Tiger," which I emphatically deny, and brand the report as a lie, and without foundation. I am one that is just as much opposed to anything of the kind as any one and would help prosecute anyone operating a liquor den in this town. Some person or persons here sent in a list of names to be summoned before the grand jury, but failed to sign his or her name to the list. Several persons were called before the grand jury and was dumb founded when asked the question whether or not A. C. Roberts was running a "Blind Tiger," at Verona. The answer was "most assuredly no." The people here know me and I think I command the confidence and respect of the entire community. I state here that any person or persons accusing me of operating a liquor den, if found out, will have to prove it. I sell refreshments in the way of coca cola and pops.

A. C. ROBERTS.

MT. VERNON, ILL.

To the Recorder:

Mt. Vernon, the county seat of Jefferson county, Ill., is a thriving little city of about 11,000 population, with four railroads, the Chicago & Eastern Ill., Southern, Louisville & Nashville and Wabash and Western.

We have here a car manufacturing Company, two preserving plants, ice plants and all business that would be found in a place of this size anywhere, and now after a great effort the city has succeeded in securing a site for a steel car plant, which will be built this fall. Other cities offered the company inducements to come to them, but the president of the company said he would give this place the preference if the city would buy the land necessary for building purposes. This the city did at a cost of $22,000. To raise this money the city bought a 216 acre farm just outside for $22,000. This was divided into 720 lots 50x150 and sold for $150 each, leaving enough for a park and factory sites. The estimated cost of erection and equipment of the new plant is $500,000. Main building 175x880 feet with smaller buildings and yards all covering about 30 acres, capacity 25 cars per day, giving employment to about 1,500 men. A franchise has been granted for the construction of an electric railway over the city.

The RECORDER reaches me about 1 p. m., Thursday. It is like seeing a friend from the old home. If any of my friends ever drift into this section they are invited to call on me.

Respectfully,
LESLIE GOODRIDGE.

Prof. H. C. Wayman, of Walton, will preach for the Baptist church congregation next Sunday at 10a. m. and 7:30 p. m. All are invited to attend the services.

Lost—Breast pin on road between Big Bone and Beaver. Finder will please return to Mrs. F. M. Howlett, Union, Ky., R. F. D. 1.

CHAPTER I.

Wave-Tossed and Castaway.

THE beginning was at Cape Town, when Blake and Winthrope boarded the steamer as fellow passengers with Lady Bayrose and her party.

This was a week after Winthrope had arrived on the tramp steamer from India, and her ladyship had explained to Miss Leslie that it was as well for her not to be too hasty in accepting his attentions. To be sure, he was an Englishman, his dress and manners were irreproachable, and he was in the prime of ripened youth. Yet Lady Bayrose was too conscientious a chaperon to be fully satisfied with her countryman's bare assertion that he was engaged on a diplomatic mission requiring reticence regarding his identity. She did not see why this should prevent him from confiding in her.

Notwithstanding this, Winthrope came aboard ship virtually as a member of her ladyship's party. He was so quick, so thoughtful of her comfort, and paid so much more attention to her than to Miss Leslie, that her ladyship had decided to tolerate him, even before Blake became a factor in the situation.

From the moment he crossed the gangway the American engineer entered upon a daily routine of drinking and gambling, varied only by attempts to strike up an off-hand acquaintance with Miss Leslie. This was Winthrope's opportunity, and his clever frustration of what Lady Bayrose termed "that low bounder's impudence" served to install him in the good graces of her ladyship as well as in the favor of the American heiress.

Such, at least, was what Winthrope intimated to the persistent engineer with a superciliousness of tone and manner that would have stung even a British lackey to resentment. To Blake it was supremely galling. He could not rejoin in kind, and the slightest attempt at physical retort would have meant irons and confinement. It was a British ship. Behind Winthrope was Lady Bayrose; behind her ladyship, as a matter of course, was all the despotic authority of the captain. In the circumstances, it was not surprising that the American drank heavier after each successive goading.

Meantime the ship, having touched at Port Natal, steamed on up the east coast, into the Mozambique channel.

On the day of the cyclone, Blake had withdrawn into his stateroom with a number of bottles, and throughout that fearful afternoon was blissfully unconscious of the danger. Even when the steamer went on the reef, he was only partially roused by the shock.

He took a long pull from a quart flask of whisky, placed the flask with great care in his hip pocket, and lurched out through the open doorway. There he reeled headlong against the mate, who had rushed below with three of the crew to bring up Miss Leslie. The mate cursed him virulently, and in the same breath ordered two of the men to fetch him up on deck.

The sea was breaking over the steamer in torrents; but between waves Blake was dragged across to the side and flung over into the bottom of the one remaining boat. He served as a cushion to break the fall of Miss Leslie, who was tossed in after him. At the same time, Winthrope, frantic with fear, scrambled into the bows and cut loose. One of the sailors leaped, but fell short and went down within arm's length of Miss Leslie.

She and Winthrope saw the steamer slip from the reef and sink back into deep water, carrying down in the vortex the mate and the few remaining sailors. After that all was chaos to them. They were driven ashore before the terrific gusts of the cyclone, blinded by the stinging spoondrift to all else but the hell of breakers and coral reefs in whose midst they swirled so dizzily. And through it all Blake lay huddled on the bottom boards gurgling blithely of spicy zephyrs and swaying hammocks.

There came the seemingly final moment when the boat went spinning stern over prow.

Half-sobered, Blake opened his eyes and stared solemnly about him. He was given little time to take his bearings. A smother of broken surf came seething up from one of the great breakers, to roll him over and scrape him a little farther up the muddy shore. There the flood deposited him for a moment, until it could gather force to sweep back and drag him down again toward the roaring sea that had cast him up.

Blake objected—not to the danger of being drowned, but to interference with his repose. He had reached the substrate stage. He grunted a protest. Again the flood seethed up the shore, and rolled him away from the danger. This was too much! He sat his jaw, turned over, and staggered to his feet. Instantly one of the terrific wind-blasts struck his broad back and sent him spinning for yards. He brought up in a shallow pool, beside a hummock.

Under the lee of the knoll lay Winthrope and Miss Leslie. Though conscious, both were draggled and bruised and beaten to exhaustion. They were together because they had come ashore together. When the boat capsized, Miss Leslie had been flung against the Englishman, and they had held fast to each other with the desperate clutch of drowning persons. Neither of them ever recalled how they gained the shelter of the hummock.

Blake, sitting waist-deep in the pool, blinked at them benignly with his pale blue eyes, and produced the quart flask, still a third full of whisky.

"I shay, fren's," he observed, "ha' one on me. Won' cos' you shent—notta re' shent!"

"You fuddled lout!" shouted Winthrope. "Come out of that pool."

"Wassama'er pool? Pool's allri'!"

The Englishman squinted through the driving scud at the intoxicated man with an anxious frown. In all probability he felt no commiseration for the American; but it was no light matter to be flung up barehanded on the most unhealthful and savage stretch of the Mozambique coast, and Blake might be able to help them out of their predicament. To leave him in the pool was therefore not to be thought of. So soon as he had drained his bottle, he would lie down, and that would be the end of him. As any attempt to move him forcibly was out of the question, the situation demanded that Winthrope justify his intimations of diplomatic training. After considering the problem for several minutes, he met it in a way that proved he was at least not lacking in shrewdness and tact.

"See here, Blake," he called, in another lull between the shrieking gusts, "the lady is fatigued. You're too much of a gentleman to ask her to come over there."

It required some moments for this to penetrate Blake's fuddled brain. After a futile attempt to gain his feet, he crawled out of the pool on all fours, and, with tears in his eyes, pressed his flask upon Miss Leslie. She shrank away from him, shuddering, and drew herself up in a huddle of flaccid limbs and limp garments. Winthrope, however, not only accepted the flask, but come near to draining it.

Blake squinted at the diminished contents, hesitated, and cast a glance of maudlin gallantry at Miss Leslie. She lay coiled, closer than before, in a draggled heap. Her posture suggested sleep. Blake stared at her, the flask extended waveringly before him. Then he brought it to his lips, and drained out the last drop.

"Time turn in," he mumbled, and sprawled full length in the brackish ooze. Immediately he fell into a drunken stupor.

Winthrope, invigorated by the liquor, rose to his knees, and peered around. It was impossible to face the sand and spoondrift from the furious sea; but to leeward he caught a glimpse of a marsh flooded with salt water, its ready vegetation beaten flat by the storm. He himself was beaten down by a terrific gust. Panting and trembling, he waited for the wind to lull, in hope that he might obtain a clearer view of his surroundings. Before he again dared rise to his feet, darkness swept down with tropical suddenness and blurred out everything.

The effect of the whisky soon passed, and Winthrope huddled between his companions, drenched and exhausted. Though he could hear Miss Leslie moaning, he was too miserable himself to inquire whether he could do anything for her.

Presently he became aware that the wind was falling. The center of the cyclone had passed before the ship struck, and they were now in the outermost circle of the vast whirlwind. With the consciousness of this change for the better, Winthrope's fear-racked nerves relaxed and he fell into a heavy sleep.

CHAPTER II.

Worse Than Wilderness.

A WAIL from Miss Leslie roused the Englishman out of a dream in which he had been swimming for life across a sea of boiling oil. He sat up and gazed about him, half-dazed. The cyclone had been followed by a dead calm, and the sun, already well above the horizon, was blazing upon them over the glassy surfaces of the dying swells with fierce heat.

Winthrope felt about for his hat. It had been blown off when, at the striking of the steamer, he had rushed up on deck. As he remembered, he straightened, and looked at his companions. Blake lay snoring where he had first outstretched himself, sleeping the sleep of the just—and of the drunkard. The girl, however, was already awake. She sat with her hands clasped in her lap, while the tears rolled slowly down her cheeks.

"My—ah—dear Miss Genevieve, what is the matter?" exclaimed Winthrope.

"Matter? Do you ask, when we are here on this wretched coast, and may not get away for weeks? Oh, I did so count on the London season this year! Lady Bayrose promised that I should be among those presented."

"Well, I—ah—fancy, Lady Bayrose will do no more presenting—unless it may be to the heavenly choir, you know."

"Why, what do you mean, Mr. Winthrope? You told me that she and the maids had been put in the largest boat—"

"My dear Miss Genevieve, you must remember that I am a diplomat. It was all quite sufficiently harrowing, I assure you. They were, indeed, put into the largest boat. Beastly mudooze. Immediately he fell into a drunken stupor.

"Well, I—ah—fancy, Lady Bayrose will do no more presenting—unless it may be to the heavenly choir, you know."

"Why, what do you mean, Mr. Winthrope? You told me that she and the maids had been put in the largest boat—"

"My dear Miss Genevieve, you must remember that I am a diplomat. It was all quite sufficiently harrowing, I assure you. They were, indeed, put into the largest boat. Beastly mud-ooze. While they waited for the mate to fetch you, the boat was crushed alongside, and all in it drowned."

"Drowned!—drowned! Oh, dear Lady Bayrose! And she'd traveled so much—oh, oh, it is horrible! Why did she persuade me to visit the Cape? It was only to be with her—And then for us to start off for India, when we might have sailed straight to England! Oh, it is horrible! horrible! And my maid, and all—it cannot be possible!"

"Pray, do not excite yourself, my dear Miss Genevieve. Their troubles are all over. Er—Gawd has taken them to Him, you know."

"But the pity of it! To be drowned—so far from home!"

"Ah, if that's all you're worrying about!—I must say I'd like to know how we'll get a snack for breakfast. I'm hungry as a—or—groom."

"Eating! How can you think of eating, Mr. Winthrope—and all the others drowned? This sun is becoming dreadfully hot. It is unbearable! Can you not put up some kind of an awning?"

"Well, now, I must say, I was never much of a hand at such things, and really I can't imagine what one could rig up. There might have been a bit of sail in the boat, but one can't see a sign of it. I fancy it was smashed."

Miss Leslie ventured a glance at Blake. Though still lying as he had sprawled in his drunkenness, there was a comforting suggestion of power in his broad shoulders and square jaw.

"Is he still—in that condition?"

"Must have slept it off by this time, and there's no more in the flask," answered Winthrope. Reaching over with his foot, he pushed against Blake's back.

"Huh! All right," grunted the sleeper, and sat up, as had Winthrope, half dazed. Then he stared around him, and rose to his feet. "Well, what in hell! Say, this is damn cheerful!"

"I fancy we are in a nasty fix. But I say, my man, there is a woman present, and your language, you know—"

Blake turned and fixed the Englishman with a cold stare.

"Look here, you bloomin' lud," he said, "there's just one thing you're going to understand, right here and now. I'm not your man, and we're not going to have any of that kind of blatter. Any fool can see we're in a tight hole, and we're like to keep company for a while—probably long as we last."

"What—ah—may I ask, do you mean by that?"

Blake laughed harshly, and pointed from the reef-strewn sea to the vast stretches of desolate marsh. Far inland, across miles of brackish lagoons and reedy mud-flats, could be seen groups of scrubby, half-leafless trees; ten or twelve miles to the southward a rocky headland jutted out into the water; otherwise there was nothing in sight but sea and swamp. If it could not properly be termed a sea-view, it was at least a very wet landscape.

"Fine prospect," remarked Blake, dryly. "We'll be in luck if the fever don't get the last of us inside a month; and as for you two, you'd have as much show of lasting a month as a toad with a rattlesnake, if it wasn't for Tom Blake—that's my name—Tom Blake—and as long as this shindy lasts, you're welcome to call me Tom or Blake, whichever suits. But understand, we're not going to have any more of your bloody, bloomin' English condescension. Aboard ship you had the drop on me, and could pile on dog till the cows came home. Here I'm Blake and you're Winthrope."

"Believe me, Mr. Blake, I quite appreciate the—ah—situation. And now, I fancy that, instead of wasting time—"

"It's about time you introduced me to the lady," interrupted Blake, and he stared at them half defiantly, yet with a twinkle in his eyes.

Miss Leslie flushed. Winthrope swore softly, and bit his lip. Aboard ship, backed by Lady Bayrose and the captain, he had goaded the American at pleasure. Now, however, the situation was reversed. Both title and authority had been swept away by the storm, and he was left to shift for himself against the man who had every reason to hate him for his overbearing insolence. Worse still, both he and Miss Leslie were now dependent upon the American, in all probability for life itself. It was a bitter pill and hard to swallow.

Blake was not slow to observe the Englishman's hesitancy. He grinned.

"Every dog has his day, and I guess this is mine," he said. "Take your time, if it comes hard. I can imagine it's a pretty stiff dose for your judship. But why in—why in frozen hades an American lady should object to an introduction to a countryman who's going to do his level best to save her pretty little self from the hyenas—well, it beats me."

Winthrope flushed redder than the girl.

"Miss Leslie, Mr. Blake," he murmured, hoping to put an end to the situation.

But yet Blake persisted. He bowed, openly exultant.

"You see, miss," he said, "I know the correct thing quite as much as your swells. I knew all along you were Jenny Leslie. I ran a survey for your dear papa when he was manipulating the Q. T. railroad, and he did me out of my pay."

And Ma Fainted.

"Why did she refuse you?" she asked her son, with fine scorn.

"Well," the boy replied between his sobs, "she objects to our family. She says pa's a loafer, that you're too fat and that everybody laughs at Dayse Mayme because she's a fool and talks about nothing but the greatness of her family." IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA.

Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Bleeding, Torturing Humor—Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.

In Despair; Cured by Cuticura.

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings.

"In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. I wish I could tell everybody who has eczema to use Cuticura. Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J., Sept. 28, 1908."

Severe.

Samuel Gompers was talking in the smokeroom of the Baltic about a recent newspaper attack on a rich corporation.

"It was a cruel attack," Mr. Gompers chuckled. "It was as cruel as the Jonesville Clarion's paragraph about old Deacon Hiram Ludlow.

"This paragraph header the Clarion's obituary column. It said:

"'Deacon Hiram Ludlow of Frisbie township, aged 83, passed peacefully away on Thursday last from single blessedness to matrimonial bliss after a short but severe attack by Maria Higgins, a blooming widow of 37 summers.'"—Detroit Journal.

A Realist.

"I am a great believer in realism," remarked the poet.

"Yes?" we queried with a rising inflection, thereby giving him the desired opening.

"I sometimes carry my ideas of realism to a ridiculous extreme," continued the poet.

"Indeed!" we exclaimed inanely, somewhat impatient to reach the point of his witticism.

"Yes," continued the poet, "the other day I wrote a sonnet to the gas company and purposely made the meter defective."

At this point we fainted.

A Word of Hope for Despairing Ones.

Kidney trouble makes weak, weary, worn women. Backache, hip pains, dizziness, headaches, nervousness, languor, urinary troubles make women suffer untold misery. Ailing kidneys are the cause. Cure them. Mrs. S. D. Ellison, N. Broadway, Lamar, Mo., says: "Kidney trouble wore me down till I had to take to bed. I had terrible pains in my body and limbs and the urine was annoying and full of sediment. I got worse and doctors failed to help. I was discouraged. TROUBLE IN ROYAL PALACE.

Tidings Borne by Amateur Actor Sufficient to Lead Hearers to Expect the Worst.

The Shakespeare club of New Orleans used to give amateur theatrical performances that were distinguished for the local prominence of the actors. Once a social celebrity, with a gorgeous costume, as one of the lords in waiting had only four words to say: "The queen has swooned." As he stepped forward his friends applauded vociferously. Bowing his thanks, he faced the king and said, in a high-pitched voice: "The swoon has queened."

There was a roar of laughter; but he waited patiently, and made another attempt:

"The sween has cooned."

Again the walls trembled and the stage manager said in a voice which could be heard all over the house: "Come off, you doggoned fool."

But the ambitious amateur refused to surrender, and in a rasping falsetto, as he was assisted off the stage, he screamed: "The coon has sweened."—Success Magazine.

Aid Fight Against Tuberculosis.

At the recent meeting of the National Association of Bill Posters, held in Atlanta, Ga., it was decided to donate to the campaign against tuberculosis $1,200,000 worth of publicity. The bill posters in all parts of the United States and Canada will fill the vacant spaces on their 3,500 bill boards with large posters illustrating the ways to prevent and cure consumption. The Poster Printers' association has also granted $200,000 worth of printing and paper for this work. This entire campaign of billboard publicity will be conducted under the direction of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in co-operation with the National Bill Posters' association.

The Newer Way.

Many ideas in regard to women have entirely changed, and among the better and wiser changes is that old thought that the women who were given to good works must needs be dowdy. It is undeniable that "good" women used to wear dowdiness as a sort of hall mark of virtue. As a matter of fact, dowdiness is merely a mark of bad taste and a sign of some lack in the mind. Women are no longer lacking in the wisdom that chooses pretty rather than ugly clothing, and those who do not make the best of their appearance are losing a golden opportunity of giving pleasure.

The general consulted the topographical chart. "You understand, colonel," he said, "that this charge on the enemy's fortification necessitates the most reckless disregard for human life?" "I understand, general," the colonel replied. "The forlorn hope that leads the movement will be composed exclusively of amateur chauffeurs."

Companion of Irritated Divines Came to the Front with Order to the Waiter.

Joaquin Miller is to establish a colony of poets in Fruitvale, Cal. Mr. Miller, discussing this colony recently, said:

"We poets will, of course, argue and squabble. That will be delightful. Arguments and squabbles over Matthew Arnold, Swinburne, Tennyson and Keats are pleasant and sensible things, you know. They are not like political or religious arguments, which in their bitter rancor always make me think of three Maine divines.

"While three Maine divines were supping together, two of them began to argue about the comparative religious merit of the royal houses of Stuart and Orange. The argument became heated. The divines grew excited and angry.

"'William III. was a great rascal,' roared the first, as he struck the table with his fist. 'A great rascal, and I spit upon his memory!'

"The second divine, turning very red, shouted:

"'No, it's James II. that was the rascal. I spit upon his memory!'

At this point the third divine rang the bell, and said gently to the waiter:

"'Spittoons for two, please.'"

Feiraidhach-Fionfashtna was an Irish king, a "most just and good prince," who was slain by his successor, Fiachadh-Fion, who was treated to a similar fate by Finchadh-Fionohuhh, "the prince with the white cows," who died at the hands of "the Irish plebeians of Connaught." BAD DREAMS
Caused by Coffee.

"I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare.

"Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and were drinking Postum, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum and had it made strictly according to directions.

"I was astonished at the flavour and taste. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could wean every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug—ordinary coffee.

"People really do not appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. If they did, hardly a pound of it would be sold. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned.

"A young lady friend of ours had stomach trouble for a long time, and could not get well as long as she used coffee. She finally quit coffee and began the use of Postum and is now perfectly well. Yours for health."

THE RECKONING DAY

The Sins of Manasses Overtake Him

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

[Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. G. Eaton.]

Scriptural Authority.—2 Chron., chapter 33 and Apocryphal Book of Manasses' Prayer.

Manasseh.—Or Manasses, as the name is given in the prayer of Manasses which constitutes the twelfth book of the Apocrypha, was noted in Jewish history not only as having the longest reign of any monarch of the line of David, but also as the most wicked, and although we have the record of his repentance and restoration by God to Jerusalem, he was not buried in the sepulchers of the kings but like Ahaz was buried in the garden of Uzza and his name held in abhorrence because of the blackness of his deeds, among the recorded sins being the awful wickedness of giving his sons as an offering to the fire god Moloch. The record of his life is found in the 33rd chapter of Second Chronicles and in 2 Kings. Idolatrous worship and practices were encouraged. The fires were rekindled in the valley of Ben-Hinnom. The Baal and Ashtaroth ritual, which had been imported under Solomon from the Phoenicians, was revived with fresh splendor. All this was accompanied by the extremest moral degradation. Every faith was tolerated but the old faith of Israel.

SERMONETTE.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The story of Manasses' sins, his severe punishment and his ultimate repentance and restoration to Jerusalem is but a repetition of the history of the Jewish nation. Sin, punishment, repentance, forgiveness.

The rehearsal in Psalm 106 of the successive sins of the children points not only the lesson of the frailty of the human frame, but the long suffering mercy of God.

"They made a calf in Horeb, and worshiped the molten image.

"Thus they changed their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

"They forgot God, their Saviour, which had done great things in Egypt.

"Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red sea.

"Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses, his chosen, stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

"Yea, they despised the pleasant land, they believed not his word:

"But murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord.

"Therefore he lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

"To overthrow their seed also among the nations, and to scatter them in the lands.

"They joined themselves also unto Baal-poor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.

"Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the plague brake in upon them.

"They did not destroy the nations, concerning whom the Lord commanded them:

"But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.

"And they served their idols; which were a snare unto them.

"Yea, they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils,

"And shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan, and the land was polluted with blood.

"Therefore was the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people, insomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance.

"And he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and they that hated them ruled over them. Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand."

So it was with Manasses. So is it ever. As a man soweth, so he reaps.

THE STORY.

The strong army of the Assyrian king had invested the city of Jerusalem and assault after assault had weakened the defense until it needed but one more determined attack to force the wall and take possession of the city.

And the king?

Alone!

Not even did the priestly attendants of the gods he had so zealously served stay to encourage or direct him in his sore straits.

Whither should he turn? Even now from his palace windows he could hear the fierce cries of the investing army as they drew in closer and closer about the walls and prepared to concentrate their efforts against the one weak point.

In desperation the king rushed from one end of the palace to the other, seeking first for some one to whom he could look for guidance and help, and then finding no one, searching each nook and corner for a likely hiding place.

"No, no!" impatiently he cried, after trying a half dozen places, "this will never do. I will surely perish if I tarry here. But whither shall I go?" and wringing his hands as he paced to and fro he gave place to his despair.

"Nay, I cannot go forth in these robes," he exclaimed as his glance chanced to be directed downward and he became conscious of the royal robes he was wearing. Suiting the action to the words he began to strip himself of his garments, and as he flung aside one article after another he moved off towards the servants' quarters.

There had been hasty flight from that place also, and the king found garments scattered here and there. Divesting himself of his jeweled sandals he slipped his feet into a pair he found there, and then quickly selecting various articles of apparel he soon had adjusted them and, thus disguised, he slipped from the rear entrance to the palace and hurried silently down the now almost deserted street.

Jerusalem was all in a tremble over its impending doom, and the people had fled here and there, hiding themselves as best they could.

"If I can but reach the opposite side of the city and get beyond the wall, I shall be able to make good my escape," he thought.

Behind him came the crash and thunder of the falling walls of the city, the shouts of the invading army, and the hurrying footfalls of the thousands as they advanced. The palace was the center towards which the soldiers rushed, both for the purpose of loot and because there was the hope that the king might be taken.

Hither and thither through the palace the search was kept up, but when the captain of the host had come, only disappointed looks and doubtful shakes of the head greeted him.

"What is this, and this, and this?" he exclaimed, as he passed through the various apartments, and indicating as he spoke the various garments which the king had cast aside.

"The king's robes!" they exclaimed, quick to catch the drift of the captain's thought.

"Yea, and here are his sandals, the last to be discarded," he added, after the long search had ended.

"Think you that he hath gone?"

"In the garb of a servant he has fled," tersely exclaimed the captain, and turning hastily to some of his attendants he gave orders that searchers should go in every direction in pursuit of him.

"He must not escape us, for it was the explicit orders of our great king Sennacherib that he be taken alive and brought to Babylon, not only as a trophy of war, but also as an example to those of his nation who would dare to defy the authority of our king."

So it came to pass that shortly after the fleeing king had slipped through one of the gates of the city his pursuers had taken up the chase and were scouring every nook and corner of the city, while other soldiers went out beyond the wall.

"What is the use of going further," exclaimed one soldier, impatiently, after a long, fruitless search. "No one could ever have gone in thither, much less passed through this great hedge of thorns." And, turning away as he finished speaking, he proceeded to retrace his steps followed by the others.

But one keen-eyed individual, unwilling to abandon the spot, pushed a little way into the thicket.

"What is that?" he suddenly exclaimed, as he caught the tinge of red upon the tip of one of the thorns. "Blood," he added, half to himself, in answer to his own question, and reaching forward he plucked the thorn and examined it more closely.

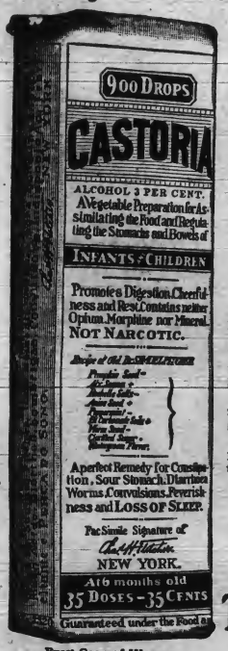
"It cannot have just been left there by one of our men, for it is quite dry and set," he exclaimed, as he rubbed his fingers over the red-tinged thorn.

Thus roused he whistled for the return of some of his comrades, and soon the group was pressing here and there into the thicket as far as was possible.

A shout, a struggle and then the soldier who had persisted in the search was seen to drag forth a hapless individual. His face was scratched by the thorns and his simple servant's garb was torn and disheveled.

"Whom seek you?" questioned the king, making a desperate effort to appear calm.

"The king," came the instant response, "and we have found him."



The Melody of Life.

The desire of happiness, beyond all doubt, is a natural desire. It is the law of life itself that every being seeks and strives toward the perfection of its kind, the realization of its own specific ideal in form and function, and a true harmony with its environment. Every drop of sap in the tree flows toward foliage and fruit. Every drop of blood in the bird beats toward flight and song. In a conscious being this movement toward perfection must take a conscious form. This conscious form is happiness—the satisfaction of the vital impulse, the rhythm of the inward life, the melody of a heart that has found its keynote. To say that all men long for this is simply to confess that all men are human, and that their thoughts and feelings are an essential part of their life. Virtue means a completed manhood. The joyful welfare of the soul belongs to this fullness of that ideal. Holiness is wholesome. In striving to realise the true aim of our being, we find the wish for happiness implanted in the very heart of our effort.—Henry van Dyke, D. D.

What is Castoria.

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. F. Gerald Blattner, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Your Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, always obtaining the desired results."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildsen, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

After song service and devotional exercise, Wednesday morning, Writing was introduced by Arrelda Roberts, who discussed position, movement and use of blackboard. She was followed by Prof. Eubank in the discussion of materials and copy books. He said the teaching of the principle can not be begun too soon. He favors the slant system.

The afternoon session began with song service. In the absence of Mrs. F. H. Rouse, Prof. Eubank discussed Arithmetic, saying pupils should be taught to be accurate and thorough, and should have a ready knowledge of reading, writing and combining numbers, especially of accounts and all business forms; that by constant drilling accuracy and rapidity will be attained.

After recess Miss Craig continued the discussion of Arithmetic. In common and decimal fractions, especially in percentage, she is governed by the reading of the problem, and where the percent is an aliquot part of 100, she uses the common fraction. She was followed by the instructor, advocating the teaching of mental arithmetic, saying that from it not only knowledge but culture can be gained.

THURSDAY.

Following a song Rev. Brooks conducted devotional exercises. Rev. Edgar Riley discussed History, favoring the teaching of cause and effect rather than devoting time to dates and minor affairs. Prof. Jolly, of Bedford High-School, followed with a very practical talk on the subject, eliciting hearty applaus.

After recess Prof. Eubank closed the discussion, taking the ground It is impossible to teach History without connecting the dates.

Afternoon Prof. Wayman discussed Geography at length, and was followed by Prof. Eubank, who recommended in map-drawing the use of the scale of miles given in the book, thereby preventing tracing. Profs. Jolly, Yealey, Kyle and others took part in the discussion.

Immediately before recess County Superintendent D. M. Snyder was presented by the teachers with four two and one-half dollar gold coins in token of their appreciation of the efficient, faithful and impartial manner in which he has discharged his official duties, from which he will retire at the close of this year. The presentation speech by Rev. Brooks was a happy effort. In accepting the token Mr. Snyder showed by his emotion that he was deeply impressed. He said it was not the value of the gift but the appreciation the teachers had of his labors in their behalf, that made him prize it so highly; that he had devoted all his time since 1870 to school work, and that he feels like continuing.

After recess Miss Lillie Partridge, of the Eastern Kentucky State Normal School, discussed reading in a highly interesting and instructive manner, giving the teachers present numerous valuable pointers.

FRIDAY.

At the morning session Pro. Jolly gave an interesting talk on actual experiences while teaching, how he met conditions, etc. Miss. Partridge followed with a talk, advocating the teaching of children to work for an ideal; she advised teachers to form Junior Leagues, from which much better discipline will result, and they will be the means of getting pupils interested in keeping the school building tidy and cheerful and the yard beautiful.

Prof. Smith, of the Normal School at Richmond, gave a talk on Nature Study. He thinks all teachers should devote part of their time to this, and said once began the pupils will keep it up.

Prof. Eubank discussed Civil Government, saying, among other things "the school should be the laboratory in which the child, guided, systematically, by the teacher should be taught what to do, how to act, what is right and what is wrong, not in the abstract but in the concrete, and the practical duties in his social relations with his fellow pupils.

In the afternoon Mr. W. C. Stott, of Petersburg, was introduced, and among other things he said was that he thought that the teachers of today are introducing too many new ideas, and are not teaching the common subjects, especially Mental Arithmetic.

At the conclusion of Mr. Stott's address, Miss Partridge concluded her talk on the School Improvement League, telling the teachers what it is and how organized.

The following report of committee on district meetings was adopted:

District No 1, at Verona, Saturday, October 2.—Ada Roberts, vice president.

District No. 2, at , Saturday, October 16.—Sadie Crisler, vice president.

District No. 4, at Constance, Saturday, November 6.—A. M. Yealey, vice president.

District No. 5, at Burlington, Saturday, November 20.—Paris Akin, vice president

The following resolutions were adopted:

1st. That a vote of thanks be extended the good people of Burlington for their kindness extended to the teachers during the Institute.

2d. That thanks be extended to the congregation of the Universalist church for the use of their house of worship.

3d. That a vote of thanks be extended to Prof. Rhoton, of Georgetown College; to Prof. Smith and Miss Lola Partridge, of the E. K. S. N. S., and to Prof. Jolly, of Bedford, Ky., for their interesting talks.

4th.—That the well wishes of this body be extended to Prof. Eubank for the able manner in which he has conducted the Institute, and to Supt. Snyder for his faithful services the past eight years.

The Institute adjourned sine die.

$3,200 Profit in One Year.

We know where there is a section of land (640 acres) every foot level, and can be cultivated, with rich loam 2 to 6 feet deep, will raise an average of 40 bushels of corn, 30 bushels of wheat, 40 bushels of oats, 50 bushels of kaffir corn, four crops of alfalfa; no tiling, can be plowed 12 months in the year, no rocks, no stumps, no gulleys, no hills; taxes 22c on the $100, selling at one-fourth its worth; roads always good; catarrh, asthma and consumption yield to the pure, dry air, such is the Pan-Handle of Texas. These are facts—get that fixed in your mind—solid facts. A tract of land is being sold in a healthier country than this, cheaper country to live in, where the crops bring more per acre than here, and you ought to own some of it. This land has been increasing in value at the rate of $5 on the acre every year. A section would make you a profit of $3,200, to say nothing about the crop, if you could buy now, while the land is cheap. See us about it, go with us on our next excursion, August the 16th. A. E. Harmie Jones, the popular driver of the Burlington and Erlanger bus, took a vacation, last week, and attended the Carthage, Ohio, fair, which he pronounces a great success.

Atty. F. E. Curley, of Tucson, Arizona, and J. C. Byland, cashier of Richwood Deposit Bank, were callers at this office, last Saturday. Mr. Curley is pleased with his new home where he is prospering.

Grover Jarrell, who, several weeks ago, went to North Dakota, to help save the immense harvest there, arrived at home Monday, singing, "the West is a great country, but Old Kentucky's good 'nough for me."

Dr. L. H. Crisler and family, of Covington, were Saturday night and Sunday guests at W. J. Rice's. The doctor, a few years ago, moved from Burlington to Covington, where he is recognized as the leading veterinary, and has a very large practice.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Malloy, of Cincinnati, were guests at G. T. Gaines', Sunday. They came out in an auto, and that afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Gaines took a spin in the machine with which they were so delighted that the are threatening to purchase one.

The following out of town attorneys attending court: Frank C. Greene, of Carrollton; E. E. Winn, of Warsaw; Jno. S. Gaunt, of Louisville; B. F. Menefee, of Crittenden; J. C. Clore and W. W. Dickerson, of Cincinnati, and J. G. Tomlin and Jno. L. Vest, of Walton.

Henry Adams, who has a good position as stenographer in one of the cabinet offices in Washington, D. C., is spending his vacation here with homefolks. He is a persevering young man who started out in the business world under difficulties, but has made good right along to the delight of his friends. At the start he was willing to accept any work that was honorable, and it did not take him long to work his way up.

S. P. Tilley, of Clear Water, Fla., arrived last Thursday for a few days' visit with his wife's relatives and his old friends here. Mr. Tilley's wife was a daughter of the late Edward Fowler, and a sister of Mrs. J. F. Blyth and Mrs. Martha Hawes. Mr. and Mrs. Tilley have resided in Clear Water, Florida, for several years, and have acquired quite a handsome piece of property there, among their possessions being a very promising orange grove for which a handsome sum has been offered. Instead of the frail, delicate man that he was when he went to Florida, Mr. Tilley is a robust, handsome man. The good health he is enjoying he attributes to the climate of his southern home. Mrs. Tilley looks as though the climate is very much to her liking also. Mr. Tilley is one of the original base ball cranks in this county, and he has lost none of his love for the sport, and while he has gone beyond the playing age he figures prominently in the sport by managing about the best amateur club in Florida. He noticed quite a number of changes in Burlington's buildings since he left, while a great change has been made in the populaton.

Where is Your Hair?

In your comb? Why so? Is not the head a much better place for it? Better keep what is left where it belongs! Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, quickly stops falling hair. There is not a particle of doubt about it. We speak very positively about this, for we know.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

Indeed, the one great leading feature of our new Hair Vigor may well be said to be this—it stops falling hair. Then it goes one step further—it aids nature in restoring the hair and scalp to a healthy condition. Ask for "the new kind."

—Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.—

Judge Cammack in the Circuit Court at Owenton last week passed on some cases which by the ruling show a great deal of good hard sense, which is some times of more value to a community than all the finely spun legal intricacies which sometimes abound in decisions. The cases came up in this way: In Owenton there were five pronounced cases of able bodied men loafing with no visible means of support, and at the same time these men had been importuned by farmers needing help to work for them. However, the fellows wouldn't work. Accordingly they were indicted for vagrancy and the Judge gave them the alternative of either going to work or going to jail. The cure worked like a charm, all of the five hiking out for employment. Another case was the one of a very aged woman arrested for bootlegging booze. She had no money with which to pay the fine, and the Judge sent her to the County Poor Farm. The party protested against going, but the Judge telling her that undoubtedly the world owed her a living, and that the best way for her to collect the debt would be by availing herself of the county's charity, ordered her sent out according to the sentence.—Warsaw Independent.

John Samuel Clore, Waterloo, son of Leonard and Miriam Clore, was born in Carroll county, this State, on August 12th, 1849, and died August 9th, 1909. He married Miss Eugenie Aylor, daughter of Lyntra Aylor, on February 12th, 1874. To them were born two children, one of them, E. E., a son, survives. Mr. Clore lead a quiet, frugal life, and was not a member of any church or order. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Hensley, at Bellevue.

The popular Boone fair will begin at Florence one week from today, and the management is confident that it will be as good as any of the past, with prospects of being better in some respects. This fair is known the country over and has become popular among stockmen because of the good treatment always accorded them, and the promptness with which the premiums are paid. Some of the best horses in the State are brought to the Florence fair every year, and the arrangements are such that they can be exhibited to an advantage, a feature that is appreciated by both the exhibitor and the owner of the stock that is shown.

CANNOT SPLIT OR CURL LIKE WOOD SHINGLES

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

Wouldn't it be a satisfaction to you to have a roof on your property that was absolutely permanent; rather than to lay a slate, or wooden shingle roof, or any of the others which are at best only temporary, and always needing repairs? That is never necessary with

Cortright Metal Shingles

If you lay a Cortright Roof you needn't think of how soon you'll be repairing, or how soon you'll be re-roofing, for Cortright Metal Shingles outlast the building without repairs, always remain watertight, defying wind, snow and lightning.

If you are about to spend your money in roofing, post yourself first about the different forms by reading our book, "Concerning That Roof," and let us show you samples.

W. C. Goodridge was in town, last Saturday, exhibiting his fine Black Badger colt, which he will exhibit at the fairs this and next week, and will make the fellow who beats him, if it can be done, realize that he has been up against a good colt. The colt weighs 527 pounds.

Gov. Willson has asked the National Government not to quarantine Kentucky sheep on account of the scabbies appearing in a number of sections and has called a meeting of the county judges and county attorneys for Sept. 15 to take action regarding the extermination of the disease.

The handsomest and most delicious peaches that have come to Burlington this season were from the orchard of C. L. Renaker, of Dry Ridge, Grant county. Mr. Renaker looks after his trees closely, keeping them well sprayed at the proper time, and, as a result, his fruit is wormless and perfect.

Quails will be Scarce.

Reports are coming in from all over the country that this year's crop of partridges will be the shortest ever known, and that the Nimrods will bag only Mollie Cottontails this fall. The shortage in the quail crop is attributed to the excessive rains in the spring which drowned the young broods.

Reduced Rates.

The C. N. O. T. P. Railroad will make the rate of one fare for the round trip from Cincinnati to Lexington, August 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29th, 1909, on account of the Florence fair. On each of the above dates there will be a special train leaving Ludlow at 9 a. m. Friday and Saturday, August 27 and 28th, there will be a special train leaving Cincinnati at 12 o'clock noon, arriving at Erlanger at 12:25 p. m.

A Narrow Escape.

A horse driven by Albert Conner and Mr. Wiggington, one day last week, was scared by a chicken in the grass on the side of the road at Hubert Beemon's in Limaburg neighborhood, and succeeded in turning the buggy over and throwing the occupants out. Mr. Conner was dragged some distance before he stopped the horse, but was not hurt much. The trip to Erlanger and return was made with the horse, which was closely watched to prevent any further trouble.

Cows Must be Healthy.

The State Board of Health has issued a proclamation requiring that every cow in the State to be subjected to the tuberculin test, ordering the immediate destruction of those which the test showed to be effected with tuberculosis, and providing that hereafter no cattle can be brought into the State until the tuberculin test has shown that they are free from the tuberculosis germs. Experiments conducted by Dr. Cyrus W. Field, bacteriologist and pathologist of the University of Louisville, under the direction of a milk commission appointed by the Jefferson county Fiscal court, resulted in this recommendation, which is intended to protect the health of the consumers of milk who might otherwise be infected with tuberculosis from cattle.

[illegible] Term [illegible]

Judge Cammack tried several suits that had been hanging fire quite a while. He had got tired of those old cases and gave them especial attention.

In the case of O. G. Hughes against A. M. Acra for $1,000 damages for personal injuries a judgment was entered against Mr. Acra for $250. This suit grew out of a fight the parties had several years ago.

In the suit of Mrs. Laura F. Conner against Ed Aylor, resulted in a verdict and judgment of one cent against Aylor. Aylor rented and cultivated a small piece of land of S. H. Goodin that Goodin claimed belonged to his ferry, but which Mrs. Conner claimed came to her through her father the late S. J. Hedges, of Taylorsport. There is a strip of land lying between the town of Taylorsport and the Ohio river that Gen. Taylor did not include in the town when he laid it out, and deeds made afterwards are claimed to be ambiguous as regards this piece of land, hence the litigation the result of which is adversed to Mr. Goodin's claim.

It required $264 to pay the grand and petit jurors for their services.

The attendance during the session was confined to litigants witnesses, jurors and attorneys.

The petit jurors were kept until the last day of court.

Not much old business left on the dockets.

The suit of Albert McDanell vs. J. S. Cullum was dismissed without prejudice.

The grand jury returned only two indictments, one of them being against an autoist who exceeded the speed limit through the town of Hebron.

To J. W. Cammack Judge Boone Circuit Court:

We, your grand jury, would report that we have been in session three days, have examined twenty witnesses and returned two indictments. We have examined the public buildings and find the court house in good condition, the jail is in good condition but the public property near the jail should have a roof of galvanized iron. The poor house is in good condition and well kept. Respectfully,

G. W. RANSLER, Foreman.

The Heat was Terrific.

The heat last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was about all humanity could stand, and great relief resulted from the pleasant breeze that sprang up during the thunder storm about 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. Considerable rain fell in several localities in the county Friday afternoon.

Material for Rubber Necks.

Herbert Kirkpatrick shipped one day last week, 2100 pounds of old rubber that he had collected in small lots in the last year or two. The lower the price of old rubber went the more anxious he was to buy, and when the price began to climb, a few weeks since, he watched it until he thought it had reached the top notch, when he dumped his purchase and made a nice profit on it.

Board of Education in Session.

At its session last Monday the county board of education employed Prof. Dix, of Morehead, Rowan county, to teach the high school at Buslington the ensuing year. It also settled the question as to the location of the school house at Taylorsport, the Taylorsport people retaining the site in their town. During the hearing considerable feeling was manifested on the part of some of the interested patrons. There were three applicants for Burlington High School.

Tobacco Worms are Scarce.

One unusual feature of the tobacco crop this year is the scarcity of tobacco worms. The farmers are at a loss to account for the relief from the pest but some of them believe that because there was no crop raised last year that the tobacco fly became almost extinct and therefore there are no eggs left over to hatch out this year. Usually the tobacco grower has a hard fight for several weeks to keep the tobacco worms from eating up the crop but this year there are many fields that have not a single hole in any leaf, which is regarded as most remarkable. At the same time it is a great help to the growers for it lessens the labor over one half and insures a better grade of tobacco. A crop of tobacco that has many of the leaves with big worm holes on them sells for much less than a crop that has perfect leaves.

Thomas Kirkpatrick Dead.

Thomas Kirkpatrick died at the Lakeland Asylum yesterday afternoon. Only a few days ago it was understood that his condition was better in every way than it had been in years. He leaves besides a widow, four boys and two girls, all of them grown. Two of the boys and one of the girls are married. The remains arrived her last night in charge of undertaker H. G. Blanton.

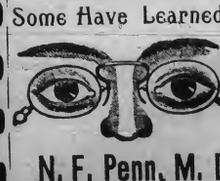
WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a



U. S.

CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

CLOTHES.

Mere man has been consistently and earnestly poking fun at woman because of the vagaries which fashion has imposed upon her. Latterly, this has been more marked, perhaps, than in the olden days when the funny fellows who write paragraphs, figuratively, wore out the hoopskirts and the big balloon sleeves. Of late much merry laughter has been expended over the woman of the patella shape and the peach basket headgear. It is thoroughly convulsing, says the Pittsburg Post. Woman is such a queer sight, togged out to represent an animated mushroom. But what of a man and his attire? Is the laugh to be on one corner of the mouth? Does not the shoe on the other foot pinch a little? These strange shoes of the emerald hue. And what of all the other green things he dons that give him the appearance of a string bean at a little distance, if he chances to be of a lean and hungry build? Consider for a moment the "swell-dresser" who swings up the avenue, his sack coat extending to the region of the patella, two or three buttons the fraction of an inch apart, holding it together, the trousers, turned half way to the knee, as though reaching upward to meet the coat, and themselves bellying like a pair of balloons. Consider the diagonal cut of the pockets and the curious bands and braids about his cuffs. Is he not a sightly figure?

An automobile bill has been passed by the legislature of New York after a wrangle as to which of the departments should have the licensing power, and it is possible that more important provisions may have been overlooked in the contest. The fact that it places the maximum speed limit at 30 miles and retains the present road rules is evidence that it is not likely to improve conditions on the road to any great extent. A speed of 30 miles an hour may be extremely dangerous on some roads where it is impossible to see for any great distance. The railroads find danger at curves that are hidden by foliage, and there are many highway crossings thus obscured.

There are probably few farmers who have closely figured the average cost of marketing any given unit of their crops as a manufacturer figures upon each article he turns out, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. As long as there was nothing to be done but to plow and sow and reap and count up the total result such calculations were not called for. But that easy time is passing. It is the man who makes two blades to grow where one grew before, not two blades upon twice the area of ground, who is on the road to wealth.

A clubwoman in a discussion how to make home happy uttered the now famous dictum, "Feed the brute." A New York magistrate has taken up the challenge and supplemented this dictum with the order to feed the brute well. Here is a field of argument in which the weaker sex signally fails, says the Baltimore American. Eve tempted Adam with a toothsome morsel, and her daughters have suffered the penalty of tempting man through his palate ever since.

Another wealthy English nobleman is reported to have sold a Rembrandt masterpiece for $500,000. Presumably the purchaser will be set down as a rich American, and the vials of British wrath will be opened on his head. But where will come in censure for the British nobleman who wanted the money more than he wanted to keep the picture as a national possession?

International control of the air is to be advocated at the fourth Pan-American conference to be held in Argentina, at which time aeronautics and wireless telegraphy will be discussed. Possibly that is all that is intended, but the casual reader might imagine some trust was getting ready to squeeze the breath out of us.

The divorce of young couples and the romance of octogenarians rub each other by the elbow in the day's news. Cupid is a queer little chap, and there is no accounting for his freaks.

Anti-vivisectionists are now holding a congress in London and trying to convince the world that the life of a dog is of more value than the life of a man.

The remarkable thing about most of these feather-brained people who rush along city streets in automobiles is that they have nothing to rush about.

It would be annoying if a judge's decision should unmarry 3,000 or so couples who were wedded in good faith and prefer to remain wedded.

Japan's government ought to be solid with the people for some time. It has supplied good crop prospects.

THAW WILL APPEAL

MOTHER'S WEALTH WILL BACK SLAYER IN NEW FIGHT FOR LIBERTY.

GOES BACK TO MATTEAWAN

Justice Mills Declares Stanford White's Murderer is Still Insane—Declares Wife's Story False—Believes Prisoner Whipped Girls.

White Plains, N. Y.—Backed by his mother's great wealth, Harry K. Thaw, who was taken back to the Matteawan insane asylum under the decision rendered Thursday by Justice Mills, will soon begin another fight for his liberty, this time in the court of appeals.

Justice Mills in dismissing the habeas corpus declared "the release of the petitioner would be dangerous to the public peace and safety."

There is no crumb of comfort for Thaw in the 7,000-word opinion handed down by Justice Mills. All the contentions of his old adversary, District Attorney Jerome are supported, and it is declared that Thaw is still insane, still suffering from persistent delusions, and still as much a paranoiac as on the day he shot Stanford White.

Thaw, waiting in the White Plains jail, at the rear of the courthouse, where the decision was filed, received the news with an outward calmness which appeared, however, more forced than real.

The members of his family and his attorney seemed stunned by the thoroughness of their defeat. Thaw declined to give out any extended statement, contenting himself with the assertion that he was not disheartened and would at once continue his fight for liberty.

"My next effort," he said, "will be centered upon the court of appeals, through which I expect to secure a hearing before a jury in my effort to have my commitment to Matteawan set aside."

Justice Mills in his opinion reaches these three formal conclusions:

That Thaw was insane when he killed White.

That he has not yet recovered.

That public peace and safety would be endangered by setting him at large.

He upholds District Attorney Jerome's contentions that Thaw still cherishes delusions regarding the practices of Stanford White and his associates.

Justice Mills characterizes Evelyn Thaw's tale of the Madison Square tower room, and similar stories about White told at the sanity hearing, as "wild and grossly improbable, evidently to any normal mind grossly exaggerated."

He asserts his belief in the testimony of Susan Merrill regarding Thaw's alleged whipping of girls, and points out the contrast between Thaw's chivalrous attitude as a protector of young American womanhood, and his private life.

Justice Mills expressed deep sympathy for Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, the prisoner's mother, and her exposition of the "horrors of Matteawan" on the stand evidently prompted his recommendation that Thaw be allowed greater privileges at that institution. At the same time he gently chided Mrs. Thaw for her censure of District Attorney Jerome, of whom he said: "I find no evidence of any heartlessness or undue zeal on his part."

Not the least significant sentence in Justice Mills' decision, in the opinion of lawyers here, is one which declares that Thaw's delusions had become fixed and established before the time of his marriage."

It is pointed out that this sentence may, if desired, prove grounds for proceedings by Mrs. Evelyn Thaw for the annulment of her marriage.

HAS "POSTAL CARDOMANIA"

Cincinnati Man Gives This as Reason for Slapping Wife and Court Releases Him.

Cincinnati.—William Schenck of Elwood place offered a novel excuse for slapping his wife when he faced Judge Hoffman in the police court Wednesday. He claimed that he was a victim of "postal cardomania," and charged his wife with sending them. He presented several cards to the court.

On one was written, "All in and down and out;" another showed a handsome young woman with outstretched arms, yawning. Underneath the picture was printed the words, "I do not care if he never comes back." Another had written on it, "Come in, the water is fine."

The wife claimed that Schenck had slapped and then punched her in the face while he was talking with her Sunday night. He was released.

AMERICA TO WARN JAPAN

UNCLE SAM TO CALL HALT IF CHINA'S DOORS CLOSE.

Crisis Seems to Be Near—European Powers Also Watching Actions of Mikado's Government.

Washington.—The United States will call Japan to task if any attempt is made to close the doors of China to the trade of this country. Such a step has been definitely decided upon and Japan knows it.

The "open door" was insisted upon by the United States ten years ago, when Russia was dominant in China, and when Japan was clamoring for trade. The action of the United States at that time was highly pleasing to Japan, and contributed to the success of the Japanese in expelling Russia, although that was far from the purpose of the Washington government.

Because the United States insisted on the "open door" at that time the Japanese government regarded it as an act of friendship to Tokyi and not a firm and irrevocable stroke of American policy. Now Japan is to learn that the American contention for the "open door" in China was not directed at Russia, but at all powers that attempt to dominate China to the exclusion of United States commerce.

Russia to-day is occupying much the same position that Japan did ten years ago, when Secretary Hay insisted on the "open door."

The Bear is watching Japan's conduct very closely for any breach in Manchuria that would justify protest. Not only Russia is watching Japan's conduct, but so are Germany, France, Holland, Italy and Austria, throughout continental Europe, as well as in the United States, to see whether Japan in any way violates the principles contended for by the powers, and for this reason her actions will be watched closely by them. Should such probability become evident, the time will be ripe for some very pertinent questions directed to the Japanese government as to her motives and intentions.

The government is considering the appointment to this office of Chao-Erh-Hsun, formerly governor of Mukden.

"MISS SANTA CLAUS" SUICIDE

Had Letters to "Kris Kringle" from Children Sent to Her and Sent Gifts.

Philadelphia. — Miss Elizabeth A. Phillips, known widely as "Miss Santa Claus," committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas. She was found in a room at her home with a gas tube in her mouth.

Miss Phillips enjoyed almost a national reputation by reason of her work at Christmas time among the poor children. For weeks prior to Christmas of each year she collected funds which she expended for toys and clothing for the needy and on Christmas eve she visited the homes of the children in a big automobile.

Two years ago, at her request, all the letters written by children and mailed to Santa Claus were delivered to her and the requests of the children, as far as possible, were complied with.

Educator Killed by Train.

Burlington, Vt. — Prof. Wilhelm Bernhardt, of Washington, D. C., a well-known educator and author, was struck and killed by a train on the Rutland railroad here. He was spending the summer here. Prof. Bernhardt was about 60 years of age and for many years was director of German in the Washington high schools.

TIPTON BANK RE-OPENS

Gets $200,000 Cash and Prepares to Resume Business Monday Morning—Markers' Successors Chosen.

Tipton, Ind.—Two hundred thousand dollars were placed upon the counter of the First National bank of this city by a special express messenger Friday preparatory to the re-opening of the institution Monday morning.

The bank has been closed since Noah Marker, assistant cashier, disappeared and since it was learned that the funds were short. The money was the first installment of $600,000 which was in the vault before the bank opened.

The following notice was placed in the bank window:

"Stockholders have put up cash to cover all shortages and bad accounts. Cash is now on hand to pay every depositor in full and any obligations of any kind. The bank expects to open for business Monday morning."

George Shortle, Jr., and John B. Shirk were elected cashier and assistant cashier, respectively.

IRRIGATION MEET CLOSES

National Congress Endorses Both Pinchot and Newell and Elects New Officers.

Spokane, Wash. — With the election of officers, the selection of Pueblo, Col., as the next meeting place, the passage of resolutions commending both the efforts of Pinchot and Newell in the forestry and reclamation bureaus, asking a $10,000,000 irrigation fund from congress and commending the Mississippi deep waterways, the seventh National Irrigation congress has ended.

MAD MAN SEES GOVERNOR

Fugitive Maniac Makes an Unexpected Visit to the Offices of Georgia Executive.

Atlanta, Ga. — R. E. Dunnington, a former inmate of the State Hospital for the Insane, who resisted arrest at Augusta last week by barricading himself in a house and shooting an officer who approached too near his place of refuge, later escaping and fleeing into South Carolina, made an unexpected visit to Gov. Joe Brown at the executive office in the capitol.

Dunnington came to appeal to the governor for protection from what he termed the persecution of his relatives and some people who were, he said, unnecessarily alarmed for fear that he might commit murder.

MILTON, DEL., FLAME-SWEPT

Loss of $150,000 is Sustained in Fierce Blaze—Four Solid Blocks Destroyed.

Dover, Del. — Four blocks of the town of Milton, Del., a lumber and canning center, were entirely destroyed by fire, causing a loss which will exceed $150,000.

At one time more than 150 buildings were on fire, but the arrival of firemen from surrounding towns saved all but 38 buildings from complete destruction.

Bacon May Succeed White.

London.—Former Secretary of State Robert Bacon, who is now in England, maintains strict silence with regard to the report that he is to succeed Henry White as American ambassador to France.

Assassinated at Own Home.

Lexington, Ky.—Mrs. George Eubank was assassinated as she sat on the porch of her home in Lincoln county. Two men who passed in a buggy are believed to have done the shooting.

30 DEAD, 82 INJURED

BY EARTHQUAKE IN CENTRAL JAPAN—WIDE AREA AFFECTED.

SHOCK RAZES 362 BUILDINGS

Thousands of Others Badly Damaged —River Banks Break and Towns Inundated — Mountain Formation Changed.

Tokyo.—Reports received Sunday concerning the earthquake in Central Japan Saturday afternoon show that there were a number of fatalities, and that great damage was done property. The dead at present is said to be 30, though it is feared that the fatalities will be greatly increased when the outlying districts are heard from. The number of persons injured is 82. Thus far 362 buildings, including many temples, are reported to have been destroyed and more than one thousand others badly damaged.

The shock occurred at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and affected a wide area in the Shiga and Gifu prefectures. The town of Osaka, in Gifu, suffered terribly. The banks of the Hida river there broke and the surrounding country was inundated. The people of the district fled to high ground and remained in the open all night. Intermittent shocks were felt thoughout Saturday night and early Sunday morning.

The mountain Ibuki, a short distance west of Gifu, emitted smoke in the early stages of the earthquake and then collapsed with a tremendous roar. The formation of the mountain was completely changed.

Slight damage was done at Nagoya, to the southward of Gifu, and neighboring villages.

MOTHER'S TERRIBLE DEED.

Asphyxiated Herself and Three Children in a Bathroom—She Was Hopelessly Ill.

Chicago.—Mrs. Marie Handzel, Sunday, committed suicide and at the same time asphyxiated her three boy babies. She had carefully bathed and dressed her three children—one 4 years old and the other two 2 years old—and carried them into the bathroom, where she had closed the door and turned on the gas.

Mrs. Handzel had been ill for some time and apparently was able to get no relief. She leaves four other children, ranging in age from 5 to 16.

Lake Disappears During Night.

La Crosse, Wis.—Beautiful Lake Como at Hekah, Minn., just across the state line, a resort much patronized by southern tourists, disappeared during the night. When the residents of the village arose Sunday morning they were amazed to see nothing but a bed of shifting sand covered with dying fish. A dam 300 feet long at the foot of the lake went out with a roar early Sunday morning, but this fails to account for the utter disappearance of the lake.

Negro Lynched.

Monroe, La.—News was received here Sunday of the lynching of a negro near Doss, in Moorehouse parish. The negro was hanged from a tree by the roadside, near his home, and his body riddled with bullets. Considerable ill feeling is said to have been entertained against him because he brought suit against a white resident of that community who had killed a cow belonging to the negro.

Blew His Head Off With Dynamite.

Peoria, Ill—Charles P. Jones, aged 73, whose home is at Hanna City, Ill., blew his head off with a dynamite cartridge in a ravine near the Peoria State Hospital for the Insane. The blast severed his head from the body as if done by a guillotine, and while nothing could be found of the head, the body was in good shape. Jones was admitted to the asylum August 3 on his own request.

Lumber Plant Burns.

Wadley, Ga.—The plant of the Wadley Yellow Pine Lumber Co. and a large quantity of lumber were destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of approximately $150,000, with $100,000 insurance.

STATE HAPPENINGS

News of General Interest in a Summarized Form,

BY SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

Message from Secretary of State Bruner at Washington, D. C., Taken to Mean That Quarantine Against Sheep Will Not Take Effect at Once.

Frankfort, Ky.—Evidently the quarantine against sheep in Kentucky will not become effective at once, for Secretary of State Bruner telegraphed the employes of his office here from Washington, D. C.: "We win." This message is taken to mean that there would be no quarantine against sheep until at least September 1, and that the purpose of the committee in calling upon Secretary Wilson has been accomplished.

PROMINENT WOMAN SUICIDES.

Wife of Louisville Lawyer Ends Life by Shooting Herself.

Louisville, Ky.—Pinning two red roses to a farewell note which she dispatched to her daughter, ill in an infirmary, Mrs. May Spindle, wife of Thaddeus W. Spindle, law partner of Aaron Kohn, ended life by shooting herself in the mouth with a revolver. No tragedy in all the list of suicides in several years has so stirred Louisville. Alone in her home on Fourth avenue, and lying upon the bed in her room, Mrs. Spindle committed the awful deed. The maddening pain of frequent headaches and the effects of morphine and chloroform, which her physicians declare she took constantly, are believed to have been the cause of her deed.

SENATOR BRADLEY WIRES

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Asking Him to Hold Off Quarantine Order.

Lexington, Ky.—Senator W. O. Bradley while here sent a telegram to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson asking him to await the coming of Commissioner of Agriculture Rankin, Secretary of State Bruner and W. T. Chilton, of Campbellsburg, president of the Kentucky Sheep Breeders' association, who left for Washington to intercede with Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in an effort to have him hold off the quarantine on Kentucky sheep. They will endeavor to show that the scabies which affects the Kentucky sheep is being eradicated and that a quarantine will be unnecessary.

SUIT FILED IN FRANKFORT

Against Kentucky Traction Co. of Louisville to Recover Back Taxes.

Frankfort, Ky.—For the commonwealth Arthur E. Hopkins, of Louisville, filed suit in the state fiscal court here against the Kentucky Traction Co., of Louisville, to recover back taxes amounting to $35,000 and penalties amounting to $7,000. Hopkins will get the penalties if he secures a judgment. He alleges that the company incorporated for $5,000 and increased the capital stock to $5,000,000, and has not been paying taxes on the difference. The case will come up before Judge R. L. Stout in November.

BENZOATE OF SODA IN FOODS.

Circular Sent to Physicians of Kentucky Asking Their Opinion as to Its Effect.

Frankfort, Ky.—Director M. A. Scovell, of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington, has issued a circular to the physicians of Kentucky requesting their opinion as to the use of benzoic acid and benzoate of soda in foods. The result of Director Scovell's inquiries may determine what action will be taken as to the enforcement of the pure food and drug laws of the state with reference to these food preservatives.

INJUNCTION WILL BE ASKED

To Prevent State Officials Making Tuberculous Tests.

Louisville, Ky.—Application for an injunction against state health officials to prevent tuberculous tests of dairy herds will be made by the Dairymen's Protective association, bringing on the fight between the health officials and the dairy owners. The case will probably be carried to the court of appeals. When Dr. F. T. Eisenman, state veterinarian, attempted to inspect the herd of Anton Beichmuth police assistance was required.

Louisville, Ky.—News was received here announcing the death, in Detroit, of John M. Sharp, until a few days ago one of the leading brokers of Louisville. Mr. Sharp left this city without telling any of his friends of his plans, which gave rise to numerous rumors.

Louisville, Ky.—David Brooks, 50, one of the most widely known stock raisers of Jefferson county, was badly injured in a runaway accident, sustaining a broken hip and a badly crushed body.

Kentucky Pick-Ups

Lexington, Ky.—The Combs Lumber Co. was awarded the contract to build the new dormitory for boys at the reform school near this city on the bid of $19,846.

Morehead, Ky.—Dynamiters blew up a section of the Licking River Lumber Co.'s dam at Farmers, where employes of the company have been on strike for several weeks. The strikers deny responsibility.

Brownsville, Ky.—Night riders at Bee Springs visited the home of Andrew Farris, near Grassland, Ky., and gave him a severe whipping with hickory switches and warned him to leave Edmonson county. They also whipped the Gott sisters.

Louisville, Ky.—In the presence of a great gathering of Louisville people the funeral of Theodore Harris, pioneer Louisville business man and banker, who was widely known throughout the state, took place at the Chestnut Street Baptist church.

Louisville, Ky.—In the presence of 350 delegates, assembled from all over the country, the fifth annual convention of the National Association of Sheet Metal Workers opened here. President E. L. Seabrook used a pair of metal worker's shears as a gavel.

Louisville, Ky.—Theodore Harris, 72, president of the Louisville National Banking Co., and one of the most prominent bankers in the south, died of a complication of diseases. He was widely known as the father of Miss Zudie Harris, noted in European capitals as a pianiste.

Paducah, Ky.—On motion of the commonwealth's attorney the 47 cases for night-riding were dismissed in the Calloway circuit court at Murray. Convictions were impossible under the ruling of the Appellate Court that evidence of a general conspiracy was not admissible.

Lexington, Ky.—A conference of insurgent democrats was held at the Reed hotel here to consider plans for an independent fusion ticket for county offices. While nobody present would talk for publication, it was learned on reliable authority that no definite action was taken.

Morehead, Ky.—A stranger, whose actions aroused the suspicions of the police, was arrested at Farmers and brought here. When searched powder and dynamite and several well drills were found in his pockets. There has been no further violence in the strike of river men.

Winchester, Ky.—News has reached here from Harlan county of the sale by Louisville parties of all their holdings of coal lands in that county and in Lee county, Virginia, consisting of about 11,000 acres, to the Consolidated Coal and Coke Co. of Virginia for a price aggregating over $1,400,000.

Lexington, Ky.—Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, State President of the W. C. T. U., was before the grand jury seeking the indictment of somebody, claiming that that portion of the fair grounds on which beer and other drinks are sold is outside of the city limits and in the "dry" territory.

Lexington, Ky.—The show of Hereford cattle at the Blue Brass Fair was probably the best ever seen in Kentucky. The herds of Giltner Bros., Eminence, Ky.; Luce & Moxley, Shelbyville, Ky.; J. L. Vannata, Lafayette, Ind., and Warren T. McCray, Kentland, Ind., figured chiefly in the awards.

Winchester, Ky.—Capt. Ellis Baxter, while attempting to cross the Louisville and Nashville Railroad in a wagon, on Main street here, was struck by a fast train and probably fatally injured. He has been commander of John S. Williams Co., U. V. C., and is a prominent official in the local Masonic Lodge.

Louisville, Ky.—An effort will be made to break the will of Theodore Harris, banker, who left $500,000 to charity and $1,800 a year to his children. It was stated on authority that the heirs are greatly dissatisfied with their allowance of only $150 a month. Harris stated in his will: "Inherited wealth is seldom useful." He left his estate to the Baptists.

Frankfort, Ky.—Judge Cochran, of the United States District Court, filed an opinion in the Federal Court here in the case of Charles F. Coffin, of Indianapolis, against the New Bell-Jellico Coal Co., W. McC. Johnston and others, in which he states that he will take jurisdiction in the case, and that he will apoint a receiver for the mines, while the case is in litigation. The case will be tried in the September term of the Federal Court.

Louisville, Ky.—While preparing to climb up into the cab of his engine for his run, Jeremiah Corkery, 56, one of the best known railroad engineers of this section, dropped dead in the round house of the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

Louisville, Ky.—The United States Government and a justice of the peace met in a collision here, when warrants were issued for the arrest of two Federal veterinarians assisting in tuberculer tests being made of dairy herds in this city and county.

CALL FOR TRIBUTE

TRUE INWARDNESS OF THE NEW TARIFF LAW.

Measure Amounts to a Shameful Betrayal of the People in the Interests of the Great Monopolies.

It is an exploded axiom that figures can not lie. In economics the device most commonly employed to deceive the public is figures. The country is to be goaded with tables, comparisons and other mystifying data to convince the people that they will gain under the operation of the new tariff law. The people are not expert in analyzing figures, much less in dissecting schedules and all that affects them under the administration of the tariff; but here are some things that the people either know now or soon will learn to their sorrow:

Instead of a reduction in the cost of living, which was clearly promised by both parties represented in congress—

There will be an enormous increase in the cost of woolens and men's suits, women's dresses, underwear and hats made from woolen fabrics, not because the rates on these articles have been increased, but because the present excessive rates have not been reduced, and because, under these rates, a vast trust has been formed to control woolen manufactures.

There will be a large increase in the cost of cotton fabrics and nearly all articles made from these fabrics, including women's and children's clothing.

The cost of sugar will remain the same and each family will continue to pay two cents a pound more for its sugar than the same sugar sells for in London.

There will be no reduction in the cost of flour, bread, meats or potatoes, and there will be large increases in the cost of lemons and pineapples.

Hosiery will cost more and gloves will cost about the same, both of which articles are excessively expensive under the present law.

These are only a few of the articles entering into large and general necessary use. The cost will be increased on many others and lowered on only a few. The reductions granted affect mainly raw materials, leaving the people entirely at the mercy of the manufacturers as to whether the public shall share in the benefits of such reductions.

It is submitted that a bill bearing these general features, having this broad tendency to increase rather than lower the cost of living, embodies a flagrant betrayal of the people.

Get your tribute ready. The cost of living is to be maintained, for a time at least, in order that the graft of the trusts shall be protected and made to flourish.

Get your tribute ready.

Tariff Bill Settles Nothing.

It is as plain as anything can be that the enactment of this tariff bill will settle nothing, will not stop the tariff discussion. Men may urge that agitation cease, and parties may resolve—as they did 60 years ago in regard to the slavery question—that the tariff agitation ought to cease. But it will be in vain. The Republican party might have put through a bill that would have satisfied the people so well that they would have been glad to let the question rest. Or rather the party could have done this had it not been so bound and tied to the interests. But when men find that the reductions are without effect on the prices that they must pay for articles of ordinary use; that other reductions are reductions only when compared with the outrageously increased duties in the senate and house bills; that the duties agreed on are practically the Dingley duties, and in some cases higher; and that the two schedules in which they are chiefly interested—woolen and cotton—are, if anything, worse than those now in force, they will not be likely to accept with meekness, much less with gratitude, the work of congress.

The Tariff Disappointment.

If Mr. Taft harbors any delusion that the tariff bill fulfills what the people of the west understood to be his promise of revision downward, he is very much mistaken.

Every provision is for the benefit of New England and nothing for the west.

The New England tariff barons wanted cheaper coal. They can now secure it from Nova Scotia. New England leather barons and millionaire shoemakers wanted free hides. They receive them. New England woolen and cotton cloth magnates demanded the privilege of raising the price of their products. Their demand is granted.

Eastern glovemakers are well content to retain the Dingley rates, which give them 95 per cent. of the American market for gloves.

There is nothing in the new tariff bill to repay the great body of American wage-earners and farmers for the money spent in tariff revision.

Compulsory Philosophy.

Thomas Huxley once said that a man could not start along the ordinary road of the questioner without arriving at the ultimate. For example, Senator Aldrich controls the senate, the infant industries control Senator Aldrich, the magnates control the infant industries, the magnates are controlled by destiny and destiny in its turn is controlled by an all-wise Providence. Why, then, complain?—Life.

HAS GOOD REASON TO SMILE.

Ample Justification for Mr. Morgan's Beaming Countenance Just at This Time.

Mr. Morgan's beaming countenance when the dividend on Steel common was increased to three per cent. was justified. More than $500,000,000 of stock not long since almost valueless even in Wall street was selling at 71 and better, and the rise in the dividend, even if it were to be, as many suspected, for this time only, naturally added color to what looked like a financial triumph.

Steel common has been truly described as a gambling stock, and so it is in more respects than one. Originally it represented no investment whatever. It once sold as low as 8¾, which was more than it was actually worth, but its speculative possibilities have been great. First of all, it was a gamble on the preservation of the plutocratic tariff; secondly, it was a bet on the growth and prosperity of the country, and thirdly, it was a wager not only on the gullibility of mankind but on the reasonable certainty that, as things were going, such transactions as that with the Tennessee, Coal and Iron Company, which Mr. Roosevelt authorized, would be feasible and profitable. Results considered, why should not Mr. Morgan smile?

Steel, like wool, has not been at all anxious about the revision of the tariff. It was so sure of the situation in Washington that it began to mark up prices long ago. Its securities, reflecting speculative confidence in the value of privilege, kept pace with the market for commodities. If France, on which country it was proposed to unload many millions of these pawns of a great industry, had not taken second thought, Mr. Morgan's smiles might by this time have been almost a laugh.

Messrs. Carnegie and Schwab have asserted that the Steel Trust needs no protection and that it would be better off without it. If that could be said in truth of the trust's gambling stock, which needs constant watching and nursing as well as protection, a good many desperate players would rest better at night than they now do.

"Concessions" a Farce.

In considering the tariff bill, the maximum and minimum feature should by no means be overelooked. After March 31, 1910, the duties prescribed by the law are to be 25 per cent. higher than those in the bill. Or rather 25 per cent. is to be automatically added to the duties. A tax of 25 per cent. will then, without any action of congress, become one of 50 per cent. It is made the duty of the president to lower the duties to the level established in the bill when he is convinced that foreign countries "accord to the United States treatment which is considered reciprocal and equivalent." In other words, the tariff which will be in force after March next will be higher by 25 per cent. than that enacted by congress. The chances are that it will continue to be thus much higher in many cases. We are to retaliate, not by increasing a few duties to compensate for increases made in the duties imposed by foreign countries, but by lifting all our tariff rates. And this higher tariff is to be the general tariff, from which concessions are to be made to those countries which are thought to be treating us fairly. In figuring on the duties therefore it may be well to add 25 per cent. to them. When this is done there is not much left of the "concessions" of which so much has been said.

The One Test—The Cost of Living.

There is only one way to judge of the value of the tariff law and that is the probable effect it will have on the cost of living.

The cause of the demand for lower duties is the excessive cost of living, brought about by the extortions of the tariff-protected interests.

The tariff bill leaves practically unchanged the predatory powers of the sugar trust, the steel trust, the oil trust, the woolen trust, the cotton trust, the meat trust, the harvester trust, the lead trust and the other combinations that have been formed to exact abnormal profits out of the prices that the people must pay for the necessities of life, and out of those who are willing and able to buy the luxuries.

If there shall be any gain to the people that gain will not meet the promises of the two great parties nor the expectations created by the platforms and campaign utterances. And no provision that congress may make that will not satisfy the people will serve to check the agitation of the tariff question. The only key to the tariff situation is the cost of living.

Must Turn to Democratic Party.

No law framed upon the Republican doctrine of protection can ever produce a tariff that is not honeycombed with greed, sharp practice and injustice. The only honest guide is the Democratic principle of tariff for revenue, with such incidental protection as it may carry with it.

There Are Others.

There are women smugglers, of course. Every little while one gets caught "with the goods on." But smuggling is not peculiar to women. Who can so soon forget the recent record of the sugar trust and the false weighing?—Springfield Republican.

Will Discover One.

From the way some of the interests are shying at the corporation tax, one would be justified in thinking they have not yet been able to think out a plan whereby the consumer may be made to pay it.

Roy H. Hudson, of Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, arrived here Saturday on a visit to his parents, J. J. Hudson and wife and other relatives. He says dry weather has cut the corn crop to one-half in his territory, but otherwise things are in a prosperous condition.

J. Mit Baker, Division Deputy in the U. S. Internal Revenue Service, with headquarters at Covington, came out Wednesday to spend his month's vacation on his farm at Big Bone Springs, where his wife and children have been for some time. His many friends in this quarter are always glad to meet him and are proud of the success he is making in his position, he being rated as one of the best officers in the service.

The Board of Trustees of the Walton High School at a special meeting last week elected C. O. Morgan principal of the High School for the coming school year, vice Prof. H. C. Wayman, who resigned to become the pastor of the Walton Baptist church. Mr. Morgan was the assistant principal last year, and resides at Morganville, Kenton county. C. B. Robinson, of London, Laurel county, was elected assistant principal. The school opens Monday, Sept. 15th.

Judge and Mrs. John M. Lassing and little son John, who are enjoying the pleasures of camp life on the Ohio river at Big Bone Island, spent a couple of days here last week with friends. They have been camping on the river for over a month and Judge Lassing is as brown as an Indian, and besides enjoying the benefit of perfect rest his health has been greatly benefitted. They will shortly return to their home at Newport as Judge Lassing will resume his duties on the Appellate court bench the first of next month.

Card of Thanks.—I desire to most gratefully acknowledge the kindness of Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Bedinger to my brother, Richmond Reed, during his fatal illness. We appreciate their doing everything in their power for his comfort and to assist in the restoration of his health, and to them and the many others for their kind deeds and words of sympathy, and assistance rendered in the very sorrowful hour of bereavement, we desire to tender our heartfelt thanks.

Very respectfully yours,
Joe Reed and relatives.

This community was greatly shocked, last Thursday morning, by the tragic death of Samuel C. Johnson, on his farm between here and Beaver Lick. Mr. Johnson had gotten up early and went to a corn field near his home to shoot some crows, taking his double barrel shot gun with him for that purpose. Being gone an unusual length of time, search was made for him and his lifeless body was found near a little house on his farm, his shot gun lying near with one empty barrel. An investigation of the body revealed a ghastly wound below the ribs on one side, where the load of shot from the discharged barrel of the gun had torn its way into the body. Death must have resulted instantly. The body was taken home, and Esq. John H. Watson was notified. He summoned a jury and held an inquest, a verdict of accidental death being returned. Mr. Johnson was about 70 years old, and leaves a widow and one son, A. R. Johnson, of Walton. He had a very large circle of friends, who were greatly attached to him because of his genial disposition and gentlemanly qualities, and his death has brought sadness to the entire community. Mr. Johnson was a member of the Masonic lodge here, and his funeral took place Sunday under the directions of that order.

W. O. ROUSE & Co., Walton, Ky

So many people have been imposed on by traveling nurserymen that the public looks upon them with suspicion until their title to confidence and reliability is established. Recently Henry C. Diers, of Walton, who represents The Farmers' Nursery Co., of Troy, Ohio, was canvassing Henry county, where many of the farmers had been "taken in" by glib nursery agents, but they were so impressed with the fair representations of Mr. Diers that they had one of the citizens make an inquiry about the nursery firm Mr. Diers represents, the letter being as follows:

EMINENCE, KY., July 6, 1909.

A. C. Sparks, Cashier Commercial and Savings Bank, Troy, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—Please give me the standing of The Farmers Nursery Company of Troy, Ohio, and you will oblige. They have a representative at this place for the present, a Mr. H. C. Diers, of Walton, Ky.

Respectfully,
Jas. H. Patterson.

An immediate answer was received as follows: Replying to your inquiry regarding The Farmers' Nursery Company, of Troy, Ohio, will say its reputation is second to none. Worth $250,000. First class rating.

Respectfully,

The Burlington base ball team went over to Hebron, last Saturday afternoon, where it got the hardest jolt it has received this season. An inning and a half had been played when a heavy rain interrupted proceedings, no runs having been made. After the rain play was resumed, the Hebron team at the bat. Conner could not control the ball, and was hit for two singles and two doubles, which netted three runs before the slaughter could be stopped. It was a contest in the mud and in which the Hebron line-up proved the superior mud "hosses," giving the Burlington athletes their first treat to goose eggs. Burlington and Hebron teams have broken even in the series. Following is the score of last Saturday's game:

Hebron	0	3	0	0	0	0	0	0	*	—3
Hits	1	4	0	0	1	2	1	1	*	—10

Struck out—By Shinkle 6; by Conner 7.

Base hits—Slayback, Clore, White 2, Conner 2; Garnett, Ryle, Hogan 2, Goodridge, Graves 2, Shinkle.

Two base hits—Walton; Riley, Graves 2.

Big Bone and Belleview postponed their game that was scheduled for last Saturday.

THE TOBACCO WAR IS OVER.

Satisfactory Compromise at Last Effected and Leaders Pledge Loyal Support to One Pool

The war between the Burley Society and the American Society of Equity is over, and the two organizations will work in harmony in pooling the 1909 crop under the control of the Burley Tobacco Society if the agreement reached at Winchester Tuesday afternoon is ratified by the State and National organizations of the Society of Equity is the news that comes from Winchester.

According to the terms of the agreement the Burley Tobacco Society will pay the American Society of Equity $10,000 for its help in pooling the 1909 crop, to be divided equally between the National and State unions, $5,000 of this sum to be paid October 1, if the pool is a success, and $5,000 when the 1909 crop is sold, the whole amount to be chargeable to the 1909 crop.

In all counties where there are local unions of the American Society of Equity the Burley Tobacco Society will pay $1 to such union for every hogsheads of tobacco pooled in that county.

The Burley Tobacco Society agrees to adopt a by-law fixing a maximum price for prizing all pooled tobacco. It also agrees to adopt a by-law providing that all money coming into the hands of the central office of the Burley Tobacco Society from the sale of tobacco shall be paid to the county boards of control to which it belongs within ten days after it is received from the buyers.

The result is a compromise of the differences between the two organizations. While the American Society of Equity, led by Congressman Cantrill, has secured important concessions and may be regarded as having won a victory, the Burley Tobacco Society retains control of the pool and the essential features of the pooling contract as originally promulgated will remain in force.

The victory of the Equity Society is in the recognition accorded to it and the liberal compensation for its assistance in pooling the crop. As there are unions in nearly every Burley county the society will secure in addition to the $10,000 a very considerable compensation at the $1 per hogshead rate.

The Equity leaders have also secured a modification of what they consider safeguards against the more objectionable features of the 10 per cent reserve provision of the pooling contract. They regard the agreement to fix a maximum price for prizing, and the agreement to have all money paid for tobacco sent to the county whose tobacco has been sold within ten days after its receipt by the district board, as important concessions.

The Burley Tobacco Society has secured the removal of opposition to its pooling pledge, retaining control of the pool, maintaining its organization intact and retaining also the important essential parts of the original plan.

The tobacco it pools under this agreement will be commingled as originally provided for and the Burley Tobacco Company will be organized with a capital equal to ten per cent of the gross proceeds of the 1909 crop put into the pool.

The Burley Society retains general control and satisfies the demand for local county control by the provision for the prompt distribution of the money to the grower.

The executive board of the Burley Tobacco Society with Mr. Charles M. Hanna, of Shelby county, M. C. Rankin, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Dr. Crecelius, of Falmouth, went into conference with C. O. Drayton, National President of the American Society of Equity, and Hon. J. Campbell Cantrill, State President of the American Society at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Burley Society offices to consider an adjustment of the differences which have existed between the two societies.

The conference lasted until four o'clock and countless rumors were afloat in the streets as to the outcome of the meeting of the heads of the two factions. As soon as the conference adjourned it was learned that the Burley Tobacco Society had agreed to make the above proposition to the American Society of Equity.

After the propositions were submitted Mr. Drayton and Mr. Cantrill retired to consider them and in half an hour came back slapping several members of the board on the back and shaking hands all the way round, it was joyously announced that "the war is over."

However, as the action of Mr. Drayton will have to be ratified by the convention of the National Union of the American Society of Equity, which is to be held at Indianapolis August 16, and as Mr. Cantrill's action must be approved by the State Convention of the American Society of Equity, which is to be held at Bowling Green on August 18, considerable interest is felt here by tobacco people as to the final action of these two bodies.

A member of the Burley Committee then said to Mr. Drayton, "We will expect you to put this through at Indianapolis," and he said "I shall recommend it to the National Union and do all I can to put it through."

Mr. Cantrill stated to members of the Burley Tobacco Society committee that if the American Society of Equity did not accept the proposition he would withdraw from the society and throw his influence with the Burley Tobacco Society and he offered to take the stump in behalf of the Burley Tobacco Society pool

S. D. Kump, National Secretary of the American Society of Equity, and M. F. Sharp, State Organizer of the American Society of Equity, were here today, but were not invited to take part in the conference.

D. L. Pendleton, Attorney for the Burley Tobacco Society said tonight:

"The war is certianly over, for we have no doubt that our propositions will be accepted."

Adopted by the Union Baptist Church, Union, Ky.

Whereas, Our beloved pastor, Rev. M. C. Frazer, having served our church faithfully for seven months, has, on account of ill health, tendered his resignation, and the church with much regret has accepted it, be it resolved

1. That our church is losing a noble and consecrated christian gentleman and pastor. We will deeply feel his absence in our pulpit and we will miss his noble wife in our services. During his pastorate here he endeared himself not only to the members of his own church, but to the entire community.

2. That we hold him in highest esteem as a devoted pastor and an earnest preacher of the pure gospel of Christ, faithful in seeking the lost and in upbuilding the saints.

3. That we extend our sympathy to him in his illness and pray God will restore him to perfect health wonted usefulness. We commend him and his wife to the confidence and affection of those among whom their lots may be cast and may God's richest blessings follow them in the paths he may direct.

This reporter had the pleasure of attending the celebration of the 93d birthday anniversary of uncles Samuel Wingate and Harvy Marshall, of Waterloo, last Friday, the event having been postponed to that date on account of the death of J. S. Clore, one of their neighbors. The celebration was in the beech grove near Waterloo, and on the farm of the latter. The two pioneers were in the best of spirits, and in fine condition, physically, considering their very advanced age. About 800 people were present in honor of the two old gentlemen, and with each of whom they shook hands with a vim and heartiness truly surprising. During the day they were asked hundreds of questions that carried them back into the dim and distant past, but in no instance did their memories falter, and the information sought was promptly forthcoming. It was truly a great day for these two good men whose long lives have been honest and upright in every particular. It was a delightful day to everyone in the large assemblage, and all join in the silent prayer that the good Lord will preserve these two old gentlemen that they may participate in many more like occasions. One of the features of the day was the address delivered by Maj. W. T. Stott, of Petersburg, in compliance with a request of all present. His remarks were timely and impressive. As regards the midday feast it is only necessary to say it is consisted of a bountiful supply of everything a hungry person could desire.

PLEASANT VALLEY.

Gloom was cast over this neighborhood on the 17th inst. by the sudden death of Mrs. Harriet Rouse, widow of the late Early Rouse. She had been in poor health for sometime, bnt her death was unexpected. She was a daughter of Samuel Delph. She leaves a son and daughter to mourn her death, the son being at Lakeland Asylum. She was a member of the Baptist church having united with the church at Burlington and then moved her membership to Union where it remained until the Lord called her home. Hers was a humble christian life, never speaking ill of any one, ever ready to help those in need and troubles, her devotion to her loved ones was beautiful in the last years of her life. She often spoke of being ready when the time came to lay down her burdens and be at rest, yet she was willing to wait until the Lord called her. Closed are thy sweet eyes from this world of sorrow and pain, but we trust in God to meet thee again. xx

'Twas A Glorious Victory.

There's rejoicing in Fedora, Tenn. A man's life has been saved, and now Dr. King's New Discovery is the talk of the town for curing C. V. Pepper of deadly lung hoemorrhage. "I could not work nor get about," he writes, "and the doctors did me no good, but after using Dr. King's New Discovery three weeks, I feel like a new man, and can do good work again." For weak, sore or diseased lungs, Coughs and Colds, Hemorrhages, Hay Fever, LaGrippe Asthma or any Bronchial affection it stands unrivaled. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Sold and guaranteed by Bentiers drug store, Erlanger.

The Erlanger fair was favored with ideal weather, last week, and the exhibition of horses in the ring and the racing on the tract was enjoyed very much by the spectators, the attendance being about the same as that of former years. The exhibit in floral hall on the first day was pronounced the finest and largest display of art needle work ever seen at a fair in this part of the Sate.

W. I. Rouse, a good fruit man out on the Burlington and Belleview pike, brought to this office, last Monday, one of the wonderful Wonderberry plants, which he has been cultivating. Wedding Fee in Installments.

Some of the squires in rustic New Jersey seem to be pretty hard pushed for cash. To get the cash they do not hesitate to use most unusual methods. One of these J. P.'s advertised the other day that he was ready and willing to marry couples at any time, day or night, for a consideration of $5 and that he was willing to accept $1 in cash down and the rest in weekly installments of $1 until the fee of $5 was paid up. The very night after the first appearance of this advertisement the J. P. returned to was called upon to "make good" his bluff. Shortly after midnight a couple which had come in an automobile awakened him from his sleep and asked to be married under the installment plan offered in the advertisement. And the J. P. was game and made good.

Two or Three Small Fish Lay Faintly Wriggling on the Surface.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrope, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunken stupor. Blake, shunned on the boat, because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie.

"Oh, but Mr. Blake, I am sure it must be a mistake; I am sure that if it is explained to papa—"

"Yes; we'll cable papa to-night. Meantime, we've something else to do. Suppose you two get a hustle on yourselves, and scrape up something to eat. I'm going out to see what's left of that blamed old tub."

"Surely you'll not venture to swim out so far!" protested Winthrope. "I saw the steamer sink as we cast off."

"Looks like a mast sticking up out there. Maybe some of the rigging is loose."

"But the sharks! These waters swarm with the vile creatures. You must not risk your life!"

"'Cause why? If I do, the babes in the woods will be left without even the robins to cover them, poor things! But cheer up!—maybe the mud-hens will do it with lovely water-lilies."

"Please, Mr. Blake, do not be so cruel!" sobbed Miss Leslie, her tears starting afresh. "The sun makes my head ache dreadfully, and I have no hat or shade, and I'm becoming so thirsty!"

"And you think you're only to wait, and half a dozen stewards will come running with parasols and ice water. Neither you nor Winthrope seem to've got your eyes open. Just suppose you get busy and do something. Winthrope, chase yourself over the mud, and get together a mess of fish that are not too dead. Must be dozens, after the blow. As for you, Miss Jenny, I guess you can pick up some reeds and rig a headgear out of this handkerchief—Wait a moment. Put on my coat, if you don't want to be broiled alive through the holes of that peek-a-boo."

"But I say, Blake—" began Winthrope.

"Don't say—do!" rejoined Blake; and he started down the muddy shore.

Though the tide was at flood, there was now no cyclone to drive the sea above the beach, and Blake walked a quarter of a mile before he reached the water's edge. There was little surf, and he paused only a few moments to peer out across the low swells before he commenced to strip.

Winthrope and Miss Leslie had been watching his movements; now the girl rose in a little flurry of haste, and set to gathering reeds. Winthrope would have spoken, but, seeing her embarrassment, smiled to himself, and began strolling about in search of fish.

It was no difficult search. The marshy ground was strewn with dead sea-creatures, many of which were already shriveling and drying in the sun. Some of the fish had a familiar look, and Winthrope turned them over with the tip of his shoe. He even went so far as to stoop to pick up a large mullet; but shrank back, repulsed by its stiffness and the unnatural shape into which the sun was warping it.

He found himself near the beach, and stood for half an hour or more watching the black dot far out in the water—all that was to be seen of Blake. The American, after wading off-shore another quarter of a mile, had reached swimming depth, and was heading out among the reefs with steady, vigorous strokes. Half a mile or so beyond him Winthrope could now make out the goal for which he was aiming—the one remaining top-mast of the steamer.

"By Jove, these waters are full of sharks!" murmured Winthrope, staring at the steadily receding dot until it disappeared behind the wall of surf which spumed up over one of the outer reefs.

A call from Miss Leslie interrupted his watch, and he hastened to rejoin her. After several failures, she had contrived to knot Blake's handkerchief to three or four reeds in the form of a little sunshade. Her shoulders were protected by Blake's coat. It made a heavy wrap, but it shut out the blistering sun rays, which, as Blake had foreseen, had quickly begun to burn the girl's delicate skin through her open-work bodice.

Thus protected, she was fairly safe from the sun. But the sun was by no means the worst feature of the situation. While Winthrope was yet several yards distant, the girl began to complain to him. "I'm so thirsty, Mr. Winthrope! Where is there any water? Please get me a drink at once, Mr. Winthrope!"

"But, my dear Miss Leslie, there is no water. These pools are all sea-water. I must say, I'm deuced dry myself. I can't see why that cad should go off and leave us like this.

"Indeed, it is a shame—Oh, I'm so thirsty! Do you think it would help if we ate something?"

"Make it all the worse. Besides, how could we cook anything? All these reeds are green."

"But Mr. Blake said to gather some fish. Had you not best—"

"He can pick up all he wants. I shall not touch the beastly things."

"Then I suppose there is nothing to do but wait for him."

"Yes, if the sharks do not get him."

Miss Leslie uttered a little moan, and Winthrope, seeing that she was on the verge of tears, hastened to reassure her. "Don't worry about him, Miss Genevieve! He'll soon return, with nothing worse than a blistered back. Fellows of that sort are born to hang, you know."

"But if he should be—if anything should happen to him!"

Winthrope shrugged his shoulders, and drew out his silver cigarette case. It was more than half-full, and he was highly gratified to find that neither the cigarettes nor the vesta matches in the cover had been reached by the wet.

"By Jove, here's luck!", he exclaimed, and he bowed to Miss Leslie. "Pardon me, but if you have no objections—"

The girl nodded as a matter of form, and Winthrope hastened to light the cigarette already in his fingers. The smoke by no means tended to lessen the dryness of his mouth; yet it put him in a reflective mood, and in thinking over what he had read of shipwrecked parties, he remembered that a pebble held in the mouth is supposed to ease one's thirst.

To be sure, there was not a sign of a pebble within miles of where they sat; but after some reflection, it occurred to him that one of his steel keys might do as well. At first Miss Leslie was reluctant to try the experiment, and only the increasing dryness of her mouth forced her to seek the promised relief. Though it failed to quench her thirst, she was agreeably surprised to find that the little flat bar of metal eased her craving to a marked degree.

Winthrope now thought to rig a shade as Miss Leslie had done, out of reeds and his handkerchief, for the sun was scorching his unprotected head. Thus sheltered, the two crouched as comfortably as they could upon the half-dried crest of the hummock and waited impatiently for the return of Blake.

CHAPTER III.

The Worth of Fire.

THOUGH the sea within the reefs was fast smoothing to a glassy plain in the dead calm, they did not see Blake on his return until he struck shallow water and stood up to wade ashore. The tide had begun to ebb before he started landward, and though he was a powerful swimmer, the long pull against the current had so tired him that when he took to wading he moved at a tortoise-like gait.

"The bloomin' loafer!" commented Winthrope. He glanced quickly about, and at sight of Miss Leslie's arching brows, hastened to add: "Beg pardon! It—it rankles me as much as a carry. We have Miss Leslie made no reply.

At last Blake was out of the water and toiling up the muddy beach to the spot where he had left his clothes. While dressing he seemed to recover from his exertions in the water, for the moment he had finished he sprang to his feet and came forward at a brisk pace.

As he approached, Winthrope waved his fifth cigarette at him with languid enthusiasm, and called out as heartily as his dry lips would permit: "I say, Blake, deuced glad the sharks didn't get you!"

"Sharks?—bah! All you have to do is to splash a little, and they haul off."

"How about the steamer, Mr. Blake?" asked Miss Leslie, turning to face him.

"All under but the maintopmast—curse it!—wire rigging at that! Couldn't even get a bolt."

"A bolt?"

"Not a bolt; and here we are as good as naked on this infernal—Hey, you! what you doing with that match? Light your cigarette—light it!— Damnation!"

Heedless of Blake's warning cry, Winthrope had struck his last vesta, and now, angry and bewildered, he stood staring while the little taper burned itself out. With an oath, Blake sprang to catch it as it dropped from between Winthrope's fingers. But he was too far away. It fell among the damp rushes, spluttered, and flared out.

"Where's your matchbox? Got any more?" he demanded.

"Last one, I fancy—yes; last one, and there are still two cigarettes. But look here, Blake, I can't tolerate your talking so deucedly—"

"You idiot! you—you— Hell! and every one for cigarettes!"

From a growl Blake's voice burst into a roar of fury, and sprang upon Winthrope like a wild beast. His hands closed upon the Englishman's throat, and he began to shake him about, paying no heed to the blows his victim showered upon his face and body, blows which soon began to lessen in force.

Terror-stricken, Miss Leslie put her hands over her eyes, and began to scream—the piercing shriek that will unnerve the strongest man. Blake paused as though transfixed, and as the half-suffocated Englishman struggled in his grasp, he flung him on the ground and turned to the screaming girl.

"Stop that squawking!" he said. The girl cowed down. "So; that's better. Next time keep your mouth shut."

"You—you brute!"

"Good! You've got a little spunk, eh?"

"You coward—to attack a man not half your strength!"

"Steady, steady, young lady! I'm warm enough yet; I've still half a mind to wring his fool neck."

"But why should you be so angry? What has he done, that you—"

"Why—why? Lord! what hasn't he done? This is not [illegible] swarms with [illegible] and now this idiot—this dough-head—has gone and thrown away our only chance—fire—and on his measly cigarettes!" Blake choked with returning rage.

Winthrope, still panting for breath, began to creep away, at the same time unclasping a small pearl-knife. It was white with fear; but his gray eyes—which on shipboard Blake had never seen other than offensively supercilious—now glinted in a manner that served to alter the American's mood.

"That'll do," he said. "Come here and show me that knife."

"I'll show it you where it will do the most good," muttered Winthrope, rising hastily to repel the expected attack.

"So you've got a little sand, too," said Blake, almost good-naturedly. "Say, that's not so bad. We'll call it quits on the matches. Though how you could go and throw them away—"

"Deuce take it, man! How should I know? I've never before been in a wreck."

"Neither have I—this kind. But I tell you, we've got to keep our think tanks going. It's a guess if we see to-morrow, and that's no joke. Now do you wonder I got hot?"

"Indeed, no! I've been an ass, and here's my hand to it—if you really mean it's quits."

"It's quits all right, long as you don't run out of sand," responded Blake, and he gripped the other's soft hand until the Englishman winced. "So; that's settled. I've got a hot temper, but I don't hold grudges. Now, where're your fish?"

"I—well, they were all spoiled."

"Spoiled?"

"The sun had shriveled them."

"And you call that spoiled! We're like to eat them rotten before we're through with this picnic. How about the pools?"

"Pools? Do you know, Blake, I never thought of the pools. I stopped to watch you, and then we were so anxious about you—"

Blake grunted and turned on his heel to wade into the half-drained pool in whose midst he had been deposited by the hurricane.

Two or three small fish lay faintly wriggling on the surface. As Blake splashed through the water to seize them his foot struck against a living body which floundered violently and flashed a brilliant forked tail above the muddy water. Blake sprang over the fish, which was entangled in the reeds, and with a kick flung it clear out upon the ground.

"A coryphene!" cried Winthrope, and he ran forward to stare at the gorgeously colored prize.

"Coryphene?" repeated Blake, following his example. "Good to eat?"

"Fine as salmon. This is only a small one, but—"

"Fifteen pounds if an ounce!" cried Blake, and he thrust his hand in his pocket. There was a moment's silence, and Winthrope, glancing up, saw the other staring in blank dismay.

"What's up?" he asked.

"Lost my knife."

"When?—In the pool? If we fell about—"

"No; aboard ship, or in the surf—"

"Here is my knife."

"Yes; almost big enough to whittle a match! Mine would have done us some good."

"It is the best steel."

"All right; let's see you cut up the fish."

"But you know, Blake, I shouldn't know how to go about it. I never did such a thing."

"And you, Miss Jenny? Girls are supposed to know about cooking."

"I never cooked anything in all my life, Mr. Blake, and it's alive—and—and I am very thirsty, Mr. Blake!"

"Lord!" commented Blake. "Give me that knife."

Though the blade was so small, the American's hand was strong. After some little haggling, the coryphene was killed and dressed. Blake washed both it and his hands in the pool, and began to cut slices of flesh from the fish's tail.

"We have no fire," Winthrope reminded him, flushing at the word.

"That's true," assented Blake, in a cheerful tone, and he offered Winthrope two of the pieces of raw flesh. "Here's your breakfast. The trimmed piece is for Miss Leslie."

"But it's raw! Really, I could not think of eating raw fish. Could you, Miss Leslie?"

Miss Leslie shuddered. "Oh, no!—and I'm so thirsty I could not eat anything."

"You bet you can!" replied Blake. "Both of you take that fish and go to chewing. It's the stuff to ease your thirst while we look for water. Good Lord!—In a week you'll be glad to eat raw snake. Finnicky over clean fish, when you swallow canvas-back all but raw, and beef running blood, and raw oysters with their stomachs full of disintegrated animal matter, to put it politely. You couldn't tell rattlesnake broth from chicken, and dog makes first-rate veal—when you've got to eat it. I've had it straight from them that knows that over in France they eat [illegible] fish[illegible] It's all a mat[illegible]

LESSON IN NATURAL HISTORY

Amusing, But Somewhat Expensive as Miss Patty Realized When the Goat Was Through.

Miss Patty Shepard of North Thirteenth street went to the country with a party of friends on Memorial day. They stopped at a farmhouse where some of the party are well known.

Browsing about was an old goat. When Miss Patty saw her the nanny was placidly nibbling at a few blades of grass, and she innocently thought that goats were strictly vegetarians. On the lawn in front of the porch she had put her handsome new peach-basket hat, trimmed with pretty artificial roses, which she had got from the store the night before. The goat saw the hat and advanced joyfully toward it. Miss Patty laughed. "The old thing thinks they're real roses," she laughed. "Won't she be fooled when she smells them?"

Everybody sat still to watch the goat smell the artificial flowers and walk away. But the goat fooled them.

The next week Miss Patty bought another hat.—Philadelphia Times.

PAINT BEAUTY.

Assured of durability, the next thought in painting is beauty—the complete aim being durable beauty, or beautiful durability.

National Lead Company here again offer you the co-operation of their paint experts—this time in the line of color schemes, artistic, harmonious and appropriate. You have only to write National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York City, for "Houseowners' Painting Outfit No. 49," and you will promptly receive what is really a complete guide to painting, including a book of color schemes for either exterior or interior painting (as you may request), a book of specifications, and also an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint materials. This outfit is sent free, and, to say the least, is well worth writing for.

Tapering Off.

Whereas, I, Kitty Cameron, have far too many beaux. (They say that I encourage them. It really is not so!)

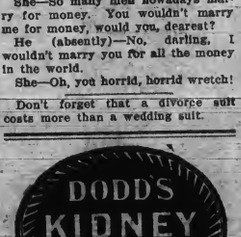
A Contest of Wits.

An eminent lawyer was once cross-examining a very clever woman, mother of the plaintiff in a breach-of-promise action, and was completely worsted in the encounter of wits. At the close, however, he turned to the jury and exclaimed:

"You saw, gentlemen, that even I was but a child in her hands. What may my client have been?"

By this adroit stroke of advocacy he turned his failure into a success.



Plain, Horrid Man.

He (absently)—No, darling, I wouldn't marry you for all the money in the world.

The Difference.

Edward, having been refused another baked potato on the simple but convincing ground that there were no more, according to the New York Sun, made some uncomplimentary remark about the insufficiency of his dinner. "This isn't dinner," corrected the aunt whom he was visiting. "This is luncheon. You don't eat dinner in the middle of the day. You eat that at night." The next day the aunt, being anxious to know if Edward had assimilated his lesson of the day before, said: "Edward, can you tell me now the difference between dinner and luncheon?" "You bet I can," said Edward, very promptly. "Lunch is the meal where you don't get enough to eat."

People Becoming Interested.

Evidence of the popular interest in the anti-consumption crusade is given in a statement made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, to the effect that during the year ending August 31, nearly 3,000,000 people have attended tuberculosis exhibitions in various parts of the country. Besides the three traveling tuberculosis exhibitions of the national association, there are 28 exhibits of this kind throughout the United States. Four years ago there were only three such displays in the entire country.

He Was Well Equipped.

A Methodist bishop was recently a guest at the home of a friend who had two charming daughters. One morning the bishop, accompanied by the two young ladies, went out in the hope of catching some trout. An old fisherman, out for the same purpose, wishing to appear friendly, called out:

"Ketchin' many, pard?"

The bishop, straightening himself to his full height, replied: "Brother, I am a fisher of men."

"You've got the right kind o' bait, all right," was the fisherman's rejoinder.—Success Magazine.

A Classic in Kentucky.

They have been telling this story down in the Blue Grass so long that the Louisville Courier-Journal says it is regarded as a classic:

"Majah," announced the colonel, "I'll bet I've sweat no less than 17 gallons!"

"Begging your pardon, kunnel," returned the major, desisting from a long libation, "gentlemen don't sweat; they perspire. Horses sweat."

"Well, then," returned the now irritated colonel, glaring at the calm and contented critic of his diction, "by gad, suh, I'm a hoss!"

THREE REASONS

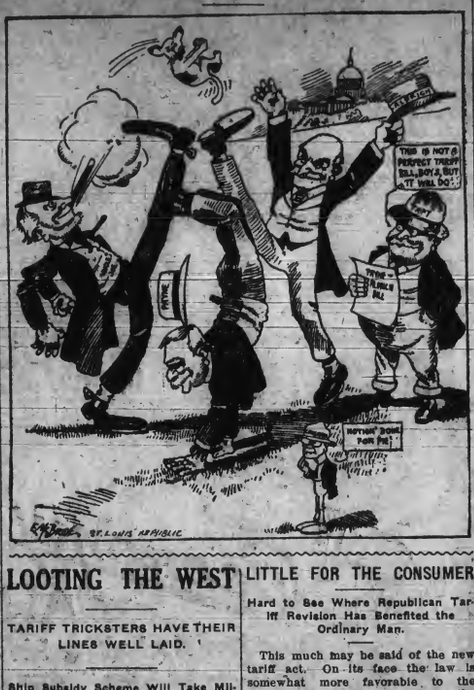
Each with Two Legs and Ten Fingers.

A Boston woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experience feeding her boys.

Among other things she says: "Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Rob, Jack and Dick, aged 6, 4 and 2 years respectively, are three of our reasons for using and recomending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other children would have been given candy.

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3 year old child was a wearened little thing, ill half the time. The little tot ate the Grape-Nuts and cream greedily and the mother continued the good work, and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts.

"Both husband and I use Grape-Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march."



Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is soon shown in greatly increased health, strength and mental activity.

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

LET JOY BE UNCONFINED.

LOOTING THE WEST

TARIFF TRICKSTERS HAVE THEIR LINES WELL LAID.

Ship Subsidy Scheme Will Take Millions From the Pockets of Western Farmers to Enrich New England Capitalists.

Mock tariff revision is had enough, but it is only the beginning, a bare shadow of what is to come. The west is to be looted thoroughly.

Prominent among the schemes for loot will be the ship subsidy. Abandoned shipyards line the New England coast. The high tariff which supports the steel trust enabled the steel trust to wipe out the shipyards. The ship subsidy is expected to set those yards once more in operation.

For 25 years the shipbuilders of New England will receive an annual bonus of $20,000,000, paid out of western pockets, for no earthly purpose but to insure profits to eastern capitalists and without the least advantage to anyone else.

Great Britain's merchant navy schedules 18,825,442 tons; that of the United States 4,953,812 tons. American-built vessels can not compete with British ships because the cost of building ships in American yards is excessively high on account of protection.

Witness the two steamers of the Boston Transportation Company, sold by Senator Lodge to the Panama canal. The people of the United States paid for those two vessels, which, by the way, they have not been able to use, $1,500,000. Ships of the same size and of British register have recently been sold at auction on the Pacific coast of Canada for less than $50,000.

But, because the high first cost of American-built ships prevents their competition with foreign freighters, the western workingman and farmer are to be taxed to subsidize New England ship owners, so that they may make low freight rates and compete.

This will be the first great scheme to loot the west. The tariff tricksters are well satisfied with the outcome of their sham revision. Watch their next move to loot the great inland states for the benefit of New England.

Scientific Robbery.

On the last day of the tariff session of congress Senator Dolliver made a striking point when, in denouncing the conference committee for killing the main provision of the tariff commission clause, he declared that congress was already served by an expert commission. He called attention to the fact that the beneficiaries of the respective schedules were all expert in their own lines; that they knew just how proposed changes in the duties would affect them; they knew just how to confuse the phraseology so that it would seem to mean what it did not mean. Yet these beneficiaries of the tariff were called or admitted to the most exclusive councils of the tariff makers; their advice was heard; their suggestions were heeded; often they were permitted to write their own schedules.

And it is true that the country has had this kind of an expert tariff commission ever since the system of protection was transformed into a system of graft. This commission has represented the interests that prey on the people. And when it is proposed that, at least, the people should have a commission to oppose these selfish experts the proposition is killed. Congress has said that it does not desire expert information on the side of the people. It is not for a scientific tariff; it is satisfied with scientific robbery.

As Our Neighbor Sees It.

A grimmer joke was never perpetrated than Mr. Aldrich's revised tariff on a people whose will in the matter was so well known that all the candidates in the recent presidential campaign declared themselves in favor of [illegible] Montreal Witness.

LITTLE FOR THE CONSUMER

Hard to See Where Republican Tariff Revision Has Benefited the Ordinary Man.

This much may be said of the new tariff act. On its face the law is somewhat more favorable to the American manufacturer than the Dingley act. It ought to cheapen some of the articles he uses. Finally, some of this cheapening may filter through to the consumer. But the consumer directly gets very little.

It seems probable that insofar as the law will affect prices the advances are likely to be more noticeable than the decreases.

For instance, the decreases in the steel schedule are not likely to affect prices. About the only goods on which the cost might be reduced are lumber, hoots, shoes, harness and other leather manufactures. Prices are pretty certain to be advanced as a result of the revision on cotton goods, hosiery, lemons, other tropical fruits, silks, chinaware and possibly for a time on print paper. Advances on woolens are expected because of the increasing monopoly of the American Woolen Company behind the tariff wall.

The Republican party pledged itself to a revision of the tariff "by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries."

When you think of it it is an astounding fact that in spite of this pledge no statement has ever been presented to either house of congress to show that the changes made in the proposed law were based on the differences in the cost of production. The fact is that only fragmentary testimony on this subject was obtained. The elaborate report on German wages from abroad failed to reach the house until after the tariff bill had been reported and no attention was paid to it whatever in the senate.

But They Do Know.

In the new tariff act the Republican party says to the voters of the United States that they do not know what they want. With this is coupled the declaration, running all through the bill, that if they do know what they voted for they shan't have it.

They asked for bread and the congress has given them a stone. They asked for revision downward in the interest of the consumer. What they get is the Dingley act with variations, some in the higher key and some in the lower, but the tune to which the masses are muicted is the same.

The American people never vote decisively, one way or the other, without knowing just what they are voting for. Last fall they voted to unshackle American industry and trade, to destroy the power of favored classes to levy forced tribute from all other classes, and, in tariff legislation, at least, to return to the Democratic principle of equal rights to all, special privileges to none.

They knew what they were voting for, and they have not forgotten it. Fortunately, they vote every two years on the membership of congress they will vote again 15 months from now.

One Result of New Tariff Act.

One result of the advance in the price of woolens, for which the country is indebted to the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, may be to curtail the quantity of goods now used in making young men's suits. Enough might be saved out of the skirts of the coat, the trimmings on the pockets and sleeves and the body and legs of the trousers to cut down the material about one-half. Of course, the undersized consumer would look upon this as a great hardship, but it is a condition and not a theory by which the wearer of woolen goods is confronted.

When President Taft says the Republican pledges have been kept possibly he means that they are being kept for future reference.

THE PENITENT KING

Manasses Is Restored to Jerusalem

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. E. Eaton.)

Scriptural Authority. — 2 Chron., chapter 33 and Apocryphal Book of Manasses' Prayer.

Manasses' Prayer.—The repentance and restoration of Manasses furnish the subject of many legendary stories. The Greek text which is the basis of the translation which constitutes the twelfth book of the Apocrypha is undoubtedly original, and not a mere translation from the Hebrew. The writer was well acquainted with the LXX. But beyond this there is nothing to determine the date at which he lived. . . . The allusion to the patriarchs (l. 5), appears to fix the authorship on a Jew; but the clear teaching on repentance points to some time not long before the Christian era. There is no indication of the place at which the prayer was written. The earliest reference to the prayer is contained in a fragment of Julius Africanus (cir. 221 A. D.), but it may be doubted whether the words in their original form clearly referred to the present composition. The prayer was never distinctly recognised as a canonical writing, though it was included in many manuscripts of the LXX and of the Latin version, and has been deservedly retained among the Apocrypha in authorised versions and by Luther. The Latin translation which occurs in Vulgate Manuscripts is not by the hand of Jerome.

SERMONETTE.

The ideal of the penitent's prayer is found in the 51st Psalm, credited to David, and perhaps familiar to the exiled king as he sat insackcloth and ashes by the rivers of Babylon and prayed that he might be restored to his Jerusalem.

"Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness; according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.

"Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

"For I acknowledge my transgression: and my sin is ever before me.

"Against thee, thee only, have I sinned and done this evil in thy sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.

"Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me.

"Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts; and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

"Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

"Make he to hear joy and gladness; that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice.

"Hide my face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.

"Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.

"Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me.

"Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thee free spirit.

"Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee.

"Deliver me from blood guiltiness, O God, thou God of my salvation; and my tongue shall sing aloud of thy righteousness.

"O Lord, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

"For thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it; thou delightest not in burnt offerings.

"The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

"Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion: build thou the walls of Jerusalem.

"Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt offering and whole burnt offering: then shall they offer bullocks upon thine altar."

THE STORY.

THE rattle of that chain!

Would it ever chafe less upon that tender soul?

It did not seem as though he, the proud Manasses, king of Judah, could ever become used to the indignity. Away off in that Babylonian exile the thing which cut deepest into his heart was the consciousness that he bore upon his arms and his legs the iron shackles of Sennacherib.

And because he could not hear to hear the clank, clank of his chains he made as few moves as possible, and always muffled the sound of the chain in the folds of his robes.

"Fetters, when I should he holding the scepter," he exclaimed one day, petulantly. He had come to his favorite nook by the side of one of the beautiful streams which flowed near Babylon. His heart was still rebellious, and he refused to harbor the thought for an instant that he was to blame and had brought his troubles upon his own head. No, instead he persisted in his efforts to justify his own conduct. If serving the gods of the nations about had brought these evils upon him how was it that Sennacherib had grown great and powerful serving practically the same deities? he asked himself over and over again.

But the man who argues has already more than half admitted that there is a doubt in his heart as to the course he has pursued, and so it was with Manasses, and as the days lengthened into weeks and the weeks into months, there crept into his heart more and more the consciousness of the utter folly and wickedness of his course, and remorse filled his soul because of his horrible sin in offering up his beautiful son upon the outstretched arms of the god Moloch.

"What hath he ever done for you?" came the query into his own heart. "No, but he hath robbed you of your son," continued the inner voice in argument.

The clank of the chain sounded at that moment and again the angry emotions took full possession of him, but these feelings gave way to the accusing voice of conscience which continued to speak, condemning him for his sins and the sins into which he had led the nation.

"Would God hear him if he prayed?" came the thought one day. Moloch, whom he had served so faithfully, had not heard him when he had prayed to him, neither had he come to his help.

"Would God do better?"

"O Lord, Almighty God of our Fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and of their righteous seed," he exclaimed in the agony of despair one day, looking up to heaven and holding up the manacled hands as though he would show them to God.

"Thou art the Lord God, indeed," he exclaimed, after a silence, "thou art he who hast made heaven and earth, with all the ornament thereof; who hast bound the sea by the word of thy commandment; who hast shut up the deep, and sealed it by thy terrible and glorious name; whom all men fear, and tremble before thy power." His voice broke as he spoke the words. "Was this true?" he asked himself. Then almost fiercely as though he would strengthen his faith, he cried:

"Yea, it is true, for the majesty of thy glory cannot be borne, and thine angry threatening towards sinners is importable. But thy merciful promise is unmeasurable and unsearchable; for thou art the most high Lord, of great compassion, long-suffering, very merciful and repentest of the evils of men. Thou, O Lord, according to thy goodness, hast promised repentance and forgiveness to them that have sinned against thee; and of thine infinite mercies hast appointed repentance unto sinners, that they be saved."

The thought as it swept over him and he gave expression to it in words brought much of comfort and encouragement, and he continued his supplication:

"Thou, therefore, O Lord, thou art the God of the just, hast not appointed repentance to the just, as to Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, which have not sinned against thee. But thou hast appointed repentance unto me that am a sinner: for I have sinned above the number of the sands of the sea. My transgressions, O Lord, are multiplied, and I am not worthy to behold and see the height of the heaven for the multitude of mine iniquities. I am bowed down with mnay iron hands, that I cannot lift up mine head, neither have any release; for I have provoked thy wrath, and done evil before thee."

Again his voice broke under the strain of emotion which filled his heart, for now that the currents of his life had set in Godward everything was swept before them, bringing a realizing sense of the awful sins of which he had been guilty.

"I did not thy will, neither kept I thy commandments. I have set up abominations, and have multiplied offenses. Now, therefore, I how the knee of mine heart, beseeching thee of grace. I have sinned, O Lord, I have sinned, and I acknowledge mine iniquities. Wherefore I humbly beseech thee, forgive me, O Lord, forgive me and destroy me not with mine iniquities. Be not angry with me forever, by reserving evil for me; neither condemn me into the lower parts of the earth. For thou art the God, even the God of them that repeat; and in me thou wilt show all thy goodness. For thou wilt have me, that am unworthy, according to thy great mercy. Therefore I will praise thee forever all the days of my life: for all the powers of the heavens do praise thee, and thine is the glory forever and ever. Amen."

As he finished, the query crept into his heart:

"Had God heard?"

In silence he sat there, given up wholly to his thoughts, and he did not hear the approaching footsteps, or note that a messenger from the king was standing near.

"The king hath sent to release thee," spake the voice.

With a startled cry of joy, Manasses leaped to his feet. Could it be true, or was he only dreaming. Thus did he wonder while the chains were being cut to release his hands and his feet, but on the long journey back to his beloved Jerusalem, where he was again to rule, he knew that God had heard his prayer and had answered.

True Faith.

True faith in God such as will always help, grows out of knowing his character. It is built on the three words, "God is love," and thus it is a heart-faith, or love-faith. It is a faith that God will ever do what is in accordance with love, and nothing contrary to it. It is a faith that as God is love, so he will be towards you everything that love can mean—pitiful, sympathetic and helpful. In return it trusts and does not worry, no matter what the circumstances are.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Mrs. Susan Clutterbuck entertained her brothers, W. B. and F. H. Arnold, last Monday. The latter lives in Owensboro, and had not visited his old home before in five years.

Mr. Thomas Rice, of Richwood neighborhood, was a caller at this office, last Friday. He is one of the substantial citizens of his part of the county, and a most pleasant gentleman to meet.

Miss Bernice Corbin and Virginia Botts, of Belleview, were guests of Miss Alice Carver several days the past week, and on Sunday Miss Alice entertained most delightfully at dinner in their honor, a large number of guests being present.

R. S. Cowen and wife entertained the following last Sunday: Rev. H. C. Wayman, of Walton; J. A. Riddell and wife, of Hebron; Leonard Kite and wife, of Waterloo; Harry McWethy and wife, of Petersburg, and Thomas Rice and wife, and Kirtley Rice, of Burlington.

R. R. Revill, wife and son, are guests of the family of his parents, J. C. Revill and wife near town. Mr. Revill is assistant receiving teller in the First National Bank, Cincinnati, and comes out to his father's about this time every year to spend his vacation and develop his muscle by a free use of the briar scythe and cross-cut saw.

Miss Sarrah Gayle Furnish, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Furnish, of Covington, celebrated her eleventh birthday, last Saturday, at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Revill, near town. Quite a number of her little friends were present and a most delightful time was the result, no pains having been spared to make the little folks have a good time.

Crop conditions in the United States on August 1, 1909, were, in the aggregate, slightly higher, than on August 1, 1908, and moderately higher than a ten year average condition of all crops on August 1. In addition to the higher condition the acreage of cultivated crops is about 1.6 per cent greater than the last year, so says a general review of crop conditions, issued by the agricultural department. Winter wheat, spring wheat, corn, oats, rye, flax and grapes were better than last year and the ten year average barley and potatoes were better than the conditions on August 1 last year, but slightly below the average condition.

The attendance from this part of the county at the Erlanger fair, last week, was light until Saturday morning, when it caused a considerable stir. Quite a large number of people passed through town coming to see the East Bend and Belleview [illegible]

The first home-grown watermelons of the season came in last week.

Lightning is getting in its fatal work in numerous instances in this State this summer.

The weather last week was all that the management of the Erlanger fair could have desired.

The date for the beginning of Burlington public white school has not been fixed yet. Miss Lucy Russell will teach it.

A considerable per cent of the tobacco crop has been cut, the weather last week being especially favorable for that work.

Jerry Delph kept his saw mill very busy several days last week, and cut considerable lumber. The mill had the proper hum.

W. C. Johnson and son passed through one day last week to Idlewild, where their saw mill is doing a big business. Mr. Johnson is one of the best saw mill men in the county.

Fine Sunflowers.

Marce Riddell has the largest and handsomest exhibit of sun-flowers in this part of the country. This is no joke.

Albert Conner took a couple of shots at a thief, who attempted to raid his chicken coop about 2:30 a. m. Tuesday. He is not certain but what some of the shot entered the thief's hide.

Three Funerals One Day.

H. G. Blanton, the Erlanger undertaker, had three funerals last Wednesday, one at Florence, one at Independence and one at Burlington. He managed to give each his personal attention.

Youell a Successful Exhibitor.

C. H. Youell, of Limaburg neighborhood, was a caller at this office, last Saturday. Mr. Youell was a very successful exhibitor at both Lawrenceburg and Erlanger. On hogs he made nearly a clean sweep at Erlanger.

The Capital Fair.

The Capital Fair will be held at Frankfort, beginning August 31st and continuing five days. This will be its first exhibition and an effort will be made to have it take rank at once as one of the leading fairs in Kentucky.

The old Dun Made Good Again.

C. C. Clore, who resides two and a half miles out on the East Bend road captured the running-walk premium with his dun horse at the Erlanger fair, last Thursday. The horse has taken $128 in premiums, which amount he will try to further increase this week at Florence fair.

Stalks Without Ears.

It is said that in some fields of corn on many stalks there are no ears, which is accounted for by the corn being too thick on the ground. Had there not been an abundance of rain this season nearly all the corn in the county would have been entirely too thick on the ground.

Five Applicants.

There were five applicants for certificates on examination, last Friday and Saturday, viz: Mrs. Madge Wood, of Ohio; Miss Mendell, of Indiana; Rev. E. V. Brooks Blanche Kelly and Keene Souther, of this county. It was the last examination that Supt. Snyder will conduct.

The Crime of Idleness.

A Cheap Barometer.

Take a wide-mouthed bottle of good clear glass and fill it with fresh water. Then put into it two teaspoonfuls of finely powdered alum. In fair weather and when it is likely to continue fair, the liquid will be clear, but at the approach of cloudy or rainy weather the mixture will become feathery looking. This barometer will indicate a change of weather thirty-six hours in advance.

Reduced Rates.

The C. N. O. T. P. Railroad will make the rate of one fare for the round trip from Cincinnati to Lexington, August 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29th, 1909, on account of the Florence fair. On each of the above dates there will be a special train leaving Ludlow at 9 a. m. Friday and Saturday, August 27 and 28th, there will be a special train leaving [illegible] coach, arriving at Florence at 12:45 p. m.

PROF. E. L. DIX.

The above is a picture of Prof. E. L. Dix, of Morehead, Rowan county, who has been employed to teach the County High School at Burlington. He is 26 years old and married, his wife being a native of Rowan county, while he was born and raised in Bracken county. Prof. Dix has had considerable experience in teaching the high school branches, and comes well recommended by those among whom he has labored. His school in Burlington will begin on Monday, September 13th. Thi school will be tuition free to anys white pupil in Boone county who is ready for and desires to be instructed in the high school branches, the only cost to those who live so far from town that they cannot attend from home being their board and books. It is hoped that the school will receive a liberal support, as there are a great many pupils in this county who should be attending high school, and the advantage of the free tuition it will give ought to be an inducement for them to patronize it. Burlington is a good place for that class of school which an effort is being made to establish, and her citizens should begin at once to boost it, all working together to the end that it be made a success. Let the pupils, as many as possible be ready and start the first day that the school may be put in good working order at once.

All Going to the Fair.

All roads lead to the fair at Florence this week, which is an annual reunion of families in many respects. It is one of the best places in Kentucky for people to spend three or four days meeting old acquaintances and forming new ones. Plenty of inviting shade in which to shelter from the hot rays of the sun, while the amphitheatre affords seats for many thousands, and is so arranged that the animals on exhibition are never out of view of the spectators, while the spacious promenade is a favorite resort of hundreds of young people who enjoy the company of eachother more than they do the show in the ring. Everything is conducted in an orderly manner, there being nothing objectionable to the most exacting of its patrons. All arrangements are made for lawful and legitmate amusements, and the fair is kept in the category of a country fair pure and simple. Among the good features of the week will be the nice and tempting refreshments served at the stands by Charles Clore, while Charles Garnett and good wife, who will have charge of the dining hall, will administer to the demands in a manner that will satisfy the greatest and hardest to please epicure. For a good dinner during the fair try the dining hall.

Religious Conventions.

The convention of the Christian churches of Boone county, will be held with the church at Walton on Saturday, September 11th. A conference of the delegates will be held on Friday night preceding the convention. A lengthy program, embracing numerous interesting topics, has been issued for the convention.

A Sunday school convention will be held with the Lutheran church at Hebron on Wednesday and Thursday, September 7th and 8th. A lengthy program has been prepared for the meeting which will be one of great interest to the Sunday schools. All are invited to attend.

Oiled the Street.

Having oiled Pike street Florence people are not annoyed with the dense clouds of dust usually caused by the travel to and from the fair. It is claimed it is cheaper to oil than to sprinkle the streets, and there is no inconvenience resulting from the oiling after the work has been done a few days, but at first it is terrific.

The Hoosier Boy Won.

The "Hoosier Boy," owned by Row Whitlock, of Rising Sun the fastest Motor Boat on the Ohio river, won the Grand Free for all motor boat race at Peori, Ill., a purse of $500, from a field of five speedy starters. The race was put on by the Western Power Boat Association and there was some class to running. Two of the contestants met with accidents by running into floating snags, three boats finishing.

Hogs Very Scarce.

A great many farmers in this county will have to buy hogs to fatten for their meat, or purchase meat after it is prepared. Thus are the effects of last year's drought still being felt by the farmers, as the scarcity of corn resulting from its effects caused the selling off of hogs until not enough remain in the county to supply meat for next year.

One Copy Enough.

The Pendletonian, published at Falmouth by J. B. Williams, is, undoubtedly, one of the best local papers in Kentucky, and Bro. Williams is overdoing a good thing when he, each week, mails two copies of his excellent publication to this office. One copy of each issue is sufficient at this office, Bro. Williams, but don't fail to get that here.

Tobacco had commenced rotting in the patch, but the dry weather of last week checked it, and not much damage to the crop resulted.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.

CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

BUILDING OF CITIES.

The conference of national interests on the subject of the building of cities, at Washington, has taken up a big subject, says the Buffalo Express. Just what progress it can make with an important problem remains to be seen. We all realize that almost no cities are built as they should be. Almost no cities are built in circumstances that will permit them to be built as they should be. The few exceptions are cities like Gary, Ind., which is built from nothing to a full grown community at once. Most cities are merely a matter of growth. They have small beginnings, and as the community grows it provides for its immediate needs as they arise. The small community cannot afford to look very far ahead. A comparatively few years at the most is all that can be considered. So when the community outgrows the needs for which it provided a few years before, it has simply to do the work over again on a little larger scale. If the modern city could be planned and built at the outset on a scale which would probably provide for its needs many years ahead, then it would avoid many of the evils from which the average city suffers. And it could safeguard its own rights and have the enjoyment of many improved conditions which would be very difficult and very costly to obtain at the present time.

Amid many complaints that professions are overcrowded and trades over-supplied with workmen, it is refreshing to learn that there are educational branches badly undermanned or undermomaned, says the Los Angeles Herald. When the new era in education was begun, with a recognition of the importance of the gymnasium, the playground and the football field in the education of a "complete American," the demand for medical inspectors and examiners, school nurses, supervisors and directors of physical education, supervisors of instruction for playground work and for instructors in athletics was increased steadily until now it far exceeds the supply.

The overturning of a motor boat was the cause of the drowning of four persons at Coshocton, O. Small power craft have become so popular that "landlubbers" are in need of warning concerning the dangers of fast going on the water. Motorboats are mere cockleshells which sink under the weight of their machinery when they capsize; and their lightness makes them extremely sensitive to sudden alterations in weights. There should be air chambers at the bow and stern to provide buoyancy in emergencies, after the manner in which metal rowboats and sailing boats are constructed.

Bolivia is said to have assumed a defiant attitude, refusing to apologize to Argentina for the affronts offered to the latter's diplomatic representative because of the boundary line decision. Is Bolivia acting the part of a spoiled and sulky child, or is it the prevailing idea down there that the only arbitration which "goes" is that in which the finding is on the Bolivian side?

Extreme summer heat is a very hard thing to bear and entails real suffering, but the number of deaths and prostrations from the heat bear a very small proportion to the total population. This is a fact which ought to encourage people to cultivate endurance, which really lessens the affliction as much as worry and dwelling upon it increases suffering.

A noblewoman of Austria-Hungary is looking for an American husband of riches. Considering what success the titled men have made of annexing American dollars through matrimonial means, it is no wonder that the women are trying to get into the game. But the latter has small chance of competing with the American girl on the latter's own preserves.

France appears to have caught the warship fever. The cabinet has approved a program which involves the expenditure of $600,000,000 in ten years for naval construction and the building of twelve big battleships. That country is thrifty and has money in abundance, if not "to burn." But is not that a costly proceeding even for a nation so well fixed?

With the prospect of Indian rebellion seeking expression of hated rule in assassination, Great Britain can now sympathize with Russia in that country's terrorist agitation by the anarchists. Hitherto England has been safe from attacks by this class, on account of the comparative asylum afforded them. Now the danger has come from another source, and the nation has awakened with a shock from its dream of immunity from political assassins.

'SUTTON SLEW SELF'

"EITHER COMMITTED SUICIDE OR ACCIDENTALLY TOOK OWN LIFE" IS VERDICT.

HIS RIVALS ARE EXONERATED

Inquiry Court Decides That Lieutenant Was to Blame for Own Death—Mother Will Ask Congress to Start New Probe.

Washington.—That Lieut. James Sutton of the United States marine corps killed himself accidentally or with suicidal intent is the finding of the court of inquiry which has been approved by Acting Secretary Winthrop of the navy and so far as the department is concerned the case is closed.

Counsel for the Suttons intimated, however, after the court's decision had become definitely known, that they were far from satisfied with the verdict, and that they probably would take the issues involved to congress with a view of having a full hearing of the case by a committee of that body.

In part the court says:

"Lieut. Sutton is directly and solely responsible for his own death, which was self-inflicted, either intentionally or in an effort to shoot one of the persons restraining him, and his death was not caused by any other injury whatever."

The court also finds: That Lieut. Utley failed in his duty as senior officer present, under article 266, United States navy regulations, 1909, in permitting Lieut. Sutton to run away and arm himself instead of calling on those present for assistance and following Lieut. Sutton, preventing his arming himself, by force if necessary, and turning him over to the custody of the officer of the day.

That Lieut. Bevan, officer of the guard, failed in his duty as officer of the guard in not disarming Lieut. Sutton by force, while in front of his (Sutton's) tent.

That Lieut. Willing, the officer of the day, failed in his duty as officer of the day in not immediately assisting by force in helping to disarm Lieut. Sutton when he arrived on the scene before the fatal shot was fired.

That the charges of wilful murder and conspiracy to conceal it, made by the complainant, Mrs. Sutton, mother of Lieut. Sutton, are purely imaginary and unsupported by even a shadow of evidende, truth or reason.

The court recommends, however, that in view of the youth and decided inexperience of Lieuts. Utley, Willing and Bevan at the time, and of the altogether unusual conditions of excitement, threats and danger during the aforementioned fray, that no further proceedings be taken.

The report is signed by J. Hood, commander United States navy, president of the board, and Henry Leonard, major, United States marine corps.

BILLION FOR ROCKEFELLER

Amount Represents His Fortune at End of Ten Years—Powerless to Prevent It.

New York.—Think how you would feel if you knew you would be the world's first billionaire at the end of the next ten years; that you are powerless to prevent the growth of your own wealth even though you have given away $130,000,000. This is the fate that awaits John D. Rockefeller at the end of the next ten years.

Standard Oil stock sold at 712 Wednesday, the highest price it has reached since the panic of 1907. The stock has risen 322 points from the low ebb of 390, at which it sold on November 4, 1907. Like a snowball rolling down hill, Rockefeller's wealth is steadily growing and growing and he is as powerless to stop it even if he had the wishes as he would be to check the revolution of the planets.

The enormous, inconceivable accumulation of wealth of the mild-mannered, inscrutable sphinx of millions has gone steadily on despite the fact that a short time ago an estimate of his public charities placed them at the stupendous total of $130,000,000.

The latest approximately accurate estimates available place his fortune in 1905 at least $550,000,000. In 1900 it was $400,000,000. This is an increase for the five years of $150,000,000. At this ratio the Rockefeller fortune is to-day about $700,000,000. In 1914 still at the same ratio of increase, it will be about $850,000,000, and in 1919, when the oil king reaches his eightieth year, it will have reached the stupendous, brain-giddying total of $1,000,000,000—an inconceivable sum.

40 FLEA PEORIA BOAT FIRE

PASSENGERS AND CREW ESCAPE FROM BLAZING STEAMER.

Women and Children in Panic—Vessel Totally Destroyed—Two Are Injured.

Peoria, Ill.—Although not fully recovered from their fright all of the 25 passengers, who with the crew of 15, had a close call for their lives when the steamer Fred Swain burned to the water's edge Friday afternoon off Averyville, have left for their homes. Of the two persons injured only one was in a serious condition and it is regarded as marvelous that none met death.

The injured are: Joseph Casrider, Paducah, Ky., engineer, seriously burned about the face and body, and Charles Reicheberger, Peoria, right arm broken. The loss is estimated at $35,000, $30,000 of which is on the vessel. Several of the passengers lost all their personal belongings.

The escapes from the burning vessel were almost miraculous. The majority of the passengers were women and children and once the fire was discovered issuing from a stateroom on the second deck panic reigned. To add to the horror, the ropes supporting the immense gang plank which had been lowered to enable those aboard to board the score of row boats that had hurriedly been put out from shore, burned, letting about fifteen persons, including several women and children, into the water. Tom Powers, saloonkeeper of this city, and E. A. Caron of Worcester, Mass., both of whom were on the plank in an effort to quiet the panic-stricken people, each saved the lives of two children, half carrying and half swimming with the little tots on their back and shoulders to old tree stumps, to await the arrival of rescuers.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Eugene Furbish, cabin girl, on opening the door of a stateroom. She at once spread the alarm but all efforts to subdue the flames proved fruitless, the fire spreading with alarming rapidity. Capt. Swain, on realizing that all hopes for the vessel were gone ordered Pilot Martin Huston to beach the boat and instructed his crew to deal out life preservers.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO RACE

Machine Dashes Through Fence as it Travels at High Speed in Indianapolis Contest.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Two lives were lost and two records broken during the inauguration of the Indianapolis Motor speedway. William A. Bourque of Springfield, Mass., driver of the Knox car in the 250-mile race, and Harry Holcomb of Grandville, Mass., his mechanician, were killed when their machine dashed through a fence.

Barney Oldfield, driving a high-powered Benz, covered a mile in 0:42 1-10, breaking De Palma's mark of 0:51, and Louis Chevrolet in a Buick negotiated ten miles in the marvellous time of 8:55 4-10, cutting Oldfield's time of 9:12—both of these are new American track marks.

Robert Burman won the 250-mile race, the contest that cost Bourque and Holcomb their lives.

LOEB TO SUE UNION HEAD

Editor of Publication in Which "Audit Story" Appeared, Will Explain Stillings Matter.

Washington.—William Loeb, Jr., collector of the port of New York and former secretary to the president of the United States, has threatened to sue Samuel De Nedrey, editor of a local trade's union paper. In a letter to De Nedrey Collector Loeb vigorously protests against an article recently published in the paper stating that Mr. Loeb contemplates appointing Charles A. Stillings, former public printer, to a position of trust in the New York customs service, and which concluded with the question: "Who was at the head of the audit system?"

It is understood Mr. Loeb took offense at what he believes to be a veiled insinuation that he was interested in the audit system which was inaugurated at the government printing office by Mr. Stillings, and which, ultimately, was responsible primarily for the resignation of Mr. Stillings as public printer.

Mr. De Nedrey says he was absent from the city when the article appeared in his paper, and does not know how it got into print. In the next issue of his paper he says there will be an explanation, which, in his opinion, will satisfy Mr. Loeb. "If it does not," he added, "I shall govern myself according to the circumstances."

At the time of Mr. Stillings' dismissal as public printer Mr. De Nedrey took an active part editorially in discussing conditions at the big printery. He knows of no basis, he says, for an allegation that Mr. Loeb was connected with the audit system, and sees no reason to criticise him for his attitude toward organized labor.

TO FREE RICH WOMAN THIEF

Deneen and Pardon Board Asked to Liberate Mrs. Romadka—Was a Millionaire's Wife.

Chicago.—After two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary at Joliet, Mrs. Evelyn C. Romadka, perpetrator of a string of daring burglaries and former wife of Charles L. Romadka, a multi-millionaire manufacturer of Milwaukee, probably will be released next month.

Another chapter was added to the story of the weird life of Mrs. Romadka, which is even more fantastic than that of Hornung's fiction character "Raffles," when it became known that friends of her girlhood days, of Fond du Lac and Oshkosh, Wis., had petitioned Gov. Deneen and the Illinois board of pardons asking for the liberation of the former school-teacher and millionaire's wife.

Undaunted by the wealthy Romadka family's refusal to assist in gaining the release of the woman, whose prison confinement has undermined her health, her aged father, P. J. Caine, who owns a large rubber plantation in Mexico, has declared he will spend his entire fortune in his daughter's behalf.

FALLING WALLS

SPREAD BLAZE THAT RAGED IN DECATUR, ILL., FOR 12 HOURS.

EIGHTEEN BUILDINGS DESTROYED

Water Famine Caused By Breaking of Dam in Sangamon River Added To the Peril of the Situation—Loss Estimated at Over $1,250,000.

Decatur, Ill.—Following a fire that destroyed over $1,000,000 worth of property and destroyed 18 buildings in the business district, early Sunday morning, came a water famine on a hot Sunday, as a result of the supply in the city reservoir being exhausted. It was necessary to shut off large sections of the city for the better part of the day.

The breaking of the dam in the Sangamon river and the drought made a combination that for a time was alarming.

The fire raged from 1 o'clock Sunday morning until nearly noon, and Sunday night practically an entire square is in a mass of ruins.

Conservative estimates place the loss at $1,250,000, with insurance of 60 per cent. The heaviest loser was the Morehouse & Wells Co., in whose building the fire started. Crossed electric wires in the elevator shaft are blamed.

This six-story building, it was thought, would hold the fire, but the falling walls started fires on both sides. Eighteen buildings were destroyed and a dozen damaged.

RIOTING AT M'KEES ROCKS,

In Which at Least Six Persons Were Killed and Forty Wounded—Fight Started By Strikers.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Frightful rioting marked the scene of the McKees Rocks car strike Sunday night. At least six are dead and perhaps 40 wounded.

In addition to these there are thought to have been a score of strikers who were, perhaps, fatally shot but who were hurried away by the mob.

The fight took place about 10 o'clock, when a large body of strikers discovered Exler on a street car. Exler was formerly a Pittsburg policeman, and, though he was doing duty as a deputy sheriff, the strikers were evidently of the opinion that he was in the mill as a strikebreaker, he having admittedly served as a strikebreaker at different strikes previously.

The strikers had been stopping all the cars during the evening, and, when they found Exler on one of them their rage knew no bounds.

Aged Woman Burned To Death.

El Paso, Tex.—Believing that a witch brought on the smallpox epidemic that caused the death of many of their children, the Indians of Buejotzingo, near Puebla, Mex, it was learned Sunday, burned to death an aged woman, Juane Remirez. They blockaded all the exits of her house, set fire to it and watched her perish in the flames. The woman was very old, and was regarded by both Mexicans and Indians as a witch.

Lost Package of Jewelry Found.

New York.—Nearly $100,000 worth of diamonds, lost last June, were found literally being kicked about a cheap boarding house in Third street, Jersey City. The diamonds were lost aboard the Erie ferryboat, Passaic, and Dreicer & Co., jewelers, of 50 Fifth avenue, have been offering $5,000 reword for their recovery ever since.

Wiping Out the Wildcat Tiers

ARRESTING ILLICIT DISTILLERS

A TYPICAL MOONSHINE STILL

Monnshining is no longer the profitable industry that it used to be. According to the estimate of the internal revenue office at Washington, not more than one gallon of unlawful whisky is made to-day for every 20 gallons produced 15 years ago. This, of course, is the result of persistent and unrelenting warfare waged by the government against "wildcatters," who have been driven to take refuge in a comparatively few inaccessible localities, usually mountainous.

Thanks to these changed conditions the number of revenue agents killed by moonshiners does not now average so much as one a year. A marked improvement this, as may be judged from the fact that in a period of 11 years, from 1871 to 1882, 35 government deputies engaged in raiding stills were slain, and 61 wounded. Three consecutive years, when the illicit business was most fiercely resisting interference, witnessed the deaths of 25 raiders. But the figures quoted do not include deputy marshals killed while arresting moonshiners; and, as for the "wildcatters" themselves, no official record has ever been kept of the mortality among them, though it was undoubtedly large.

During a period of five years, from 1877 to 1881, no fewer than 5,000 illicit stills were seized, and 8,000 moonshiners were arrested. When it is considered that the product of the average "wildcat" plant is five gallons a day, it will be obvious that this meant a very considerable loss of tax to the government. Roughly speaking, in the last 30 years about 30,000 stills have been captured, the greatest number in 1898, when 2,400 were destroyed.

In the good old time moonshine whisky was commonly shipped for long distances for sale. Saloon keepers bought considerable quantities, the stuff being fetched usually in wagons from the rural districts where it was made, hidden beenath an ostensible load of vegetables, or occasionally carried on muleback. In the latter case two kegs in a long sack were slung across the back of the animal, and the proprietor of the fluid merchandise was, as a rule, ready to shoot if an officer of the law attempted to halt him. Nowadays, however, very little illicit liquor is sent into the "settlements," and the sale of it is almost wholly local.

The monshine still is always located in some inacessible spot—perched on a cliff that may easily be defended by a couple of men against a score, or hidden in a cavern underground, or concealed amid thick woods in a defile between hills so lofty that the curling smoke tells no tale to the keen-eyed government raiders. Plenty of cold water—the one thing absolutely indispensable—is supplied by a mountain streamlet. As for apparatus, all that is needed is a few wooden casks, a copper kettle and a coil of metal tubing. Often the kettle is extemporized out of two or three square yards of sheet copper. The casks, too, are as likely as not to be home-made. But the metal tubing must be purchased in town, and is so precious that when not in actual use, it is carefully hidden.

The whisky-making process is simple enough. From the nearest mill is obtained a quantity of cornmeal, with which to fill the casks. Some spent beer is poured upon the meal and, when the resulting fermentation has gone far enough, the "mash" is dumped by pailfuls into the kettle. When the mash is heated over fire, the alcohol passes in vapor through the coils of metal, duly connected for the purpose, which, being surrounded by cold water, causes the vapor to condense, coming out the other end of the tube in the shape of whisky.

A big distillery can make whisky for thirty-five or forty cents a gallon, but, owing to the primitive character of his plant, and also to the fact that production is on so small a scale, the liquor turned out by the moonshiner costs him anywhere from sixty to seventy-five cents a gallon. Thus he could not compete at all with the great liquor factories, were it not for the fact that the latter officers are obliged to pay a tax of $1.10 a gallon on the stuff they manufacture. The law which the "wildcatter" condemns as unjust, and which in its operation he resists so violently is in reality the sole support of his illicit business—a fact which, oddly enough, seems never to occur to the moonshiner.

Nearly all of the output of the moonshine stills is corn whisky. Some peach brandy and apple brandy is made unlawfully, however, and in one state considerable quantities of a low-proof rum is obtained by primitive methods from the distillation of the skimmings, known as "pottins," of the kettles used for boiling molasses in the sirup mills. Perhaps the most picturesque "wildcatting" done at the present time is conducted on isolated "hammocks" among the swampy lands of the flowerp peninsula by natives who distill from "pottins" a wretchedly cheap intoxicant for more or less local consumption.

So ingeniously are illicit stills concealed that they would be discovered by revenue officers comparatively seldom, were it not for the help of hired informers. Strange to say, even in the most remote fastnesses of the mountains there are always to be found men who will accept from Uncle Sam this kind of employment—an employment extremely dangerous, inasmuch as those who undertake it are exceedingly likely to be murdered in revenge. In a number of instances their houses have been burned, and they themselves, when not killed, have been whipped nearly to death by the moonshiners they have betrayed.

Such informers receive from $5 to $10 for every still they point out. The government pays about $11,000 per annum for the hire of natives for this kind of work, and to employ possemen to help the deputy marshals in making arrests. At the present time the loss of tax to the government by illicit distilling is reckoned at only about $100,000 a year—a small fraction of what it used to be—and it is estimated that, including pay of revenue officers and incidental expenses, the entire cost of "wildcatting" to the treasury of the United States is not more than $150,000 annually.

There is an old sayinf to the effect that one moonshine still will demoralize any community for a distance of three miles in every direction. The liquor it turns out, being sold and drank fresh from the worm, is the devil's own brew—a kind of firewater that makes men crazy. It is accountable for most of the murderous feuds that have terrorized many districts for generations. Owing to a growing perception of which facts, there has come about a change in popular sentiment in most regions where "wildcatting" was formerly countenanced and supported—a change so far adverse as to have greatly helped in the suppression of the industry.

Even yet, however, there are localities in which the revenue officers cannot set foot without great danger. No sentiment in favor of fair play suggests to the moonshining mountaineer the notion of fighting against the law in the open. He prefers to lie in ambush and to take pot shots at the government agent. When a party of raiders arrives in the neighborhood notification of the fact is spread far and wide by the blowing of horns, and sometimes armed men will assemble in force to defend a still against attack. Under such circumstances many a desperate battle has been fought. Indeed, the "revenuer" carries his life in his hands at all times, and he knows how to use his pistols, whether running afoot or riding at a gallop, while with his rifle, which carries an ounce ball a thousand yards with precision, he is a dead shot.

Nobody goes to the still to buy liquor. Anybody in the neighborhood can get it by trading cornmeal for it. If money is lacking—three bushels of meal being deemed an equivalent for one gallon of "corn juice." But most commonly it is known to the people of the vicinity that bottles or jugs may be filled from a barrel of the stuff kept at a certain farmhouse; or occasionally a cask of whisky stands under a tree not far from the public road, the person in charge of it hailing those who pass by. Or, again, one may learn of a spot in which an empty flask or jug may be left, with money—to be afterwards found there duly filled.

In those parts of the country where "blockading" is practiced the people are usually very poor, and the destruction of a still is likely to be a severe misfortune to the owner.

GLEANED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Fayette County Grand Jury Makes Exhaustive Report to Circuit Court, Criticising Methods of Magistrates and Others.

Lexington, Ky.—The Fayette county grand jury, which was impaneled on July 5, made an exhaustive report to the circuit court and was dismissed. The grand jury criticises the magistrates, claiming to have found that numerous persons have been jailed on trivial offenses classed by the magistrates as felonious cases. It brands the practice as "a fee-getting system which dries up the workhouse and fills the county jail with trivial, baliless, hold-over cases, which is a leaden yoke of needless expense to the county," and corrective legislation is recommended. The fiscal court, the mayor and the board of public works are also severely criticised and censured because of the condition of the street railway, the crematory, etc. The county jail is declared to be in an unsatisfactory condition. The asylum, reform school, city jail and county infirmary are commended. The Blue Grass Fair association is censured because of the sale of liquor during the recent fair, and the issuance of county and government licenses by Judge Bullock and Internal Revenue Collector Roberts is declared to have been high-handed. Commonwealth's Attorney Allen is called upon to summon every gambler and every person who set up and encouraged a game into the presence of the Fayette circuit court, and demand that the houses, which were all closed by order of Mayor Skain in April, never be reopened. It was found that there was little or no gaming going on at the present time. It is recommended that proper steps be taken to separate saloons and restaurants so that the former may be kept strictly closed on Sunday and that no subterfuge for the defeat of the law can be found in the latter. High license for saloons is also recommended.

WILL SHOW CONSPIRACY.

So Says Attorney in Injunction Case to Prevent Adoption of Water Contract.

Lexington, Ky.—At the resumption of the hearing on the Hostetter plea for injunction to prevent the adoption by the city of the proposed Lazarus 25-year water contract in circuit court, Charles H. Stoll, attorney for the plaintiff, made declaration that he would show before the close of the evidence the existence of a conspiracy between certain city officials and the officers of the Water Co. to defraud the city. He further declared that he would show that the Water Co. contributed largely to a fund to procure the nomination and election of Mayor John Skain and other city officials.

HAD COUNTERFEIT MONEY.

John Roberts, Arrested in Shelby County, Had $1,000,000 in Spurious Mexican Pesos.

Louisville, Ky.—Dreams of wealth centered in a brass-bound trunk containing a million dollars in counterfeit Mexican pesos were shattered for John C. and Marion Roberts, brothers, here, when Deputy United States Marshal William Blaydes arrested John Roberts in Shelby county with the money in his possession. Sitting in the office of the Secret Service Bureau, he coolly said that he would plead guilty at the October term of the federal court and seemed resigned about spending a majority of his years in the prison at Atlanta. He had only wanted to get rich, he said.

NINE INDICTMENTS RETURNED

By Grand Jury Against Blue Grass Fair Association for Having Sold Liquor.

Lexington, Ky.—The grand jury returned nine indictments against the Blue Grass Fair association, six charging the selling of liquor without license in local option territory, and three charging the sale of liquor to a minor. The indictments are based upon information furnished, it is said, by Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, state president of the W. C. T. U.

Hawesville, Ky.—The democrats met in mass convention and nominated: For county judge, G. D. Chambers; circuit clerk, W. W. Powers; county clerk, James Patterson; school superintendent, Urey Estes; representative, W. W. Spencer; jailer, Joe Harp; sheriff, E. G. Bannon; assessor, B. Blackford.

Lexington, Ky.—Asking for damages in the sum of $215,200 for the refusal of the independent tobacco buyers to receive 4,400 hhds. at the price stipulated in the contract the Burley Tobacco society has filed suit at Winchester.

Williamsburg, Ky.—C. E. Whitehead was drowned five miles below here in the Cumberland river. He was superintendent in charge of a gang building a bridge across the river for the Capital Construction Co., of Columbus, O.

INCREASE IN GROSS EARNINGS

Louisville & Nashville Railroad Shows Substantial Gain for Fiscal Year Ending June 30.

Louisville, Ky.—The statement of the Louisville & Nashville for the fiscal year ending June 30, shows gross earnings for the year of $46,426,891.45, as against $44,630,281.16 for the previous year. The operating expenses were $29,627,499.48, as compared with $33,694,967.17 for the previous fiscal year, leaving a net increase in earnings over the last fiscal year of $4,873,077.98. This is a remarkable statement in view of the fact that the country recently suffered a period of financial depression covering nearly two years. One item on which the Louisville & Nashville railroad has been able to save thousands of dollars is the building of the road's own engines at the shops in South Louisville. No lines were discontinued during the year and recently the road acquired the Louisville & Atlantic railroad.

A Day's Doings in Kentucky

Louisville, Ky. — Representatives from every state in the Union were present when the Embalmers' Examining Boards of North America began an annual convention here.

Morehead, Ky.—The employes of the brick plant at Haldeman, in this county, went out on a strike and the plant is being guarded by an armed force of deputy sheriffs.

Louisville, Ky.—The Negro State Bar association, of Kentucky, was formed here with a large charter membership. Albert S. White, a negro attorney of this city, was elected president.

Frankfort, Ky.—General orders have been issued by Adjt. Gen. Johnston to the officers of the First and Second regiments of the state guard to prepare for encampment in this city a part of this and next month.

Lexington, Ky.—At the fourth meeting of republicans and dissatisfied democrats it was decided to nominate an independent or fusion ticket for county officers, members of the legislature and members of the Lexington city council.

Stanford, Ky.—At Dry Fork Church, Casey county, John and Addie Chapman engaged in a fight with John Lutrell and family. Addie Chapman and Lutrell are dead, and John Chumley and wife, son-in-law and daughter of Lutrell, were both seriously wounded.

Louisville, Ky.—Warrants for the arrest of 45 members of the First Battalion of the First Kentucky regiment were issued at the instance of Col. Harry C. Grinstead, when the men failed to respond to roll call. The action has been sanctioned by Gov. Willson.

Fulton, Ky.—Believing they were burglars trying to break into his house, George Speed shot and instantly killed his brother-in-law, Abe Vinson, and fired upon but missed his sister, Vinson's wife. Mr. and Mrs. Vinson were guests at the home of Speed.

Louisville, Ky.—The first hogshead of 1909 burley tobacco was received in Louisville by C. A. Bridges & Co. at the Pickett warehouse. It represented the 1909 crop of John Switzer, of Trimble county. This is the earliest date on record for burley to make its appearance.

Frankfort, Ky.—State Fire Marshal Nelkirk telegraphed Insurance Commissioner Feil that indictments have been returned against Ike Bowman and his nephew, Will Bowman, in Munroe, charging them with arson. They are accused of burning the store of C. G. White.

Lexington, Ky.—It was semi-officially announced here that a six days' race meeting will be given here the last week in September or the first week of October by the Kentucky Racing association. The offer of a Cincinnati syndicate to lease the track will not be accepted.

Louisville, Ky.—Full programs for the annual convention of the Kentucky Bankers' association, which meets in this city October 6 and 7, have just been issued. Unusual interest attaches to the meeting, as it is the first since the "group system" of banking was adopted.

Warsaw, Ky.—The Burley Tobacco Society held an enthusiastic meeting here, Senator W. A. Byron, of Bracken county, and Fred Stucy, of Ghent, making lengthy addresses with telling effect, and 500 acres out of 800 in the county were signed to the pool. It is believed 95 per cent of the tobacco in the county will be signed up.

Louisville, Ky.—Booker T. Washington, president of the National Negro Business league, was tendered an ovation by an audience of 2,000 persons in McAuley's theater, when he arose to deliver an annual address to assembled delegates and their guests.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—The death in New York of John C. Latham, former citizen and beloved benefactor of this place, has caused great sorrow in this community. Mr. Latham made generous gifts to every school, college, church and public institution in the city.

D. B. WALLACE, Manager.

Mr. D. B. Wallace, of the Walton Equitable Bank and Trust Co.'s building. He is also authorized to receive subscriptions and collect other accounts.

A. M. Edwards was sick a part of last week.

Wm. Littrell, of near town, spent Thursday in Cincinnati on business.

Mrs. Mary Ryan, of Beaver Lick, visited friends here one day last week.

Clarence R. Jones and wife, of near town, spent part of last week in Cincinnati. Mr. Jones going there for special treatment, being in ill health.

Joseph Tandy and son, Joe, jr., of Carroll county, near Carrollton, spent part of last week here, guests of his sister, Mrs. D. T. Buck and family.

Harvey Nelson, who has been employed at Williamstown for several weeks at his trade of plastering, has returned home here having finished his contract.

Robert C. Green spent part of last week in Ohio looking at some Oxfordown sheep, expecting to make a purchase to add to his herd on his farm in Kenton county.

J. O. Griffith, the genial and popular autoist, of Beaver Lick, was here last Wednesday in his automobile, enjoying the pleasure of being with his many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Caldwell, of Rushville, Indiana, and Miss Letah Caldwell, of Price Hill, Cincinnati, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Doubman part of last week.

M. T. Wilson, of Latonia, spent part of the past week on his farm near Walton, the farm he purchased last spring from A. W. Smith and children. Lightning struck two hay stacks belonging to Mr. Wilson last week and both were consumed by the fire.

Oliver Shadler, a prominent and up-to-date farmer of near Beaver Lick, was kicked by a horse while at work on his farm last week, and while there were no bones broken the injury was such that Mr. Schadler was confined to his home for several days.

Geo. W. Taylor, of Morning View, Kenton county, has rented the Dr. S. M. Adams property at Walton, and will move here with his family Sept. 1st, for the purpose of having his children attend the Walton High School. They are excellent people and they will be gladly welcomed to Walton.

Dr. T. T. Metcalfe, the clever and popular treasurer of Kenton county with headquarters at Independence was here last Wednesday on business. Dr. Metcalfe is one of the men who believes in keeping up with the business procession and is a hustler from away back, but he never loses sight of being kind and genial to everybody.

Died—Lucian B. Coleman, an old and highly esteemed citizen of near Independence, Kenton county, died Aug. 16th, aged 88 years and nine months. The funeral took place Aug. 18th, and was very largely attended as Mr. Coleman was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends, he having been a very useful citizen. The funeral services were conducted by Revs. Wright and Lee of the M. E. church. Four grown children survive the deceased. Dr. C. T. Coleman of Walton, is a grandson of the deceased and was present at the obsequies.

Wm. B. Norman, who has been at Harveysburg, Ohio, for several months, engaged in the general merchandise business, disposed of his interests at Harveysburg, last week, and returned home to Walton as the business was very poor in that quarter. One of the features that hurt the town was the establishment of a fertilizing factory at Harveysburg, and the stench from the decaying animal matter was something fierce, and even the neighbors would ride ten to twelve miles to other towns rather than invade "the region of profound smells."

Rev. H. C. Wayman, who was ordained as a minister of the Baptist church Sunday, Aug. 15th, with impressive ceremonies at the Walton Baptist church, preached for the Baptist church at Burlington last Sunday, he having been engaged to preach for that congregation two Sundays in the month, and will preach the other two Sundays at Walton. Bro. Wayman is a pleasing and convincing talker and will make an excellent pastor for the churches. He recently resigned the position of principal of the Walton High School to give his entire attention to the ministry.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Schriver and A. M. Larkin, all of Newport, were here a day last week returning home from a delightful visit to Mr. Schriver's farm near Sherman, Grant county. The farm was formerly known as the Points farm and contains about 278 acres of the best land in Grant county, and Mr. Schriver is well pleased with his purchase. He is a prosperous business man of Cincinnati, being owner of a large pump manufactory there. Mr. Larkin is the cashier of the German National Bank of Newport, and his father was one of the pioneer bankers of Cincinnati and one of the best business men of the Queen City. Mr. and Mrs. Schriver were entertaining Mr. Larkin as their guest, and they were making the tour in Mr. Schriver's automobile.

George Hughes, a prominent citizen of Hume, Illinois, spent the past week here and with relatives and friends at his old home near Richwood, coming in from Illinois in his automobile. Mr. Hughes took a party of friends into Cincinnati, Thursday, on a pleasure trip, and all enjoyed a delightful time. The party was composed of Mr. Hughes, his brother, Joseph Hughes, and John C. Bedinger, of Richwood; John Cleek, of Beaver Lick, and Dr. B. K. Menefee, of Walton. Mr. Hughes was born and reared in Boone county and went to Illinois in 1872, and by good business management and industry has amassed a fortune, owning a great deal of real estate there and a deposit bank at Hume. His many friends here were pleased to meet him again.

C. T. Best was at Brooksville last week on business.

Born on the 23d inst., to James Ryle and wife, a girl.

Mrs. James B. Allen spent last Saturday in Ludlow with friends.

Geo. W. Hughes, of Hume, Ill., and sister Mrs. John C. Bedinger, of Richwood, were visitors here last Friday.

Miss Leah Walker, of Owenton, was a visitor here, one day last week, enroute to Georgetown to visit some friends.

James McGinnis, the capable section foreman on the Q. and C. Railroad, at Bracht, spent Friday here on business.

Ed. Lamkin, of Warsaw, traveling representative of Harrison Bros., paints, spent part of last week here with friends.

Geo. W. Maines, the enterprising saw mill man, spent part of last week in Indiana, closing up some business deals.

Henry C. Diers spent the past week in Henry county, taking orders for nursery stock, and is having great success.

L. S. Chambers, of Petersburg, spent Saturday and Sunday here the guest of his brother, C. Scott Chambers and family.

C. S. Tandy, a prominent farmer of Carroll county, spent the first of the week here, guest of his sister, Mrs. D. T. Buck and family.

Miss Johnnie May Terrill, of Petersburg, spent the past week here, guest of her sister, Mrs. C. Scott Chambers and family.

G. Mosby Allen spent last week at Burlington with his sister, Mrs. B. W. Adams, while her husband was in Texas on a prospecting trip.

Mrs. B. W. Records, of Sparta, spent several days of the past week here, being called to attend the funeral of her relative S. C. Johnson.

Dr. J. H. Waterhouse, of Cincinnati, who spent part of the past week with his brother-in-law, Robert O. Hughes and wife, near Richwood, was a visitor to friends here, last Saturday.

Mrs. Jesse E. Franks, who has been very ill from typhoid fever and complications, and her recovery was dispaired of, is now in a fair way to get well as her condition is much improved.

Mrs. E. K. Stephens and Miss Graham Roberts attended the fair at Erlanger last Friday. Miss Katie Bollington officiated as operator of the Walton telephone exchange during Miss Roberts' absence.

J. H. Smith, of Cynthiana, was here a part of last week buying some mules and inspecting the herd of cattle owned by him and B. B. Allphin which Mr. Allphin is having grazed on his farm near Big Bone Springs.

Hon. W. O. Coleman, of New Castle, Henry county, was the guest of his relative, Dr. C. T. Coleman, last Friday, returning from the interior of the State on a trip in the interest of his canvass for State Prison Commissioner.

Rev. Vaught, of Frankfort, presiding elder of the Methodist church in this district, spent Monday here, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller. He was enroute from New Columbus, Owen county, to Eagle Station, in his religious work.

Mrs. Annie Stapleton has purchased from Henry F. Bedinger, of Atlanta, Georgia, a tract of land of 50 acres adjoining her farm near Beaver Lick, for $2,500. Mr. Bedinger was at Richwood this week when the trade was agreed upon.

Miss Laura Craig, of Gallatin co., was a visitor here Monday, enroute to Crittenden, to visit her sister, Mrs. L. R. Finley. Miss Craig's father was county judge of Gallatin county during the civil war, and was one of the most progressive citizens ever in that county.

Mrs. Jane Johnson and daughter, Miss Hattie, returned home last week from Council Bluffs, Iowa, where they went recently on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Vest. They had expected to remain there for a couple of months but were called home by the sudden and sad death of their relative Samuel C. Johnson.

W. B. Johnson of Glencoe, A. F. Cooper, Vardaman Finnell and Jas. Finnell, of Greenfield, Indiana, and Mrs. B. B. Vest, Lawrence Menefee and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Worth Conrad, B. W. Franks and wife, and J. L. Noell and wife, of Mt. Zion, were here Sunday, Aug. 15th, attending the funeral of Samuel C. Johnson.

C. Presley Adams, who recently accepted a position as clerk in the Gibson House, Cincinnati, spent part of last Thursday here with home folks. He is a son of the late Dr. S. M. Adams, and is a fine young man of excellent qualities, and has already been promoted to a better position than the one given him in the beginning.

Joseph McCormick, of Verona, who has been spending part of his vacation here with his friends, enjoyed a visit to Worthville, Saturday and Sunday. He was the railroad's station agent there at one time, and also at Walton on different occasions, and is very popular here, being a most excellent young gentleman of many attractive qualities.

Prof. C. O. Morgan, of Morgansville, Kenton county, who was recently elected principal of the Walton High School, spent the past week here making preliminary arrangements for the opening of the school Sept. 15th. Prof. Morgan is calculated to give the patrons of the Personal—Mrs. W. E. Blackburn and daughter, Misses Lena and Viola of Covington, and Mrs. H. C. Redman spent last week at Dry Ridge and Williamstown.—Miss Blanche Lee Scroggins, of Visalia, spent Sunday with Mrs. H. C. Redman.—Miss Lola Spann, a charming young lady of Covington, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Byland.

W. J. Rieb and daughter, Miss Lovinia, of Big Bone Springs, and J. H. Rieb and son Clarence, of Dallas, Texas, spent Saturday and Sunday here, guests of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Miller. J. H. Rieb and son and Miss Lovinia left for Dallas, Texas, Sunday, after a visit of several weeks here to relatives. Miss Lovina has been attending school at Dallas, the past three years, and enjoys the living in that enterprising city.

Floyd Frakes, a hustling young man, of Kenton county, has accepted a clerkship in the general merchandise establishment of E. P. Northcutt, supplying the vacancy caused by the resignation of A. R. Johnson, who will take charge of the farm of his father, Samuel C. Johnson, who died recently. Mr. Frakes is a clever, obliging young man, whom it will be found very pleasant to deal with, and he would be pleased if all his friends will call and give him a portion of their trade.

Judge J. G. Tomlin left, Monday, for Detroit, Michigan, to spend the week attending the National Bar Association in the interest of his profession. Judge Tomlin keeps right up to date on all the issues involving the practice of the law, and attends most of the meetings of the best associations, and as he takes great pride in the practice of his profession, independent of any pecuniary consideration, and consequently he is a very valuable member of the profession.

The Walton Mercantile Company has had a change of firm, Hayes L. Miller, one of the members, disposing of one half interest to his partner Chas. A. Slater, and retiring from the firm. The merchandise was invoiced and then divided, and Mr. Miller will take his part of the stock to his store at Big Bone Springs, and Mr. Slater will close out his stock here unless business justifies his remaining, and in that event he will replenish the stock of goods. Mr. Miller will give his store at Big Bone his exclusive attention.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maxwell, of Meridian, Mississippi, arrived here last week on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Hopkins at their pretty country home in Kenton county, near Walton. Mr. Maxwell is the engineer on the locomotive that takes in the fast flyer on the Q. & C. from Meridian to New Orleans, daily, the train starting from Cincinnati and engines being changed at Meridian. Mr. Maxwell has been at the engine throttle a great many years and by care and good fortune he has never had an accident on his railroad.

Died—Edward Laws, 43, from hasty consumption, at his residence in Cincinnati, Monday, Aug. 23d. Mr. Laws was born at Walton and was the son of Geo. and Lucy Laws. His father was one of the pioneers of this section and drove the stage between Covington and Williamstown. The deceased had resided in Cincinnati for many years and his health was not much impaired until lately, when tuberculosis made its appearance. Mr. Laws leaves a widow but no children. A. M. Edwards, accompanied by Dudley Laws, a brother of the deceased, went to Cincinnati, Monday evening, and brought the remains here for burial, the funeral taking place Wednesday morning, the interment taking place in the Baptist cemetery.

The ordination to the ministry of the Baptist church of Prof. H. C. Wayman on Saturday, August 14th, was most pleasantly celebrated at the Baptist church at Walton by a large attendance of our best people and a splendid basket dinner. Dr. Davidson of the First Baptist church Covington, preached the ordination sermon and it was a gem of thought and rhetoric. Rev. Chas. Bagby, of Owen county, presided as moderator, and the other ministers in attendance were Rev. J. I. Wills, of Williamstown, Rev. Jenkins of Hickory Grove, Rev. Ellis of Latonia, Rev. Harris of Latonia and Rev. Wm. McMillan, of Big Bone Springs. It was late in the afternoon when the exercises were complete and the crowd dispersed for their respective homes. Bro. Wayman has been elected pastor of the Baptist churches at Walton and Burlington.

In memory of James Howard Conner, who died July 18th, 1908:

This lovely bud, so young, so fair,
Called hence by early doom—just come to show how sweet a flower in Paradise could bloom
Death came with friendly care, the opening bud to heaven coveyed, and bade it blossome there.

From his loving parents,
Mr. and Mrs. Ray Conner.

PROTECT THE BIRDS.

William Dutcher, president of the American Audubon society, estimates that birds save American farmers annually $200,000,000 in the destruction of harmful insects and noxious weeds. He further computes that the savings would amount to $38,000,000 more if that old harridan of a tyrant, Fashion, did not decree that milliners shall ornament women's hats with the plumage of many of the most valuable of the feathered tribe. Scientists have estimated that human life on our planet long since would have been extinct as a consequence of the destruction of vegetable life if birds had not come to the rescue and made perpetual and relentless war on insect life, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. In this good year 1909 the joint worm is playing havoc with the wheat crop of central Ohio, and that could not have been if the men and boys of Ohio had not levied constant war on the farmers' best friends, the birds of the field, the orchard and the forest. Every bluebird is annually worth to the farmer triple its weight in silver, and every wren is annually worth to the gardener its weight in gold. The sapsucker is invaluable to the fruit grower, and the woodpecker does yeoman service in the cause of a rich harvest.

St. Petersburg reports that the presence of cholera is militating seriously against summer tourist travel. This ought to be reassuring to all Europe. When people wisely stay away from centers of disease there will be less likelihood that the germs will be scattered all over the continent. If St. Petersburg cares for the traffic she has lost temporarily she should hasten her sanitation and also increase effort to stamp out the cholera. The drinking water there is contaminated, and every tourist who goes to the Russian capital takes a risk every time he drinks water that has not been boiled.

Now they are saying that ex-President Reyes of Colombia, who cabled his resignation from Europe, "salted down" $25,000,000, and his countrymen are asking where he got it and how they can oblige him to give it up. But these may be merely malicious misrepresentations. Castro, who left Venezuela for Venezuela's good, in the opinion of a great many persons, was credited with fabulous riches. But according to later developments his possessions shrank to comparatively little measure.

As was expected, the cotton crop of 1908 was larger than the speculators for a rise pretended, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. It amounted to 13,587,000 bales, so the bureau of the census says, or 2,212,000 more than that of 1907. Only twice—in 1904 and in 1906—was the yield greater than that of 1908. The crop of 1904, which broke all the records, was a little below the 14,000,000-bale mark. As, at present prices, cotton is a highly profitable crop, the presumption is that the acreage of 1909 is up at high figures.

The English prime minister, in speaking on the possible invasion of England, the national hugaboo just now, gave the house of commons the gloomy information that if once Britannia ceased to rule the waves, somebody else would boss her. If this does not produce adequate appropriations for national defenses, other appeals are useless.

Baby carriages, along with other vehicles, must carry red lights at the rear, in accordance with the speed laws of Los Angeles. This is the first intimation given anywhere of the danger to the public from baby carriages, aside from their painful, though not perilous, practice of rolling over feelings and toes on the sidewalk.

A man in Brooklyn, bitten by a dog, worried himself to death, although physicians assured him he had no signs of the dreaded disease. This instance shows how dangerous are the senseless panics and "mad-dog" scares which come about regularly every summer.

The Simplified Spelling society has held its third annual meeting. As a reminder to a forgetful public that the society is still in existence, the meeting appears to be a qualified success. Otherwise the public is still spelling the same old way.

Big orders for steel, notably for the kinds used in structural work, continue to pour in, this being one of the most marked indications of the continuous performance in industrial activity.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED

DIED IN FLOOD—BODIES LIE THICK ON THE RIVER BANKS.

PROPERTY LOSS $20,000,000

Horror at Monterey Grows With Every Hour—Best Part of City Threatened By New Channel Made By River—Railroad Communication Cut Off.

Laredo, Tex.—By the crippled telegraph from the storm-racked city of Monterey, Mex., it is learned Sunday night that the flood is receding. But the raging Santa Catarina river has already given up 400 bodies. It is known that other hundreds are lost, and it is known that 1,000 more victims may be counted before another nightfall.

The loss in property is between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000.

The heart-rending scenes that marked the disasters of San Francisco and Messina are being repeated in a less general but just as pathetic a way in the temporary receiving station for the dead. The relatives of the missing besiege the place, and the rurales who are in charge are hourly witnessing the saddest dramas of human grief.

In San Francisco and Messina the survivors knew at least where to look for their dead. But in Monterey the deluge swept families asunder and scattered them—some living, some dead—at far separated places along the new bed that the swollen river has cut through that portion of the city that once was populous with homes.

Many were carried down the torrent in their houses, which had been uprooted from the foundations. And these were drowned with hardly an exception.

Saturday evening the disaster became a spectacle, not the less fascinating because of the terror that was in it. The people crowded in the drenching rain to the Zaragoza and Hidalgo plazas, which are on high ground. From there the Santa Catarina's quadrupled breadth looked like the seething rapids of the Niagara gorge, dotted here and there with wrecked buildings and sending up a roar that echoed back again from the gray mountain sides that wall the city. The rapt throng stood and watched the scene until darkness fell.

Railroad communication has been completely cut off for more than three days, and there is fear that provisions may run short.

The West Indian hurricane, which is believed to have been the cause of the torrential rains, has passed inland near the mouth of the Rio Grande and is rapidly diminishing in intensity.

It is reported here that an appeal for aid has gone out from Monterey. One statement is to the effect that Consul General Hanna has appealed to the authorities at Washington urging a general call through the newspapers for relief.

Fully 15,000 people are homeless in the flood and are being cared for by the city government in the best way possible.

FIVE PERSONS KILLED

When Fast Passenger Train Struck Auto—Four of the Victims Related To Each Other.

St. Louis, Mo.—Five persons, four of them closely related, were killed Sunday when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a fast passenger train of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad two and one half miles west of Vigus station, on the Creve Couer Lake road, St. Louis. All the victims of the accident were residents of St. Louis. The dead are:

Theodore F. Witte, Theodore F. Witte, jr., aged 3 years; Mrs. Carl Klinge, Miss Halcyon Campbell, Frederick C Witte.

The locomotive struck the automobile squarely, and Mr. Witte and his brother were tossed 40 feet away. The boy's body dropped from the front of the train an eighth of a mile down the track and the woman caught in the tonneau were crushed almost beyond recognition in the wreckage.

OMAHA, NEB., CHOSEN

By Associated Advertising Clubs of America for Next Meeting Place.

Louisville, Ky.—Virginia oratory reestablished a reputation for doing things when W. E. Dabney, of Richmond, Va., went into the convention and by a real oration won a vote of 107 in favor of his town for the next convention. Omaha was finally selected, however, having pledged many cities. S. C. Dobbs, of Atlanta, was elected president after a spectacular contest. Other officers wede chosen as follows: W. E. Campbell, Kansas City, first vice president; P. S. Florea, Indianapolis, secretary; Leo Landau, St. Louis, treasurer; Ray Wolts, Chicago, permanent sergeant-at-arms; directors, Will M. Clemns, Memphis; I. H. Sawyer, St. Louis; Orva G. Williams, Chicago; S. K. Evans, New York, and P. V. Collins, Minneapolis.

SHUBERTS GET A THEATER.

Auditorium in Lexington Leased by Them for Five Years.

Lexington, Ky.—The Shuberts, in their fight against Klaw and Erlanger, have added another showhouse to their list. Through a contract between J. M. Perkins, of Frankfort, and the local board of park commissioners, they get the Auditorium, in this city, for five years, beginning October 1, at an annual rental of $400 and the understanding that the citizens of Lexington are to have the use of the house free for all public functions for which it was built upon the giving of 15 days' notice. Something like $5,000 is to be expended in improvements, which, at the expiration of the lease, will become the property of the city.

Catler, first lieutenant, and C. K. Natur, second lieutenant. Company K elected R. L. Harris, captain; E. W. Sang, first lieutenant, and J. W. Laswell, second lieutenant. Company H elected Wolsey Cayce captain, to succeed W. R. Harris. Third battalion, Company D, elected G. W. Seymour, Jr., captain, and Forest Moss, first lieutenant.

BANK TELLER ARRESTED

On Charge of Embezzlement Preferred by National Bank Examiner Johnson.

Louisville, Ky.—As the result of a consuming passion for diamonds and fine clothes, Fred G. Miller, who resigned his position as teller of the Third National bank, this city, August 11, was arrested on a charge of embezzlement preferred by National Bank Examiner Percy Johnson. Miller's peculations are said to amount to more than $6,000, and the National Surety Company, Miller's surety, has already paid $4,871.36 to the bank. According to the officials of the bank the examination is not yet complete, and the alleged shortage will probably amount to $6,000. It is said Miller secured the money interest fund due time depositors on their certificates.

PROSECUTING MEMBERS

Of Pool Who Disposed of Crops to Outsiders is Burley Tobacco Society.

Lexington, Ky.—The Burley Tobacco society is taking action in various parts of the state against members of its pool in 1907 and 1908, who, after signing a pledge to sell only to pool members, disposed of their crops to outsiders. At Maysville the board of control of the Burley society filed suit against Thomas Malone for $5,800, against C. M. Sidwell for $640 and Patrick Collins for $2,500, alleging they had violated the pledge. All will be prosecuted under the provisions of the Crecelius law, passed by the last Kentucky legislature, which prohibits such sales.

LEGAL TO SPEND MONEY

Under Sullivan School Law to Carry Children to and From School.

Frankfort Ky.—Judge O'Rear, of the court of appeals, decided that it is legal for the county board of education to spend money under the Sullivan school law to carry children to and from school in districts where the schools have been consolidated. Judge O'Rear refused to grant an injunction prayed for by the citizens of McCracken against the county board of that county, which is spending the money hauling children to school at Lone Oak, where several of the county schools have been consolidated. Judge W. M. Reed had held that the consolidation could be made, but that the money could not be used, so that Judge O'Rear reverses this opinion.

INNOCENT MAN PARDONED

By Acting Gov. Cox After Having Served Four Years on Charge of Murder.

Frankfort, Ky.—After serving four years in the penitentiary on the charge of murder Frank Ward, of Laurel county, was pardoned by Acting Gov. Cox. During a general row at Pittsburg, Laurel county, Goff, an innocent bystander, was shot, and Frank Ward, George Ward and J. B. Landrum were indicted for the killing. The two latter were acquitted, and Landrum wrote to Gov. Willson that the nad killed Goff, but that it was an accident.

Paducah, Ky.—Ground was broken at Metropolis, Ill., opposite here, on the Burlington extension from Herrin, Ill., to this city. Engineers declare the extension is the first move by the Burlington to establish a through route to the Gulf for a share of the expected Panama canal trade.

Lexington, Ky.—Several directors of the Kentucky association held a meeting to discuss the question of a fall race meeting here. It was decided to postpone the matter until about September 10, when a full session of the board can be had.

Paducah, Ky.—A petition signed by masters and pilots of boats plying between Paducah and Cairo has been sent to the secretary of war protesting against the granting of a permit to the Burlington railroad to erect a bridge across the Ohio river a few miles below this place.

MOLDBOARD DIVIDES PLOW INTO DIFFERENT CLASSES

So Important Is the Exact Shape That the Manufacturers Find it Necessary to Make Moldboard in Three Layers.

There are many different kinds of plows, but they may all be divided into three types, according to the shape of the moldboard. One is the sod plow, with the long sloping moldboard, which turns the sod clear over. The second has a moldboard of medium slope, which turns the furrow upon edge, but does not throw it entirely over. The third type is a bluff moldboard, which turns the furrow up and thoroughly pulverizes it.

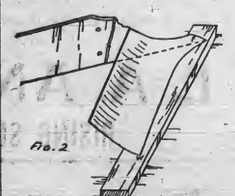
Ground can be well plowed only when it will pulverize thoroughly. If it turns up in chunks and cakes the land is not properly underdrained. Many farmers are finding that their tiled fields are not completely drained and are putting in new strings of tile between the old ones.

The plow bottom is the part of the implement that does the work. Turn the plow upon its back and look across the bottom, put a straightedge lengthwise upon the bottom or sole of an old plow and of a new one and find whether the shares dip down at the point. If the point dips down as the plow stands in the furrow, the point would of course turn up when the plow is inverted, and the straightedge will touch the point of the share and the heel of the landside, but there will be a space of about 3-16 of an inch between the straightedge and the landside, where the latter joins the share (E, figure 1). This dipping down of the point is to make the plow go in the ground and it is called the suction of the plow. The plow as it comes from the factory should be and generally is constructed so that it floats freely in the ground, cutting a uniform furrow of the depth for which the plow is adjusted. If a walking-plow requires to be forcibly tilted or held in a certain position there is something the matter with the implement. In the riding-plow the suction should be twice as great as in the walking-plow. The suction or dip of the point is almost always right in the new plow.

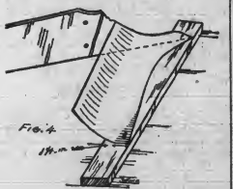
After the plow has been used for some time the point often gets worn off or "snubbed up," so that a straightedge laid upon the bottom of the plow as before would rock over the middle (figure 6). Such a plow cannot be made to stay at the proper depth in the ground without materially increasing the draft. It is supposed that this section will be corrected by the blacksmith when he sharpens the share, but all smiths do not give the share point the correct dip. It is important to see that this is done. It will pay well in the saving of horseflesh and the securing of good work to apply the straightedge to an old plow every few weeks and find out whether the suction is right.

The accompanying pictures show the difference in suction between a plow as it comes from the factory and one with the point worn off. In figure 1 the point has the proper dip and in figure 2 it has no dip at all, but turns up instead. The curve of the point is exaggerated in each cut, that the idea may appear the plainer.

The point of the plow, as it comes from the factory, turns into the land about 3-16 of an inch, in either a walking-plow or a riding-plow; that is, if the straightedge is placed upon the landside, one end touching the heel of the landside, there will be 3-16 of an inch space between the straightedge and the landside at the connection with the share. The point needs to be thus turned to draw the plow into the land and this sidewise curve of the point is called the land or landing of the plow.



The wing of the share—that is, the point farthest away from the landside (W, figure 4), should have a bearing surface in a walking plow to hold up that side of the plow and enable it to run freely and keep level without the plowman pushing upon the handles. This bearing surface (B, figure 3) should extend back 1¼ inches from the corner of the share. When the wing wears off, leaving but a small bearing surface upon the bottom of the furrow at that corner, as in figure 4, it allows the plow to tip toward the furrow. In a riding plow the bearing surface at the wing is decreased, giving the share much greater angle at that point. This bearing surface is not needed to hold the riding-plow level, because it is loaded on wheels and supported in a rigid position so it cannot tip. In sharpening the share of a walking-plow it is important to see that sufficient bearing surface is given to the wing.



The plow, as it comes from the factory, has exactly the right curve to the moldboard and share and if the angle at which the furrow strikes the face of the plow is changed by the hitch or by hoiding plow at an unusual angle, it will not do its best work in the easiest way. So important is the exact shape of the plow that the manufacturers find it necessary to make the moldboard and share in three layers (a soft center, with a hardened layer on each side) to prevent these surfaces from getting out of shape when the steel is tempered; and hence the necessity for keeping the suction, land and wing of the plow in the original shape, so that it will not be necessary to tilt the share and thus change the angle at which it strikes the furrow.

When the plow is sharpened a piece of steel should be added (if the point has worn off much) and the point brought out to its former length. If the farmer will make a record of the length of the share point when the plow is new and measure it again after the blacksmith has sharpened it, he will be able to know (and to tell the smith) whether the point has been brought out to the proper length. Those blacksmiths who thoroughly understand sharpening a plow will at once recognize the importance of these adjustments. The hammering of the point should be done on the under side and not upon the face of the plow. The better class of smiths seldom hammer the face of the plow.

POTATO COVERER AND YARD SCRAPER

Contrivance Made of 2-Inch Lumber Can Also Be Used for Leveling Rough Ground.

Besides its use in the barnyard, this is handy for covering potatoes, leveling rough ground, filling ditches, etc. It should be made of two-inch lumber, and hard wood if possible; the scraper should be six to eight feet long, and two feet high; its life will be prolonged if shod with a piece of iron or steel, as shown; however, it will do good work without the iron. The cvener must be at least four feet from scraper, to allow for load, and to keep same from under the horses' feet. A very large barnyard may be cleaned in a short time, and several loads of manure saved. Simply drive the load where wanted, lift scraper up by the handles, leaving load, and repeat the operation.

Wood Ashes for Orchards.

The ashes from apple, pear and peach trees contain about 70 per cent. of lime, and the crops of fruit borne every year also contain lime. When orchards fail it is always profitable to apply lime, and it should be done at least once in five years. Wood ashes are preferable to lime for orchards, but the lime is much cheaper. Lime will also prove of benefit to grass that may be growing in an orchard, and it is destructive to certain grubs and other orchard enemies. It is best applied by plowing the orchard land and broadcasting the lime over the surface.

Handling Silage.

We have used an improved silage cutter with blower, a machine of great capacity, with only one fault, namely, that the knives are hard to set, but with the great advantage that it cuts one-quarter inch pieces, says a writer in Baltimore American. These pack best in the silo, because of their small size, and because of close packing they keep better than if larger. They are also better to mix with cut hay and grain, since there is less little waste of uneven [illegible] corn-stalk joints, in the [illegible]

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.

CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrope, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunken stupor. Blake, shunned on the boat, because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Blake started to swim back to the ship to recover what was left. Blake returned safely. Winthrope wanted his last match on a cigarette, for which he was scored by Blake. Their first meal was a dead fish.

"To be sure, the Japanese eat raw fish," admitted Winthrope.

"Yes; and you'd swallow your share of it if you had an invite to a swell dinner in Tokyo. Go on now, both of you. It's no joke, I tell you. You've got to eat, if you expect to get to water before night. Understand? See that headland south? Well, it's 100 to 1 we'll not find water short of there, and if we make it by night, we'll be doing better than I figure from the looks of these bogs. Now go to chewing. That's it! That's fine, Miss Jenny!"

Miss Leslie had forced herself to take a nibble of the raw fish. The flavor proved less repulsive than she had expected, and its moisture was so grateful to her parched mouth that she began to eat with eagerness. Not to be outdone, Winthrope promptly followed her lead. Blake had already cut himself a second slice. After he had cut more for his companions, he began to look them over with a closeness that proved embarrassing to Miss Leslie.

"Here's more of the good stuff," he said. "While you're chewing it, we'll sort of take stock. Everybody shell out everything. Here's my outfit—three shillings, half a dozen poker chips, and not another blessed— Say, what's become of that whisky flask? Have you seen my flask?"

"Here it is, right beside me, Mr. Blake," answered Miss Leslie. "But it is empty."

"Might be worse! What you got?—hairpins, watch? No pocket, I suppose?"

"None; and no watch. Even most of my pins are gone," replied the girl, and she raised her hand to her loosely coiled hair.

"Well, hold on to what you've got left. They may come in for fish-hooks. Let's see your shoes."

"Good Lord!" groaned Blake, "slippers, and high heels at that! How do you expect to walk in those things?"

"I can at least try," replied the girl, with spirit.

"Hobble! Pass 'em over here, Winnie, my boy."

The slippers were handed over. Blake took one after the other and wrecked off the heel close to its base.

"Now you've at least got a pair of slippers," he said, tossing them back to their owner. "Tie them on tight with a couple of your ribbons, if you don't want to lose them in the mud. Now, Winthrope, what you got beside the knife?"

Winthrope held out a bunch of long flat keys and his cigarette case. He opened the latter and was about to throw away the two remaining cigarettes when Blake grasped his wrist.

"Hold on! even they may come in for something. We'll at least keep them until we need the case."

"And the keys?"

"Make arrow-heads, if we can get fire."

"I've heard of savages making fire by rubbing wood."

"Yes; and we're a long way from being savages—at present. All the show we have is to find some kind of quartz or flint, and the sooner we start to look the better. Got your slippers tied, Miss Jenny?"

"Yes; I think they'll do."

"Think! It's knowing the thing. Here, let me look."

The girl shrank back; but Blake stooped and examined first one slipper and then the other. The ribbons about both were tied in dainty bows. Blake jerked them loose and twisted them firmly over and under the slippers and about the girl's slender ankles before knotting the ends.

"There; that's more like. You're not going to a dance," he growled.

He thrust the empty whisky flask into his hip pocket and went back to pass a sling of reeds through the gills of the coryphene.

"All ready now," he called. "Let's get a move on. Keep my coat closer about your shoulders, Miss Jenny, and keep your shade up, if you don't want a sunstroke."

"Thank you, Blake, I'll see to that," said Winthrope. "I'm going to help Miss Leslie along. I've fastened our two shades together, so that they will answer for both of us."

"How about yourself, Mr. Blake?" inquired the girl. "Do you not find the sun fearfully hot?"

"Sure; but I wet my head in the sea, and here's another souse."

As he rose with dripping head from beside the pool he slung the coryphene on his back and started off without further words.

Stopped, Utterly Spent.

CHAPTER IV.

A Journey in Desolation.

MORNING was well advanced and the sun beat down upon the three with almost overpowering fierceness. The heat would have rendered their thirst unendurable had not Blake hacked off for them bit after bit of the moist coryphone flesh.

In a temperate climate ten miles over firm ground is a pleasant walk for one accustomed to the exercise. Quite a different matter is ten miles across mud-flats, covered with a tangle of reeds and rushes, and frequently dipping into salt marsh and ooze. Before they had gone a mile Miss Leslie would have lost her slippers had it not been for Blake's forethought in tying them so securely. Within a little more than three miles the girl's strength began to fail.

"Oh, Blake," called Winthrope, for the American was some yards in the lead, "pull up a bit on that knoll. We'll have to rest a while, I fancy. Miss Leslie is about pegged."

"What's that?" demanded Blake. "We're not half-way yet!"

Winthrope did not reply. It was all he could do to drag the girl up on the hummock. She sank, half-fainting, upon the dry reeds, and he sat down beside her to protect her with the shade. Blake stared at the miles of swampy flats which yet lay between them and the out-jutting headland of gray rock. The base of the cliff was screened by a belt of trees; but the nearest clump of green did not look more than a mile nearer than the headland.

"Hell!" muttered Blake, despondently. "Not even a short four miles. Mush and sassiety girls!"

Though he spoke to himself the others heard him. Miss Leslie flushed and would have risen had not Winthrope put his hand on her arm.

"Could you not go on and bring back a flask of water for Miss Leslie?" he asked. "By that time she will be rested."

"No; I don't fetch back any flasks of water. She's going when I go, or you can come on to suit yourselves."

"Mr. Blake, you—you won't go and leave me here! If you have a sister—if your mother—"

"She died of drink, and both my sisters did worse."

"My God, man! do you mean to say you'll abandon a helpless young girl?"

"Not a bit more helpless than were my sisters, when you rich folks' guardians of law and order jugged me for the winter 'cause I didn't have a job and turned both girls into the street—onto the street, if you know what that means—one only 16 and the other 17. Talk about helpless young girls—Damnation!"

Miss Leslie cringed back as though she had been struck. Blake, however, seemed to have vented his anger in the curse, for when he again spoke there was nothing more than impatience in his tone. "Come on, now; get aboard. Winthrope couldn't lug you a half-mile, and long's it's the only way don't be all day about it. Here, Winthrope, look to the fish."

"But, my dear fellow, I don't quite take your idea, nor does Miss Leslie, I fancy," ventured Winthrope.

"Well, we've got to get to water or die; and as the lady can't walk she's going on my back. It's a case of have-to."

"No! I am not—I am not! I'd sooner die!"

"I'm afraid you'll find that easy enough later on, Miss Jenny. Stand by, Winthrope, to help her up. Do you hear? Take the knife and fish and lend a hand."

There was a note in Blake's voice that neither Winthrope nor Miss Leslie dared disregard. Though scarlet with mortification, she permitted herself to be taken pick-a-back upon Blake's broad shoulders and meekly obeyed his command to clasp her hands about his throat. Yet even at that moment, such are the inconsistencies of human nature, she could not but admire the ease with which he rose under her weight.

Now that he no longer had the slow pace of the girl to consider, he advanced at his natural gait, the quick, tireless stride of an American railroad surveyor. His feet, trained to swamp travel in Louisiana and Panama, seemed to find the firmest ground as by instinct, and whether on the half-dried mud of the hummocks or in the ankle-deep water of the bogs, they felt their way without slip or stumble.

Winthrope, though burdened only with the half-eaten coryphene, toiled along behind, greatly troubled by the mud and the tangled reeds, and now and then flung down by some unlucky misstep. His modish suit, already much damaged by the salt water, was soon smeared afresh with a coating of greenish slime. His one consolation was that Blake, after jeering at his first tumble, paid no more attention to him. On the other hand, he was cut by the seeming indifference of Miss Leslie. Intent on his own misery, he failed to consider that the girl might be suffering far greater discomfort and humiliation.

More than three miles had been covered before Blake stopped on a hummock. Releasing Miss Leslie, he stretched out on the dry crest of the knoll and called for a slice of the fish. At his urging the others took a few mouthfuls, although their throats were so parched that even the moist flesh afforded scant relief. Fortunately for them all, Blake had been thoroughly trained to endure thirst. He rested less than ten minutes; then taking Miss Leslie up again like a rag doll, he swung away at a good pace.

The trees were less than half a mile distant when he halted for the second time. He would have gone to them without a pause, though his muscles were quivering with exhaustion, had not Miss Leslie chanced to look around and discover that Winthrope was no longer following them. For the last mile he had been lagging farther and farther behind, and now he had suddenly disappeared. At the girl's dismayed exclamation, Blake released his hold and she found herself standing in a foot or more of mud and water. The sweat was streaming down Blake's face. As he turned around, he wiped it off with his shirt sleeves.

"Do you—can it be, Mr. Blake, that he has had a sunstroke?" asked Miss Leslie.

"Sunstroke? No; he's just laid down, that's all. I thought he had more sand—confound him!"

"But the sun is so dreadfully hot, and I have his shade."

"And he's been tumbling into every other pool. No; it's not the sun. I've half a mind to let him lie—the paper-legged swell! It would no more than square our aboard-ship accounts."

"Surely, you would not do that, Mr Blake! It may be that he has hurt himself in falling."

"In this mud?—bah! But I guess I'm in for the pack-mule stunt all around. Now, now; don't yowl, Miss Jenny. I'm going. But you can't expect me to love the swab."

As he splashed away on the return trail, Miss Leslie dabbed at her eyes to check the starting tears.

"Oh, dear—Oh, dear!" she moaned; "what have I done to be so treated? Such a brute. Oh, dear!—and I am so thirsty!"

In her despair she would have sunk down where she stood had not the sliminess of the water repelled her. She gazed longingly at the trees, in the fore of which stood a grove of stately palms. The half-mile seemed an insuperable distance, but the ride on Blake's back had rested her and thirst goaded her forward.

Stumbling and slipping she waded on across the inundated ground, and came out upon a half-baked mud-flat, where the walking was much easier. But the sun was now almost directly overhead, and between her thirst and the heat she soon found herself faltering. She tottered on a few steps farther, and then stopped, utterly spent. As she sank upon the dried rushes she glanced around and was vaguely conscious of a strange, double-headed figure following her path across the marsh. All about her became black.

The next she knew Blake was splashing her head and face with brackish water out of the whisky flask. She raised her hand to shield her face, and sat up, sick and dizzy.

"That's it!" said Blake. He spoke in a kindly tone, though his voice was harsh and broken with thirst. "You're all right now. Pull yourself together and we'll get to the trees in a jiffy."

"Mr. Winthrope—?"

"I'm here, Miss Genevieve. It was only a wrenched ankle. If I had a stick, Blake, I fancy I could make a go of it over this drier ground."

"And lay yourself up for a month. Come, Miss Jenny, brace up for another try. It's only a quarter-mile, and I've got to pack him."

The girl was gasping with thirst; yet she made an effort, and, assisted by Blake, managed to gain her feet. She was still dizzy; but as Blake swung Winthrope upon his back, he told her to take hold of his arm. Winthrope held the shade over her head. Thus assisted, and sheltered from the direct beat of the sun-rays, she tottered along beside Blake, half-unconscious.

Fortunately the remaining distance lay across a stretch of bare dry ground, for even Blake had all but reached the limit of endurance. Step by step he labored on, staggering under the weight of the Englishman and gasping with a thirst which his exertions rendered even greater than that of his companions. But through the trees and brush which stretched away inland in a wall of verdure he had caught glimpses of a broad stream and the hope of fresh water called out every ounce of his reserve strength.

At last the nearest palm was only a few paces distant, Blake clutched Miss Leslie's arm and dragged her forward with a rush in a final outburst of energy. A moment later all three lay gasping in the shade. But the river was yet another 100 yards distant. Blake waited only to regain his breath; then he staggered up and went on. The others, unable to rise, gazed after him in silent misery.

Soon Blake found himself rushing through the jungle along a broad trail pitted with enormous footprints; but he was so near mad with thirst that he paid no heed to the spoor other than to curse the holes for the trouble they gave him. Suddenly the trail turned to the left and sloped down a low bank into the river. Blind to all else, Blake ran down the slope and dropping upon his knees plunged his head into the water.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Maybelle—Oh, I expect to love him after we are married. He has promised that on the morning of our wedding day he will shave off his dinky little French beard.

The Highwayman Unmasked

By Stuart B. Stone

The man with the black mask made the nickel-plated revolver fairly gleam as he flourished it in Marshall's face. Marshall shivered, though the very fine eyes and the very pleasing tones of the highwayman hardly went with things such as killing.

"I have my hands up," Marshall finally expostulated.

The masker chuckled, but continued to move the revolver about in a gradually narrowing circle.

"You can trust me if you play no tricks," he purred."

Somehow the highwayman's soft accents soothed the man with elevated hands. He felt no imminent danger—yet the revolver was a very grim thing.

The masker dived into Marshall's vest pocket and appropriated his watch. The light from a little lantern was sufficient to show a massive gold time-piece, bearing a picture of a deer and attached to a chain that weighed half a pound. The highwayman returned the thing, while a derisive light shone in the very blue eyes.

"You have no taste in watches," he said. "Why don't you carry an eight-day clock?"

And Marshall took comfort in his own inelegance.

Next the highwayman levied on a pin from Marshall's scarf—a perfect gem in a setting of exquisite gold carving. The blue eyes were pleasure-lit now.

"I take it this is a gift," he commented. "The barbarian who bought the watch would never see the opal."

And this time Marshall, with the little steel circle hovering evilly in his face, bemoaned the fad that called for costly opal pins in wonderful settings of gold.

Then the highwayman scoffed at a signet ring and jeered at a massive button in the blue, green and red of the Ardent Sons of St. Timothy. But a sparkling diamond of price and a ring of finest emeralds appealed to the fantastic robber, and also the wallet of his victim was very fat—and you know fat wallets are negotiable from Bering sea to the Friendly Islands. So that altogether Marshall would have done better to have avoided this lonely open road.

The masker reached the bulging side pockets now, and he examined certificates of copper stock and a budget of Wheeling 4's with equal disgust.

"Very pretty engraving," he declared, "and vastly desirable for Mr. Man-With-His-Hands-Up, maybe, but an honest gentleman of the road makes a poor coupon clipper. I'll leave these."

After the stocks and bonds came a gaudy periodical of bulk, with a woman in flaming red taking the whole of the cover. The highwayman glanced idly at the thing and would have returned it, but he caught the words, "The Adorner," on the flaming cover, and he hesitated.

"Let's see what the women are wearing," he suggested. "Hold steady now," and the highwayman turned the pages as best he could with one hand. The light from the lantern, placed on the fence, revealed skirtish things and waistish things and gay, nodding hats and other dress-treasure of quality, cut bias, cut V-shaped, cut zig-zag.

"Well, I declare," remarked the masked man, "the poloneise is coming back. I always detested the things."

The glittering pistol dropped just the least bit.

"Now these picture hats are just dear," went on the highwayman, and the line of fire from the deadly circle would have missed Marshall probably half a foot.

It was the moment of moments and Marshall had the nickeled weapon in his own hand and the highwayman flung two delicate palms heavenward in about the space of three ticks of the big barbaric watch.

"Dress—dress—dress—" hummed Marshall, as he tore the black mask from a pretty pink face and stripped the rough derby from coils of glorious yellow hair. "It is the frills and furbelows that ever catch you women."

The lady of the highway sobbed as Marshall took back the jewels of price.

"Oh, do take care," she wailed; "you are mussing my hair up dreadfully!"

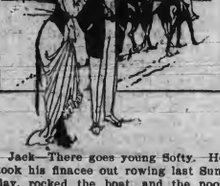
THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Nosh, Ky.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from headaches, nervous prostration, and hemorrhages.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong, so that I can do all my housework, and attend to the store and post-office, and I feel much younger than I really am.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most successful remedy for all kinds of female troubles, and I feel that I can never praise it enough."—MRS. LIZZIE HOLLAND, Nosh, Ky.



The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

WHAT SHE ESCAPED.

Jack—There goes young Softy. He took his finacee out rowing last Sunday, rocked the boat, and the poor girl was drowned.

Ruth—Lucky girl!

Jack—Why do you say that?

Ruth—Why, she might have lived and married the idiot.

All in Fight Against Tuberculosis.

Prevention of tuberculosis versus dividends is the proposition which some of our largest insurance companies are now trying to establish. The Metropolitan Life recently applied for permission to erect a sanatorium for its policy holders and employes afflicted with tuberculosis, but the application was refused on grounds of illegality by New York State Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss. The company is, however, conducting an active educational campaign by distributing 2,500,000 pamphlets among its policy holders. The Provident Savings Life Assurance society has also established a health bureau, where its policy holders may receive free medical advice. Several fraternal orders, notably the Modern Woodmen, Knights of Pythias, Royal League, Royal Arcanum and Workmen's Circle, have already established or are contemplating the erection of sanatoria for their tuberculous members.

IT WORKS

The Laborer Eats Food That Would Wreck an Office Man.

Men who are actively engaged at hard work can sometimes eat food that would wreck a man who is more closely confined.

This is illustrated in the following story:

"I was for 12 years clerk in a store working actively and drank coffee all the time without much trouble until after I entered the telegraph service.

"There I got very little exercise and drinking strong coffee, my nerves were unsteady and my stomach got weak and I was soon a very sick man. I quit meat and tobacco and in fact I stopped eating everything which I thought might affect me except coffee, but still my condition grew worse, and I was all but a wreck.

"I finally quit coffee and commenced to use Postum a few years ago, and I am speaking the truth when I say, my condition commenced to improve immediately and today I am well and can eat anything I want without any bad effects, all due to shifting from coffee to Postum.

"I told my wife today I believed I could digest a brick if I had a cup of postum to go with it.

"We make it according to directions boiling it full 20 minutes and use good rich cream and it is certainly delicious."

Look in pkgs. for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

"There's a Reason."

Kansas Appetites.

Here are some things discussed on a North Atchison porch the other night: One woman said she had a hired girl who ate lard by the spoonful; the girl said she "adored" lard. Another woman said she had a friend who ate toilet soap. That reminded some one on the porch that her brother-in-law ate peaches with sugar, cream and salad dressing. A sweet little girl on the porch said: "Well, when we have hash I always eat it with sugar."—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

BED-BOUND FOR MONTHS.

Hope Abandoned After Physicians' Consultation.

Mrs. Enos Shearer, Yew and Washington Sts., Centralia, Wash., says: "For years I was weak and run down, could not sleep, my limbs swelled and the secretions were troublesome; pains were intense. I was fast in bed for four months. Three doctors said there was no cure for me, and I was given up to die. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I was better and in a few weeks was about the house, well and strong again."

ONE ON JOHNNY.

He was a balmy-headed Johnny, with little cash. She was both pretty and pert. He said: "Do you know, Dolly, I am something of a mimic? I can take almost anybody off"

She said: "Then take yourself off, old boy. I'm expecting some one to take me to supper."

HAD AWFUL WEEPING ECZEMA

Face and Neck Were Raw—Terrible Itching, Inflammation and Soreness—All Treatments Failed.

Cuticura Proved a Great Success.

"Eczema began over the top of my ear. It cracked and then began to spread. I had three different doctors and tried several things, but they did me no good. At last one side of my face and my neck were raw. The water ran out of it so that I had to wear medicated cotton, and it was so inflamed and sore that I had to put a piece of cloth over my pillow to keep the water from it, and it would stain the cloth a sort of yellow. The eczema itched so that it seemed as though I could tear my face all to pieces. Then I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and it was not more than three months before it was all healed up. Miss Ann Pearsons, Northfield, Vt., Dec. 19, 1907."

Gender.

The other evening Miss Y., a maiden lady of uncertain years, suspecting the cook was entertaining her beau downstairs, called Martha and inquired whether she did not hear some one talking with her.

"Oh, no, ma'am," cried the quick-witted Martha; "it was only me singing a psalm."

"Very good," returned Miss Y. significantly; "you may amuse yourself with psalms, but let's have no hims."

Weds Her Rich Stepfather.

Social circles in Pasadena, Cal., learned with amazement the other day that Miss Katherine Traphagen has become the bride of her stepfather, Cyrus M. Davis of Los Angeles. Miss Traphagen lived with her sisters in Altadena and was one of the prominent members of the Young Women's Christian Association, being director of its short story club.

An Escape.

"Are you sure that indicator registered the correct fare?"

"Yes," answered the taxicabman. "You aren't kicking, are you?"

"No. I'm congratulating myself. If we went that far in so short a time we were mighty lucky not to get arrested for scorching."—Washington Star.

Fortunate Lady.

EVEN UNTO DEATH

Story of the Desecration of the Holy City

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright 1908, by the Author, W. G. Eggen.)

The Title.—The title of the Maccabees, which was the original surname of Judas, one of the sons of Mattathias, was afterwards extended to the heroic family of which he was one of the noblest representatives, and in a still wider sense, to the Palestinian martyrs in the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, and even to the Alexandrine Jews who suffered for their faith at an earlier period. The original term Maccabi has been variously derived. Some have maintained that it was formed from the combination of the initial letters of the Hebrew sentence: "Who among the gods is like unto thee, Jehovah" (Ex. 15:11), which is supposed to have been inscribed upon the banner of the patriots. Another derivation has been proposed, which, although direct evidence is wanting, seems satisfactory. According to this the word is formed from Makkabah, "a hammer," giving a sense not altogether unlike that in which Charles Martel derived a surname from his favorite weapon. Although the name Maccabees has gained the widest currency, that of Asmonaeans or Hasmoneans is the proper name of the family. The origin of this name also has been disputed; but the obvious derivation from Chashmon, great-grandfather of Mattathias, seems certainly correct.

SERMONETTE.

"Blessed are thay which are persecuted for rightsouaness sake; for theirs is tha kingdom of heavan."

This was a statemant of a fact which was coexistent with God and not some new condition which Jesus called into being. To whom should the kingdom belong save to those loyal few who stand the crucial fires and are found faithful even unto death.

Many a man imagines he is loyal because he has never been testad to the breaking point.

"Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light amliction, which is but for a momant, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

"If we suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye; and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled."

James says, "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers trials; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ya may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

"In my distress I called upon the Lord, and cried unto my God: he heard my voica out of his tempia, and my cry came before him, even into his ears."

"For in the time of troubla he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the sacret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

"And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt giorify me."

"As for me, I will call upon God; and the Lord shall sava me. Evening and morning and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud; and he shall hear my voice. Ha hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me; for there were many with me. God shall hear and afflict them, even he that abideth of old. Because they have no changes, therefore they fear not God. He hath put forth his hands against such as be at peace with him: he hath broken his covenant. The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart: his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords. Cast thy burden on the Lord, and he shall sustain thee: ha shall navar suffer the righteous to be moved."

THE STORY.

"YEA, such a course may bring us ease and safety, but how could we stand before God with such sin upon out hearts?"

The speaker turned with earnest, appealing look towards the small, motley group gathered in the little, dimly-lighted room. His voice was subdued almost to a whisper, as though he feared some eavesdropper on the outside might overhear the conversation, and ever and anon the different members of the group looked anxiously towards the low door and started at any unusual noise which broke the night stillness.

It was evident there some question was up for decision and some were inclined to view it from one point of view while others of a sterner sort were firm against any compromise. The evident leader of this faction had just finished speaking the words quoted at the beginning of our story, and they were evidently in reply to a statement which had just been made by another member of the group who now stood with a clouded brow and an air of indecision, as though the outcome of the conflict going on within his soul was a matter of uncertainty. He had just come in bearing a message from certain powerful factions in Jerusalem proposing an alliance with their heathen masters.

"Let us go and make a covenant with the heathen that are round about us," they said, "for since we failed to fellowship with them, we have had much sorrow."

Many had been well pleased with the suggestion and had forthwith established communications with their heathen neighbors and apparently were prospering under the compact. And this messenger had come to this group of Jews who still held aloof from the popular disaffection to the heathen, and presented the suggestion that they too make alliance with the people about them.

"Nay," we cannot do this great iniquity," spoke up again the first speaker. "Once such a departure from Jewish law and ordinances is begun and there is no telling to what lengths it will go. You all know that already there are some of our brethren who have been to the king and secured license to do after the ordinances of the heathen as though they were Gentiles indeed. And thou knowest how they have built places of worship in our holy city Jerusalem according to all the manner and custom of the heathen, and have made themselves uncircumcised and have forsaken the holy covenant. Yea, they have sold themselves to do mischief."

This earnest plea had its effect and it was plain to see ere he had finished speaking that all were determined to stand against the enticements of the Gentiles except the one who had brought the message. It was evident that he appreciated that further argument was of no avail, for he turned and as he stepped through the door he turned and with a sneer on his face he said:

"You are foolish, indeed. Trouble will surely come to you."

Not long after this the king Antiochus returned in triumph from Egypt, where he had been waging war, and came down upon Jerusalem with a great army. And when he had taken the city he entered proudly into the sanctuary of the temple and took away the golden altar and the candlestick of gold and all the vessels thereof. And the table of shew-bread, and the pouring vessels, and the vials, and the censers of gold, and the precious vessels, and all the gold and silver, and much hid treasure. And he caused all kinds of indignities to be practiced upon those of the Jews who refused to conform to all the customs of the heathen. Those were terrible days in Jerusalem, for the strength of the young men and the young women was taken, and the beauty of women was changed. Thau matters continued for two years and then the king sent his chief collector to gather tribute from Jerusalem and the cities of Juda. This collector spake peaceable words unto the Jews, but all was deceit, for when they had paid him all his demands he fell suddenly upon the city for loot and destroyed much people. Having done this, he brought in great companies of heathen, and they strengthened the walls of the city and brought in armor and victuals. And whenever any heathen coveted aught which was a Jew's he ruthlessly slew the Jew and toook his aill.

Now the king, Antiochus, was not a little annoyed because of the obstinacy of some few of the Jews, and he sent a decree into the land of Israel that every one should leave his laws and obey only those laws which the king himself had made.

And very many of the Jews were consenting to this thing, prizing their lives higher than obedience to God's law and acceptability with Him, and they sacrificed unto the strange idols with which the city became filled and they profaned the Sabbath days.

Now among the few who refused to obey the commands of the king was that faithful Jew who had kept that little company from compromising with evil some two years before. And not one of that group had proved faithless to the stand taken that night. Some had been put to death and others had fled into the fastnesses of the mountains. But their leader still remained in Jerusalem, and now it became evident that he was the one upon whom the wrath and enmity of the officials of the city was centering. But that they might cause him all the suffering possible before putting him to death, they seized his wife and his infant son and put them both to death before one of the altars erected to the idols. All of which they forced this devout Jew to witness. There lay his wife in the awful agonies of the slow and torturing execution, while their little son was strung by the neck along the street with other infants much as bead pendants might be hung from a string.

"Wilt thou not yield now, seeing the sure fate which awaits you if you do not?" demanded the official. He was hoping that he would be able to get a recantation from the man, for he knew that if he did, this man's influence was so great that many others too would bow before the idols and conform to the requirements of the king.

But no, he would not, exclaiming with a voice which sounded above the groans of the dying and the shrill, bloodthirsty cries of the gathered multitudes:

"Death is sweet when it comes because of obedience to God's law, for every stroke of the executioner is but the added blow which opens wide the gates of heaven and gives entrance to the presence of God."

"Would you get others to stand with thee?" exclaimed the executioner, angrily. "Thy boasting tongue sounds queer in the presence of death," and with that he made one clean sweep with his sword and cut off the man's head. And the echo of the words came back as the man sank a lifeless heap upon the ground:

"Death is sweet when it comes because of obedience to God's law."

AT THE MOMENT.

Percy—Aw, are you interested in the "Coming Young Man?"

Kitty (with a yawn)—No; I am more interested in the going young man.

A Noble Love.

"Is the contract of dower properly drawn up, signed and witnessed?" asked the count of Castle-on-the-Bum.

"Yes," sighed Gladys Golden.

"There are no loopholes through which your wise lawyers of Philadelphia might creep?"

"Not a loophole," said the fair Gladys.

"And your father's holdings in Amalgamated Whalebone, American Cheese and Macaroni and Tin Soup-Plate 6s have not been affected by the recent depression?"

"No, dearest," answered Miss Golden, firmly.

"Then I love you," said the noble count; and two fond hearts beat as one.—Puck.

PAINT DURABILITY.

The first thought in painting should, of course, be durability—and durability means simply pure paint properly applied. Pure paint is pure white lead and linseed oil (with or without tinting material).

Some years ago the paint-buyer was likely to get adulterated or counterfeit white lead if he was not familiar with brands. To-day he may buy with perfect safety if he only makes sure that the Dutch Boy Painter trademark is on the packages of white lead that he buys. This trademark was adopted by National Lead Company to distinguish the pure white lead made by them from the worthless adulterated and fake goods. It is a guarantee as valuable to the house-owner as the education of a paint expert could be.

The Ever Changing Waist Line.

Consider the mental agility it takes to keep up with one's waist line. One goes to bed at night in the sweet assurance that it will be under the arms for the next two or three months at any rate, and awakes to learn from the headlines in the morning papers that waist line is positively at the knees. There is absolutely no use in prognosticating anything about it any longer. That the waist line occurred at the waist was an axiom accepted as unquestionably as that the earth revolves on its axis, but in these days of higher criticism is likely to be anywhere. It bloweth where it listeth.—Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, in American Magazine.

About Time.

Dorothy—Can I have some water to christen my doll, mamma?

Mother—Oh! no. I don't like you to play with water.

Dorothy—Well, can I have some wax to waxinate her? I'm sure she ought to have something done by now I've had her three months.—Windsor Magazine.

Miss Helen Bartrin, who has been here on a visit of a couple of weeks the guest of Misses Norvell and Elizabeth Bedinger, has returned to her home at Pittsburg, Pa.

In the guessing contest on the time that the clock stops at Robert Jones' store, Mrs. Sallie Percival won the first prize, $2, and Mrs. Bruce Allen second prize, $1.

Earl Williams and Miss Grace Hanna, of Rising Sun, and John Aylor and Misses Jane and Winnie Jones, of Landing, spent Saturday and Sunday here, guests at John C. Miller's.

Charles A. Slater, who has succeeded the Walton Mercantile Co. in the general merchandise business in the old Norman stand, has reopened the store with a greatly increased stock of goods.

Died—David Anderson, who is supposed to be the oldest colored man in the county, being in his 93d year, died at his home here August 25th. He leaves one daughter Mrs. Cynthia Hoard, of Walton.

The local Odd-Fellows' Lodge had a large and enthusiastic meeting last Saturday night, when Roy D. Stamler was initiated into the mysteries of the order. Bro. Stamler is a splendid acquisition to the membership.

Saturday, as they were returning from the Florence fair, the horse attached to the buggy driven by Hubert Maines and Miss Dora Percival, ran away and demolished the vehicle, and both the young people were painfully hurt, but no serious results are anticipated.

Rev. Wm. Clark, of Louisville, was the guest of Rev. D. T. Buck one day last week, and accompanied him to Corinth, Grant county, last Wednesday evening, where they began a protracted meeting at the Christian church of which Rev. Buck is the pastor.

Mrs. Jno. L. Vest and little son are spending a couple of weeks at her old home at Independence. Her father, W. T. Loomis, who is the deputy county clerk of Kenton county, is taking his vacation in Michigan and Mrs. Vest is caring for his official duties during his absence.

Mrs. Susan Coates, aged 73, mother of Henry Coates, who lives on the Mrs. Hind farm, near Richwood, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Oscar Ball, at Latonia, on August 26th. She was the widow of Manlius Coates, and her maiden name was Noell, and she was born and reared in Owen county. She was a member of Poplar Grove Baptist church, at which place the funeral services were conducted last Saturday evening by Rev. J. A. Lee.

Rev. Merit Owen, of Carthage, O., began a protracted meeting at the Walton Christian church last Sunday night, being invited to come here by the pastor, Rev. Edgar Riley, to assist him in the meeting. We all know what a splendid worker Bro. Riley is, and he has made no mistake in securing the services of Bro. Owen in the series of meetings as he is a very interesting and entertaining speaker and the attendance is increasing nightly because of the excellent sermons he is preaching.

Sunday night as Mrs. Sallie Percival was taking her guests, Mrs. Chauncey Shinkle and her daughter home from her farm, the spindle in one of the buggy wheels broke, precipitating the occupants of the vehicle to the ground, and all were painfully but not seriously hurt. The shafts were broken from the buggy and the horse ran away. The injured ladies were taken to their respective homes, Mrs. Shinkle and daughter boarding at Mrs. Alice Booth's, and Dr. Slater was called and administered the proper treatment.

Walton was very largely represented at the Florence fair last week, and all of her people came back with words of praise for the excellent management and the very attractive features of the fair. The universal opinion seems to be that it is the best and most satisfactory fair of any in this section. The attendance on the opening day was about 800 and the second day about 1,500, while Friday and Saturday being the most popular days the attendance was very large. Many old Boone county citizens were in evidence, coming from distant parts to renew the old friendships, and the fair was a veritable love feast. Among those we noticed as enjoying the renewal of old associations were Logan Gaines, of Carroll county; B. L. Stephens, of Ashland, Kansas; Bernard Southgate, of Covington; John B. Graves, of Georgetown; Milt Goodridge, of Oldham county; Henry Price, of Henry county. The show of saddle horses on Thursday was above the average and was greatly enjoyed. W. Lee Gaines won first premium on his High Vine colt and Judge T. J. Crowe secured second premium on his colt by High Vine. In the boys' riding ring David Castleman, the bright little son of Hon. D. E. Castleman, of Burlington, was awarded first premium, and Allen Gaines, the handsome son of W. Lee Gaines, received the second premium. With the exception of the very hot weather there was nothing to mar the success of the fair, and it sustained its reputation of being one of the greatest and best.

Lumber, Shingles and Tobacco Sticks.

Our large saw mill and lumber yard is now in full operation at Walton, Ky., near the L. & N. Custom Grinding.

The new flouring-mill firm of W. O. Rouse & Co., Walton, Ky., invite the patronage of the public to their enlarged facilities for handling exchange milling for which the most liberal conditions will be extended to all having wheat to grind. They also pay the highest market price for good, dry wheat. Call or write them, or telephone.

W. O. ROUSE & Co., Walton, Ky

AT THE FAIR.

Several of the finest horses in the State were exhibited during the week.

The stockholders will meet on the grounds this afternoon, and hold the annual election.

The attendance fell off about ten per cent, but the exhibition in the ring was very good.

J. J. Duncan's High Vine colt brought out a blue ribbon every time it went into the ring.

C. E. Williams, of Indiana, cut a considerable figure in Friday's show with his pair of handsome mule's.

Many a hearty hand shake was indulged in during the four days by old friends who had not met for a long time.

William Green was among the Rising Sunners who attended on Saturday, and he was busy advertising his big store.

Hubert Gaines' yearling Dandy Jim colt was the handsomest animal on the ground. Properly handled it will make a great animal.

The farmers being very busy with their tobacco, many of them heretofore regular attendants, failed to put in their appearance on either day.

The dining room, Chas. Garnett in charge, was the busiest place on the grounds. He fed people by the hundreds, and he gave them plenty.

The carpet of blue grass that covered the grounds, and the shade that shut out old sol's sweltering rays were greatly appreciated, especially on Friday and Saturday.

"The fair is going down!" The same declaration has been made by the knockers every year for twelve years, but the fair goes on just the same from year to year.

Master David Castleman soon had the entire crowd rooting for him when he appeared in the boys' riding ring. He was the smallest contestant, and all wanted to see him win, which he did in handsome style.

Two watches and chains, one gold and the other silver, were picked up on the grounds, and the owners can recover them by proving property. The owners should correspond with the secretary of the fair, N. E. Riddell, Burlington.

W. Lee Gaines, president of the High Vine Livestock Co., of Walton, was delighted with the success of the High Vine colts in the ring during the four days, they capturing about everything they went after, while their sire made a clean sweep at Carthage, Ohio, the week before.

The display in floral hall on Friday was judged by Misses E. and P. Verges and Miss Hellman, of Verges' Art Needle Work House, Cincinnati, and their work gave entire satisfaction, and there were no complaints of incompetency or partiality on the part of the judges heard from any of the numerous exhibitors.

BASE BALL.

The Burlington and Belleview ball teams will play their last league game of the season next Saturday afternoon at Burlington. Come out and see the game.

Hebron at Big Bone next Saturday afternoon.
